I try to cope with the programs, but the stupid commercials...

TOO MANY FAST, FRANTIC AND FRUSTRATING TV COMMERCIALS
by: Harry Preston

It started with MTV; then Hollywood caught on; then television picked up on it. Now even the news programs are doing it. No, I'm not referring to gut-wrenching violence or graphic sex.

I'm talking about television commercials today, too many of which have excessively fast cutting of scenes, blurred images, and a desperately demanding voice pitching the product. I am getting more than irritated with this assault on our senses, though I'll admit television viewers under forty may not feel the same way.

I hit forty quite a few years back, but there is no truth to the rumor that I covered the fall of the Alamo for NBC; however I did write the news on Channel 8 in the late '50's, back before tape, before sound bites, before local news programs became almost as frenzied as most commercials are today.

Many people of my generation are finding it difficult to endure the current crop of commercials without becoming confused and often visually disoriented. Ultimately, we reach for the OFF switch. Or, as I do, stick with PBS where, thankfully, there are no irritating commercials except, perhaps, the one plugging the Store of Knowledge, which always has me reaching for the MUTE button like I do with any and all commercials on any station.

Curious about my growing irritation and frequent visual inability to follow many commercials, I spoke with Michael Van De Kamer at Post-Op in Dallas, who is one of the top film editors in the country. I asked him why commercials are becoming so fast-paced.

Michael said that fast editing is usually required in commercials aimed at younger viewers because they have a regrettably short attention span.

"Children used to grow up reading," Michael said. "Today most of them grow up watching TV, or playing video games. A traditionally edited commercial would be dull and boring to younger viewers. It wouldn't grab their attention."

In my youth there was no television, for which I am eternally thankful. Which makes me wonder: Is this excessively fast editing technique the result of young people today having a shorter attention span, or is the short attention span the result of growing up watching MTV?

Dr. Gary Lefkof, a prominent Dallas psychiatrist, couldn't really say, but he does feel this situation stems simply from advertisers using the most effective methods to sell their product. In other words, the bottom line is the buck...whatever will grab the attention of potential customers. And if a product is aimed at the younger generation, then it's MTV time. Kids today need images to flash by with lightning speed to prevent boredom.

Are film editors to blame for this fast-cutting trend in film today? Not so, according to Michael van de Kamer. He explained that when a commercial is aimed at younger viewers, producers and ad agencies demand this fast editing otherwise the message will not get across, and the product won't sell.

But is mind-boggling editing of commercials really necessary to grab kids' attention? Recently I screened Bette Davis in "Now Voyager" for some young screen writing students of mine at Richland College. I had first watched this intensely moving film when I was in high school, and even today, it still has one reaching for the Kleenex. After the final fadeout, one young student (barely out of his teens)turned to me, wiped his tears away and shakily asked: "Why don't they make films like that anymore?"

I wonder, too. With traditional editing, a scene remains on the screen long enough for us to share the moment with the characters, to feel their emotions, to relate to their problems. If scenes flash by too fast, the impact of the scene tends to be lost rather than remain with us; and with a commercial, we are supposed to be impelled to rush out and buy the product, something I seldom do after having my sensibilities offended by an excessively fast-paced commercial filled with blurred images and narrated by a voice that is so desperate and demanding that it becomes annoying.

As a final thought, however, Dr. Lefkof had an amiably philosophical comment. He pointed out that with the hundreds of TV channels becoming available, viewers can always find something acceptable to watch.

I have a better suggestion: simply turn off the set, reach for a book and let your mind take you into a glorious world free from offensive commercials.

While I agree with your basic premise that there are fewer independent voices today, to be fair, your comment about radio sounding the same in all cities is not new - that predates Clear Channel and the others.  For one thing, many of the top stations used a handful of consultants, which resulted in stations sounding the same.  Plus the nomadic nature of working in this business added to it.

All,

I have a friend that is an advid adventure racer.  He is getting ready to outfit a small RV for a race later this year, and told me that he is getting XM installed because "they are going to offer a data channel so you can get Internet Access."

Sounds fishy to me...

Can anyone verify or deny?

Regards,

Steve

The world is becomming smaller. Everything is done quickly, copied, and everybody watches each other. Its not good. States watch what other states get away with in taxes and laws.
Executives copy what other executives try to get away with. People can't do anything on their own without seeing it in a movie first.

sure get a good deal out of America's taxpayers... :)

Um, probably not, in fact.  If that CD collection has orchestral music on it, the probability is high you're listening to music funded in whole or part by some "evul gubmint" somewhere in the world.  In fact, chances are good that if that 10 CD collection was bought at budget prices, you're listening to orchestras that were founded by communist governments (e.g., former eastern bloc nations).

I trust the military more than politicians to determine what weapons they need. Their decisions are based more on effective warfare. The politician is demanding pork to satisfy his district.

Does the Geneva Convention cover stupid commercials? How about boring commercials?

In Scandinavia you look forward to watching smart, funny commercials but in America they are sooooo boring...

I know some civilized countries (Canada, the whole Western Europe and others) that have government-funded, commercial-free classical radio plus many other arts. But of course, investing in the military is a wiser investment...

I cannot verify nor deny, but I smell the fish as well.

It doesn't seem technically possible.  They do not any significant bandwidth to dedicate to non-broadcast uses. What about 100 "digital" customers who wanted 56 kilobits at the same time - that's 5.6 megabits per second - about equal their whole program bandwidth, I suspect.

And XM/Sirius are one-way services.  You'd still need to use the phone for the you-to-them direction.

The rumor is probably based on XM's announcement that they will be sending digital weather forecasts.  But that would be only one low-speed channel.

Are you saying each channel is only 56kbit?  I thought both XM & Sirius were 64kbit?

Yea, they don't have enough bandwidth for decent stereo, much less datacasting.

Is that why XM sounds worse than FM?

I am compiling a list of shortwave stations that will post QSLs on receipt of an email, an email back is not so good.

Anyone know a good source of info?

Mike

You have a hell of a lot to learn. Start with getting a grip of the fundamentals, then get yourself this book: 'RF Circuit Design' by Chris Bowick (Newnes). It's about as close as you can get to a complete but concise manual on the subject.

Mono.  Fairly simple.  3 mic preamp boards.  2 amp boards I suspect are for monitor and cue circuits or maybe one is a phono pre amp.  Main output amp.  8 GIANT stepped attenuators and a large VU meter.  12ax7's and 6267 tubes on all the boards.  Transformers on all the boards too.
I'm told they went to solid state after awhile.  Patric

Element length is inversely proportional to frequency.

79/98=0.806.  So each element should be 0.806 times as long for 98MHz as it is for 79MHz - or about 19.5% shorter.

Lighten up a little, have you never had a class assignment in your life.
Lets at least cut the guy a little slack.
With a little help in the subject this novice may go on to become a great engineer, at least he's interested at this point.
Why are you so afaid that someone might give him information that is readily available online??

There are worse things he could be doing with his time !!!

Not sure about alarm bells at 2W., although I concede there's still a possibility for mischieve-making at that low power. What's actually on 90Mhz? Might give us a clue...

Tired of listening to terrestrial FM radios;
Tired of hearing the same songs over and over again on all FM radios;

If you are, just like me, then please try listening to STAR RADIO, a fresh new and different radio:
we search the whole planet (US, UK, Belgium, France, Spain, Italy, Germany...) for all the latest hits and play them all online 24h/24.

You can visit our website:
http://www.star-radio.net/

You can also see our playlist online where you will find songs you know, but also many many songs that are great but that you never heard of:
http://www.star-radio.net/playlist.htm

Please give your feedback in our Forums; let's make online radio the best place for Music!

Enjoy,
DJ Brian.

In article <bcipqd$qji$1@xuxa.iecc.com>, David Eduardo wrote:

> And Pacifica is in what, 4 markets?

Pacifica has to beg and so does NPR.

They are non-commercial non-profit (supposedly) broadcast entities. And I believe Pacifica is entirely listener funded (I know Pacifica's NYC o&o WBAI is).

What holds Pacifica back is the constant infighting between all these little factions, "collectives" and special-interest groups.

The most notable of these was a so-called "Christmas Coup" back in 2000 at WBAI where new managers abrubtly fired and locked out the morning show and a few other programs whose producers didn't agree with management's policies and aired this dirty laundry on the air.

The amateurish sound of a lot of their stations (mumbling and stumbling announcers, shuffling copy, dead air, crappy phones, dead equipment, etc.) also doesn't help.

WBAI-FM 99.5 in New York does make a healthy amount of money during their (annoying) pledge drives.

It's got to be a healthy amount -- they have to pay the rent for transmitter and antenna space at Empire, electricity for the transmitter and studio/office facility and also the rent at their homebase in a WALL STREET office tower in the Financial District in downtown Manhattan.

And let me tell YOU, rent is _NOT_ cheap here!!

Paul, 88-108 MHz is the U.S. FM broadcast band.

HOWEVER, he also said he wanted a PLL design.  You don't use a PLL design for a single-channel transmitter.  You use a PLL design for a synthesized transmitter, that can go ANYWHERE in the band.

I can think of a few interesting things I could do with a 2W synthesized transmitter.  Running a pirate radio station is only one of them.

John,

From where are you getting CM info?  If an announcer speaks in the center, for example, the information is captured in L and R channels, and when reconstituted forms the center information.

If a mike is wired "mono" (as many radio stations do) it simply would be feeding the same CM information to both left and right channels.

Dave

Oh yeah, I forgot, IF he is using a dummy load or an antenna short of required length such as for a low power "Carrier Current" type Radio station of an FM variety, he would be completely legal. He didn't really specify his end result other than learning. For all we know, he could end up on a frequency where no license is needed anyhow.. And if so, what is the big deal?  Two watts max FM, isn't going to do a hell of a lot. L.

I am speaking in engineering terms, where "Common Mode" refers to a signal, generally noise, either voltage or current, that is the same on both conductors coming from a microphone, or other source.  The "Common Mode" signal is canceled by the input circuitry of the microphone preamp, which amplifies only the differential signal between the two conductors, which is generated by the sound waves impinging on the diaphragm of the microphone.  As far as I know this is the traditional definition of a "Common Mode" signal.

It sounds like you are using the term "Common Mode" to refer to a signal that is the same in both channels of a stereophonic system.  This is a use of the term "Common Mode" that I was unfamiliar with.

This is reply to all responses. The Station I listen to that is part of the Salem network is KRLA AM in So.Cal. The call letters was ripped off by Salem from the 60's/70's top 40 station that was notorious. Pafica radio may be on the left, but the AM ban is dominated by the conservative talk formatt, so another point of veiw is refreashing. NPR has one problem, it is dull and boring. Satellite radio is going to take over. AM radio will be eventually taken over by High Schools, radio buffs and other amateur sources. The FCC is giving out licenses to anybody who has a 500 watts transmitter. AM radio is dead.

Company's have destroyed radio. Company's like Clear Channel, Citadel and so on. Ever since our not so great US government allowed companies like these to buy up all the radio station radio has gone corporate. Also Technology has done it to with software like the Scott system. Bring back automation. I was laid off from Citadel for what I was told they wanted to maximize there profits. At the location I was at they had 4 stations. They only wanted ONE person in the building per shift to watch all 4 stations unless there were remotes going on or something. They also have the full time jocks voice tracking on the weekends which gives part timers less of a chance to do an OnAir shift.

Yes they are Daven pots.  And yes it is a Simpson VU though I cannot tell what the model # is.  The mic preamp cards are sporting Foster Transformers also.

I'd like to know what the power supply consists of.  Is there a different unit that attaches?  There must be.  I can't see any rectification going on.  There is a card with a transformer and a couple multicap canisters on it.  1 canister from Sangamo with 2 20MFD caps and another canister from the same company with 3 caps, 2 x 15 MFD and 1 10MFD and that hooks to a small protected barrier strip on the rear panel.  It all looks like the place where the missing part of the power supply hooks in.  I can't believe that they would attach 110 volts to a barrier strip.  I'm guessing there is an external PS that has already split up the voltages and that is what hits the barrier strip.  I'm missing that part at the moment.  I'll have to go back and look for it.  It would be nice to know what I am looking for.

I love a mystery.  So far I haven't been able to find any schematics.  Patric

You can say that again! The flood gates have been opened long before this guy happened by. At least he admits to his actions and seems to understand any consequences. If he is using it to learn as he says, and isn't planning to cause RF interference, more power to him. At least he is honest about it.

Dave,

I am not sure if you are reffering that question to me Dem(the original post) or John who responded.
If it is towards me, then what you describe IS the signal i am talking about.
Also bear in mind that music itself(not just an announcer) has common content.

This end of the FM band is traditionally set aside for Schools.  The FCC explicitly describes some transmission modes as being dormitory oriented (although not at 2W). I am a longtime listener of KEXP/KCMU 90.3MHz. The KEXP is a vanity call linking it to Paul Allen's EMP music pavilion (more than a shrine to Jimmy Hendrix). KEXP is one of the leading internet broadcasters with community volunteer DJ's and nearly 30% of their operating revenues covered through internet pledges. In fact, the Seattle area consistently shows in the top 10 of popular internet broadcasters (3. KING classical, 6. KPLU jazz).

It was a long time ago but this console did have a separate power supply in a 7" high rack unit. I seem to remember that the speaker muting relays were in the power supply.

There have always been large corporations doing radio (e.g. RCA, which owned NBC).

The difference today is rather that consolidation has brought in its wake a reduction in the amount of competition in many markets; for instance, in Boston there used to be two CHR stations that were bitter rivals, but now they're both owned by Clear Channel. A longtime rivalry between rockers WBCN and WZLX ended when both were aquired by Infinity. And in New York, rival news stations WCBS and WINS are now co-owned. There has been a perceptible decrease in the level of excitement in radio with the end of rivalries like these. Radio has become less interesting, I think, and cheapened in the eyes of advertiser and listener alike.

>Also Technology has done it to with software like the Scott system.

Technology is a two-edged sword. Block Island, Rhode Island, a community of perhaps 800 year-round residents, has a full-time classical FM that would never be possible without the Scott System. And it makes money.

But I observe it is all too easy to get lazy and let machines run your radio station. Moreover, many folks in radio today aren't broadcasters, I think; their goal isn't to make money by running a broadcasting business but by speculating in radio properties or stock. So you have "regional vice presidents" and the like who are supposed to program dozens of stations at a time, which is ridiculous -- even a satellite-fed station needs a certain amount of human attention or it will sound slipshod, and its listeners (and advertisers!) will begin to perceive that nobody is minding the store.

There have always been large corporations doing radio (e.g. RCA, which owned NBC).

The difference today is rather that consolidation has brought in its wake a reduction in the amount of competition in many markets; for instance, in Boston there used to be two CHR stations that were bitter rivals, but now they're both owned by Clear Channel. A longtime rivalry between rockers WBCN and WZLX ended when both were aquired by Infinity. And in New York, rival news stations WCBS and WINS are now co-owned. There has been a perceptible decrease in the level of excitement in radio with the end of rivalries like these. Radio has become less interesting, I think, and cheapened in the eyes of advertiser and listener alike.

It was a long time ago but this console did have a separate power supply in a 7" high rack unit.  I seem to remember that the speaker muting relays were in the power supply.

For sale:

Partial interest in Paducah, KY full-time AM radio station (Joint venture, silly!)

The "Radio Crazy", IT'S back!

No "AM bashers" or negative "nabobs", please!

Full price a steal at $100,000. City population is about 26,000. Almost 5/8 wave tower yields 50 mile daytime coverage on car radios!

No real estate is included. You heard it first here, kiddies!

Active or inactive investors with at least $15,000 each are welcome. All investors would be on the board with full voting rights if desired.

I am NOT a broker, agent, shill, owner or part owner of this station!

All investment funds to be in the escrow account of a communications attorney. (I am not going to Brazil! HI!)

I am a semi-retired broadcast engineer. Last job in radio was Chief Engineer for a 5 KW full-time AM in New York City.

Tel: (478)741-1710 in Macon, GA.

Meyer Gottesman, W6GIV

In my haste, I improperly stated a thought. It should have read "or a short antenna (required length or less) such as for a low power "Carrier Current" type radio station......."

Any one familiar with CC stations should know the antenna has to be kept a certain maximum length to limit radiation of the signal. IF that requirement is met, then they are in compliance - with no license needed. If memory serves me correct, I believe it to be 10' maximum. Seems to me too, that the figure also included the feed line.

One more thing, what is the big deal if he was posting from a "free account". Big deal! Sorry, but that party said or appears to have done - nothing - to warrant a federal case or spark a major concern. As Gerry pointed out, illegal amps and radios are a dime a dozen. You can find them most anywhere - hamfest, internet, you name it. This person's research is peanuts compared to the real situation.

KGO radio appears to be taking the largest audience and the largest advertising revenue up here.

Salem's KFAX burns the same amount of ac power to produce its 50,000 watts as KGO does, but there are 1,000 watt stations which have larger audiences than does KFAX.

In those days there were only a few hundred stations in existence. But much of their programming came from RCA's NBC Red and NBC Blue (later spun off as ABC) Networks.

Man don't EVEN get me started on Salem. I worked there for 4.5 years in Dallas and began writing my own automation and call screener software. I gave the screener to KWRD to beta and they happily ran it for over 2 years. Got an email from an old radio buddy about 2 months ago telling me to go look at salemradiolabs.com website. When I get there I saw they had ripped EVERY idea that I implemented in my screener, but they GPL'd everything I had done on the automation system as well. Still have not found a lawyer to take the case, and I have a bunch of Salem employees willing to testify that the screener is exactly what I had done. I did send them a cease & desist which has gone unanswered. Looks like the little people get screwed again....

Perhaps not.  But there were also fewer stations total back then.
What percentage were owned by large corporations back in the pre-TV era vs. now?  And if there were a way to know what the listener percentages were back then, that might be an even more telling statistic...

Yes they were.  Everytime the microphone was switched into program, you could hear those relays click in the power supply in the bottom of the rack.

My experience with Salem is WRFD 880 kHz Columbus OH putting out a spurious signal on 760 kHz over WJR Detroit; a quick call to WRFD got a manager-woman who assured me that they check their frequency very carefully and there's nothing wrong with it - it's probably a harmonic, she said.  And no, I can't talk to an engineer.

If I had gotten an engineer he might have been interested that two times WOSU 820 kHz minus WRFD 880 kHz is 760 kHz.  They're both in Columbus.  If they even have an engineer.

Hi,

My name is Val Davis.  I am a voiceover guy.  I was the voice of the Capital Cities ABC Television station KTRK-TV in Houston. I was also "the voice" of the ABC Classic Rock format.

I do everything from institutional to comedy and character voices.  My wife is a great voice talent as well and she does some character voices.

I have a home studio and can deliver whatever you need on CD or via the internet.

Please visit my site at www.productionroom.com

Thanks

Val Davis

Basically "talentless", except for a few exceptions. Totally homogenized.
What I worry about is the removal of ANY proving ground for new talent. With voice tracking, and other satellite shows, there is nowhere for new folks to start out. What will it be like in 10 years??  Corporate could care less, as long as the bucks flow. Radio will never be as it was!

WCBN WILL DESTROY YOUR FEEBLE FORMATS

WCBN - 30 Years of Freeing Your Mind - Listen to us online!

WCBN is the University of Michigan student-run community freeform radio station in Ann Arbor, Michigan. We broadcast at 200 watts to the University and its surrounding communities from the basement of the Student Activities Building in downtown treetown. We have been broadcasting a genre-less overview of music, news, and public affairs for 30 years.

WCBN's musical format is freeform, with some specialty shows. Freeform involves all different kinds of music, including jazz, reggae, blues, hip-hop, country, rock, and just about everything else under the sun. Instead of telling our DJs what to play, we allow them to select their own recordings from our vast and unique library. It is their responsibility to mix together many different kinds of music in an intelligent fashion, and show links between musical genres.

I can't figure out how radio grew to be what it is today. After all, most station owners in the early days had no experience in radio. They were newspapers, battery companies and all sorts of self-interested companies who only wanted to promote their products. They even let their advertisers create their programming.

Let's try that today and see what happens.

Rich

I see a pattern here. Before you know it, syndication will appear and local will go away. I Bing Crosby hadn't taken a liking to the tape recorder we wouldn't be in the mess we're in.

Are you also the gritty voice for just about everything off the top of the Empire state Building - IE: "The Fan, Sports radio 66, WFAN,....Niew YOHHHRKK!"

Or is that a computer gen voice?  I hear it on tons of TV spots.

Five O&Os in New York, LA, San Francisco, Washington and Houston and affils in  around 50 markets, many of them college stations, with a few NPR stations.  Even though the affil count was taken off their web site, their network relationships went straight into the toilet during the last prolonged intercine warfare and they haven't really totally fixed everything yet.  One of their main problems is that the two "flagship" shows, "Democracy Now!" and the evening newscast (now known as "Free Speech Network News"), are not produced by Pacifica anymore and can be picked up from other sources, including the NPR-run Public Radio Satellite System.

(A quick explanation--in the mid-90s, when it was felt that Pacifica had to start sounding more professional by many people in charge there, there was an expanded lineup of national programming, with "Democracy Now!" as their "All Things Considered."  This, among other things, began the intercine warfare, as some of the local volunteer program producers and talent (the kind who put their KPFA time slot in their will) and some hardcore lefties, not liking the refocusing to national programming like NPR, started screaming "Censorship!" and "Purges!"  Although everyone involved said that they were keeping the politics the same and were just trying to emulate NPR's professionalism, the screams of righteous indignation continued and almost put Pacifica out of business.  And I guess now that the hardcores are back in charge, they'd rather be politically right than want to run a professional, listenable radio station.

Notice that the top 3 stations in San francisco's rolling averages are AM.

If being #1 makes you dead the afterlife has got to be driven by AM radio. Notice that WBZ, Boston, is also #1.

The #1 station in San Diego is KOGO, another AM.

Did I mention that 3 of the top 4 Chicago stations are AM?

How about the top 2 stations in detroit? WJR and WWJ?

Oh, have I forgotten KYW in Philadelphia?

Atlanta. WSB. Cincinatti. WLW. Denver. KOA. Hartford. WTIC.
Louisville. WHAS. Pittsburgh. KDKA. Sacramento. KFBK. Seattle. KIRO.
St Louis. KMOX.

I'm getting tired of making the list, but I think you probably get the point.

AM is dead. Long live AM.

Does anyone know about/remember a weekly radio show based on the comic book "The Fantastic Four" ? During the mid-70's it came on late weekend nights on a Indianapolis radio station, I use to stay up late to hear it. I've always wondered if there are recordings of this available. Anyone know ?

Thanks!    Alex

Hi.   Has anyone got a copy of the jingle that David Hamilton used to use for his "Tea at Three" spot on Radio 2 (or maybe Radio 1?) in the mid 1970's and early 80's?  Please contact me at andrew_ullmann@hotmail.com

Thanks

I don't have any recordings -- but I do remember hearing this on the radio, somewhere around 1975.  It ran for five minutes each weeknight, with a full week's worth of episodes telling a complete story.

In Seattle/Tacoma, it was on AOR-formatted KZOK 102.5.

According to Hugo Gernsback (1922), the Detroit Police Department had a station with the call letters KOP (on "286 meters", presumably 1050 kHz).

That's funny, I was thinking of that very jingle yesterday as I made a cup of tea just after three.  What makes it stick in my mind is how they fluffed the final line: "...when everthing stops for stea"   (with an 's')

Now that is SCARY! Just think, with a bit of careful editing, you could segue into "...ve wright in the afternoon".

VERY scary indeed!

Is that the one that starts with 'If you're sitting at home and

RADIO LAW: HAMS PETITION TO OUTLAW HI-FI SSB

On-air experimentation with so-called High Fidelity or Enhanced Single Sideband transmissions could be outlawed if thr FCC adopts a proposed rules change requested by two radio amateurs on opposite sides of the country. Amateur Radio Newsline's Paul Courson, WA3VJB, reports from the nations capital:

A petition for rulemaking was sent to the FCC and accepted by the agency May 27th. It was not immediately issued a Rulemaking Number so it was hard to find in the public record. However, Newsline has talked with two sources who have seen the proposal, and it calls for what many would consider severe bandwidth limitations on HF phone.

The petition asks for a federally mandated bandwidth limit of 2.8 kilohertz for SSB, well below the extended bandwidth needed for what has been called enhanced audio.

One of the two hams who submitted the petition told the FCC they are motivated by interference problems caused by two groups of single sideband operators. These groups are portrayed by the petitioners as, in both cases, having cast aside traditional voluntary limits on bandwidth of roughly three kilohertz. The petition therefore asks that these voluntary limits be made mandatory to provide a clear enforcement mechanism for regulators.

The petitioners, Michael Lonneke W0YR of Virginia, and Melvin Ladisky W6FDR of California, said hams from one of the groups come on during radio contests, and are found tweaking their transmitters to splatter purposely to provide elbowroom on a very crowded band. The two men characterize the other group as those who experiment with high-fidelity audio, apparently trying to replicate the sound of FM Broadcast stations.

Newsline has recently reported on advisory letters sent out by FCC Enforcement Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, who wrote to several members of the enhanced SSB group telling them the agency had received interference complaints. The letters did not validate nor dispute the complaints, but warned the stations that if such complaints continued, the unresolved friction could trigger petitions for rulemaking.  One such petition is now at hand.

A Newsline reporter spoke with Lonneke, who declined to provide a copy of his petition for this report. He said he and Ladisky hold the same views on the matter of excessive bandwidth causing interference, and that they teamed up on the petition to add strength to their call for regulatory intervention. Lonneke declined further comment, and said the petition will speak for itself if the FCC chooses to assign it a rulemaking number and put it to public comment.

Members of the enhanced SSB group have told Newsline they believe their experimentation with improved audio is totally in line with the spirit of ham radio, and thet when conducted under appropriate conditions, is every bit as justified in bandwidth consumption as any other spectrum-intensive activity, including contesting. But the FCC's Hollingsworth, reacting to such comments, disagreed, suggesting the mode of SSB was commissioned for the amateur service as a spectrum conservation mode, counter to the idea of high-fidelity audio and the bandwidth it requires.

Hollingsworth could not be reached to comment on the proposed Petition, and another FCC official declined to comment.

The petition also mentions the legacy mode of AM, and said it, quote, does not create the same problems that the burgeoning use of so-called 'Hi-Fi Single Sideband' creates. Nonetheless, the petition asks the FCC to impose a 5.6 kilohertz bandwith limitation on AM, with the restrictions asked for on all HF allocations below 28.8 megahertz.

Previous regulatory proposals based on bandwidth have failed, including Docket 20777 from the mid 1970s. The conclusion then was that having loosely-defined technical standards allowed the greatest range of experimentation in ham radio, as long as such signals are clean. Indeed, many present-day violations of splatter, overdriven amplifiers, and poorly administered audio lashups can already trigger enforcement action under existing FCC rules governing the purity of signal.

Reporting for Newsline, Paul Courson, WA3VJB, in Washington

As we go to air, the ten page petition by W0YR and W6FDR has not been been assigned a Rule Making number designation.  More on this story in future amateur Radio Newsline reports.  (ARNewsline™, W5YI)

ON THE AIR:  PERTH HAMS JAMMED OFF 2.4 GHZ

A cloud of radio frequency interference has settled in on the 2 point 4 Gigahertz in the city of Perth Australia.  For many hams it is making satellite operations impossible.  Felix Scerri, VK4FUQ, reports from the city of Ingham – down under:

You may not hear many VK6 hams on AO40 for a while. Many are suffering from interference from some form of wide band data transmission centred on 2.4GHz. The signal covers much of the Perth metro area and is very strong. So strong in fact that it does not matter where you beam you can still hear it - mainly from reflections.

The signal, which runs continuously, sounds like a 100Hz buzzing sound and has a bandwidth of about MHz. Looking at the signal on a spectrum analyzer it has a flat top and very steep sides. The signal started about 6 weeks ago and one suggestion is that it might be an image response of S band down converters to the 2.1GHz G3 mobile phone service that have just started tests.

At airtime, the interference is still there and hams in Perth are wondering what to do to make the problem, go away. (Q-News)

WRC 2003: AN UPDATE

Radio regulators from around the world are still gathered in Geneva Switzerland trying to work out numerous spectrum issues including some dealing with Amateur Radio. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, is here with the latest:

The International Telecommunication Union's 2003 World Radiocommunication Conference got under way June 9th in Geneva Switzerland. Amateur Radio is only a small part of the conference which is trying to complete work on more than 40 agenda items.

Amateur Radio is but a small part of the conference, which is trying to complete work on more than 40 agenda items. Three are especially important to us: realignment of 7 MHz allocations (agenda item 1.23), revision of the regulations governing the amateur and amateur-satellite services (agenda item 1.7), and consideration of an allocation for satellite-borne synthetic aperture radars (SARs) in the 70-cm band (agenda item 1.38).

Two other agenda items that could potentially have a great impact are the drafting of an agenda for the next WRC scheduled for 2007 (agenda item 7.2) and the revision of footnotes to the Table of Frequency Allocations (agenda item 1.1). A member of the IARU core team has been assigned to follow each of these five items, with the most focus being on 7 MHz.

It is the intention of the IARU core team to send timely and accurate reports of final decisions reached on Amateur Radio issues. It is important to remember that nothing is final until the second reading of a document in the Plenary, which in the case of controversial issues will not take place until the final week of the conference, 30 June to 4 July.

IN THE MEDIA: HAM RADIO HIGHLIGHTED ON WBUR RADIO

Ham radio was the featured guest when WBUR radio in Boston Massachusettes devoted its show titled "The Connection" to the hobby on Thursday, June 12th. Hosted by Dick Gordon, the show's theme was that ham radio is alive and vital with close to two-and-a-half million hams world wide still consider ham radio their preferred way to fly.

The program was also centered around the new book titled "Hello World: A Life in Ham Radio" by Danny Gregory and Paul Sahre. A book based on the collection of QSL cards of silent key W2OJW. And while neither of the authors was there, Bob Hopkins, WB2UDC was. Hoskins is Director of the Computer Center at Cooper Union University in New York and played a key role in the books development:

Hopkins: "Hello World is a wonderful book, and where I work over at Cooper Union I have collegues that do many things. We have an engineering school, an art school and an arcetecture school. Because of the archecture aspect, a collegue of mine who works at the Princeton Archecture Press as well as Cooper Union contacted me and said that he had a couple of friends who were thinking of putting together a book on ham radio post cards and wanted to do the graphic design and would I be interested in having a conversation with them. I said -- oh sure -- fine -- bring them in. These guys came in with these fabulous cards dating back to 1927 up to the present."

Also appearing on the program were were Moody Law, WQ6I in Claremont California, Joe Leto, W0ANT from Ankeny Iowa, and Harry Han, BG4AGY, in Shanghai. Each spoke on the way ham radio has affected their personal lives and those around them.

Even though its well over a week since the perogram aired, it is archived as a Real Audio stream at the WBUR website. To hear it take your web browser to http://www.theconnection.org/shows/2003/06/20030612_b_main.asp

Our thanks to Daron Manoogian who is the Manager of National Program Marketing at WBUR for permission to use the audio you heard in this report. (K1TW)

RADIO LAW: NY HAM CITED UNDER STATE SCANNER LAW

A New York ham has been cited for having radio gear in his car even though the state law governing scanner radios exempts licensed Amateur Radio operators. On May 31st Richard C. Lalone II, KC5GAX, of Calcium, says that he was stopped while driving well under the posted speed limit by a New York State Trooper and given a ticket for having Icom IC 1500 and IC 706 radios in his vehicle.

Lalone says via the qrz.com website that he did try to explain that that he was an Amateur Radio Operator and even provided his Amateur license for the officer’s review. Apparently, this was not good enough and the ticket was issued.

Lalone appeared in court on June 10th to answer the summons. At that time he approached the judge with both his license and a copy of New York Traffic Law 397 a copy of PR Docket 91-36. But the Court Recorder immediately took the documentation from the judge and returned it to KC5GAX. The judge then conferred with the Court Recorder after which he told Lalone that he was entering a plea of innocent for him. He then instructed Lalone to seek an attorney and be present in court July 9th. They court then offered KC5GAX paperwork to obtain a public defender, and returned the citation with the new court date.

Its not clear as to what will transpire on July 9th. Lalone’s posting did not state if this was a trial date or other type of preliminary hearing. If he is convicted of violating New York’s scanner control law Lalone faces a fine of $1000, 6 months in jail, or both. (W6EM, qrz.com)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC WRITES PART 15 DEVICE USERS ABOUT ALLEGED INTERFERENCE TO AMATEUR RADIO

Turning to enforcement issues, the FCC has written two Northern Virginia residents to follow up on complaints from a local amateur. A ham who alleges that he's on the receiving end of harmful interference from telephone devices with the capability to support multiple cordless remotes. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

According to the ARRL Letter both units interfereing with Bernie Keiser, W4SW, of Vienna, Virginia, are unlicensed Part 15 consumer electronics made by a well-known manufacturer. In separate June 2nd letters to the two users, the FCC’s Sharon Bowers pointed out that if their units are the cause of harmful interference to a licensed spectrum user, they are responsible for solving the problem. Also, that the operator of the device is responsible for correcting the interference or ceasing operation whenever such interference occurs.

Bowers is the deputy chief of the Consumer Inquiries and Complaint Division of the FCC's Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau. She explained in her letters that the equipment was classified as an intentional radiator and noted that harmful interference to a licensed radio service from such a device is a violation of FCC rules. She advised the consumers that the alleged harmful interference must be corrected before they may use the devices legally. She suggested they contact the manufacturer or retailer of the equipment to see if they'd either allow them to return them or exchange them for devices that don't cause interference.

The interference to W4SW’s ham radio operation took the form of broadband noise from 2400 to 2450 Mhz. This made it it difficult for him to hear the AO-40 downlink and beacon in the 2.4 Ghz band.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

The complaints against the two Vienna Virginia consumers represent a bit of a turnabout from the typical interference scenario. Usually its the ham who generates complaints of RFI to consumer electronic gear and hears from the FCC. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM ACCUSED OF FALSE DISTRESS CALLS ORDERED OFF THE AIR

A California ham has lost his right to operate an Amateur Radio station. This, based on allegations by the FCC that he may have been the source of a number of phony distress calls made by radio.

On June 3rd the agency’s Riley Hollingsworth notified Michael V. Swift, the now former KG6QOB to inform him that his license had been cancelled. This, based on evidence that the San Ramon ham had made numerous false distress calls on Marine Channels 16 and 22A.

In his letter Hollingsworth said that in view of the agency’s action that Swift no longer has authority to operate Amateur Radio transmitting equipment. He also warned that any continued on-air operation by Swift could lead to a fine or criminal prosecution. (FCC, RAIN)

SPECTRUM REALLOCATION: FCC PROPOSES UNLICENSED DEVICES IN THE 5 GHZ BAND

Still with regulatory matters, the FCC has proposed making 5.47 to 5.725 Gigahertz available to National Information Infrastructure devices, including Radio Local Area Networks, on an unlicensed basis. If adopted, this plan will increase the spectrum available to license-free devices in the 5 GHz region by nearly 80%.

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: THE TRUE UNIVERSAL REMOTE

A true universal remote unit that will literally help to control your entire lifestyle is now under development.  Researchers on the project say that the all-in-one controller that would choreograph not just home entertainment systems but also intelligent appliances all around the house.

Maya Designs Inc. in cooperation with Pennsylvania's Carnegie Mellon University has created a prototype based on a Compaq iPAQ portable digital assistant.  The experimental handheld has so far been used to control two lamps, a fan and a stereo with a five-CD changer.  Researchers say that more is on the way once standardization of remote control codes for various appliances is achieved.

The Consumer Electronics Association is working on this aspect of the problem. It estimates the average household has at least four remote control units.  It also understand why the consumer electronics industry considers a universal remote an important device for the marketplace.  (Science Today)

RADIO AND SPACE:  MOUNTAIN PEAK NAMED IN HONOR OF ILL FATED COLUMBIA CREW

A Colorado mountain peak has been named Columbia Point.  This, in honor of the seven astronauts who died when the space shuttle Columbia broke up over Texas on Februay 1st.

The peak on Kit Carson Mountain in the Sangre de Cristo Range near Colorado Springs is close to the 14,081-foot Challenger Point.  That peak was named in honor of the seven crew members who died in the Challenger space shuttle explosion in 1986.  The newly cvhristened Columbia Point also is roughly 14,000 feet.  (ANS)

INTERNATIONAL - EUROPE:  PMR446 MEANS FUN

>From a listener in Europe comes word of a new communications network called PMR446.  This is a licence free 500 milliwatt personal mobile radio service that is quite similar to the United States Family Radio Service with one big difference.  The pan-Eueropean service permits is users to connect their radio gear to the Internet using personal computers and software interfaces.  The software of choice is eQSO and with it Eueropean experimenters have created a network of linked rf-gateways.

On the R-F side, the radio gear is limited to flea power and built-in antennas, but thanks to gateway linking PMR 446 is quickly developing into quite a hobby thats bringinging together hams and non hams alike.  In fact, it even has its own home in cyberspace at www.446user.co.uk.  Drop by and have a look at what's happening on the other side of the Atlantic.  (PMR446 Users Group)

INTERNATIONAL - HOLLAND:  RADIO NETHERLANDS TARGETED BY PUBLIC BROADCASTER

Radio Netherlands management have reacted angrily to a recent edition of the Dutch domestic current affairs TV programme Nova. A story reported on Nova said that drastic budget cuts of up to 85% was in the offering for Radio Netherlands, and as a result everything except broadcasts to the Netherlands Antilles and Surinam would be scrapped.

According to Radio Netherlands, the erroneous item was based on a leaked copy of a report into the efficiency of public broadcasting that was jointly commissioned by the Dutch Ministry of Culture and the broadcasters themselves. Nova seized on one section of the report and interviewed a representative of the Dutch Association of Journalists, who said this would effectively mean the end of Radio Netherlands.

But Radio Netherlands says that the report was not a call to action. Rather, its purpose of the report was to identify multiple scenarios where cost savings could be made. The example quoted by Nova was just one. The Hilversum based station also noted that decisions on the mission of Radio Netherlands are made by politicians in The Hague, not by other public broadcasters or the authors of a commissioned report. THAT FINAL ITEM: N6ZE’S CROSS-COUNTRY ROVING ODYSSEY

And finally this week, the story of Peter Heins, N6ZE, who may now hold the record for a QRP Rover in the June ARRL VHF QSO Party. In less than two days, Pete managed to rove coast-to-coast, from Grid Square FN-20 to CN-87. Thats a distance of 2754 miles and he operated 6 and 2 meter SSB from each location. Here’s how he did it.

>From 1400 to 14:45 E-D-T on Saturday June 14th, Pete was on the air from park bench overlooking Hudson River at Weehawken New Jersey. From there he even managed to work a station in grid EL-86 thru the tremendous E skip that was present at the time.

A bit more operating from a hotel room in midtown Manhattan followed until 15:30 Eastern Daylight Time. Then a quick drive out to the airport where Pete, who is a commercial airline pilot, traded his ham radio microphone and key for the co-pilots seat of a Boeing jetliner. He then spent the next several hours flying to Salt Lake City Utah.

During the layover, Pete rented a car, unpacked his FT-690 and IC-202 and took to the airwaves. From 8:45 to 15:30 Mountain Daylight Time hN-6-Zed-E roved through Grids DN30, 31, 40 and 41 operating both 6 and 2 meters.

He then repacked the gear, got back in the plane and flew it another 689 miles on to Seattle. Thanks to another hours time change, Pete was back on the air around 19:52 Pacific Daylight Time in Grid CN-87 from the airport ramp making two QSO’s. His last contact took place at 19:59 Pacific Daylight Tine. That was just 1 minute before end of contest.

His totals for the contest period: On 6 meters he had 16 QSO’s, 16 QSO points and 8 multipliers. 2 meters yielded 24 QSO’s, 24 QSO points and 9 multipliers for a grand total of 960 points.

In his posting to the VHF Reflector, Pete put out a special thank you to the hams in the Salt Lake City area who provided lots of information for operating sites in 4 grids that helped to make his cross country VHF roving odyssey, complete. (ARNewsline™, N6ZE)

WCBN WILL DESTROY YOUR FEEBLE FORMATS

WCBN - 30 Years of Freeing Your Mind - Listen to us online!

WCBN is the University of Michigan student-run community freeform radio station in Ann Arbor, Michigan. We broadcast at 200 watts to the University and its surrounding communities from the basement of the Student Activities Building in downtown treetown. We have been broadcasting a genre-less overview of music, news, and public affairs for 30 years.

WCBN's musical format is freeform, with some specialty shows. Freeform involves all different kinds of music, including jazz, reggae, blues, hip-hop, country, rock, and just about everything else under the sun. Instead of telling our DJs what to play, we allow them to select their own recordings from our vast and unique library. It is their responsibility to mix together many different kinds of music in an intelligent fashion, and show links between musical genres.

What people have suspected for years, Matt Drudge confirmed recently in that he is seeking to heal his sexual brokeness by becoming ex-gay through Roy Master's Christian meditation excercise.

>From Radar Magazine:

PAGLIA: You have no religious affiliation?

DRUDGE: You could probably call me a �new-age Jew. I'm really into meditation. I have been meditating since I was five years old. I love reading Jesus. I am open to a lot of different things. Again, it's a formula for my personal self that I've come up with. I don't go to shul, I don't go to church every Sunday. But the older I get, the closer I feel to a creator.

PAGLIA: What do you mean by meditating?

DRUDGE: I do exercises every day to clear my mind. Third-eye stuff.

PAGLIA: Transcendental meditation? Where did you learn it?

DRUDGE: I'm self-taught.

To anyone who had been involved with Roy Masters and the Foundation of Human Understanding, what Matt is describing in his cryptic fashion is clearly the excercise developed by Roy. Roy used to be a frequent guest on Matt's FOXNews TV show and has clearly influenced him to overcome his same-sex desires. If Drudge could only have the courage to be more open and honest about this, it might help publicize and garner respect for the other ex-gay ministries out there. We wish him success in his transformation and joint venture with Mr. Masters, Michael Savage, and TRN.

Most great art in history has been government or church funded.  High art is almost by definition not commercial, just as is speculative science, which also requires government funding.  The market sometimes has synergistic effects with government funded art, but virtually all of what it creates on its own is crap.  Unfortunately, we live in times where elitism, not to mention anything that differs from laissez faire capitalism, is politically incorrect.  Anyone who is familiar with modern America can see the ravages of market driven "culture".

I think it's easy for any self-hating person to find "salvation" in just about anything, from religion to dog shows.  Anything that takes them away from their self-loathing for a few months is something they see as beneficial.

Does this diversion solve anything?  Nope.  After the fix wears off, they need another fix.  It's not enough to go to one dog show, they need another and another.  Pretty soon they're in the dog grooming business.  And it goes on from there, always trying to mask the loneliness and self-hate with yet another diversion.

But ultimately, a person has to live with him/herself.  And unless a person truly accepts themself for who s/he is, they will never be happy.

And, in my view, if you don't want to pay for it, leave the country

For sale:

(The "Radio Crazy"....it's back!)

Partial ownership in full-time 1 KW AM in Quitman, Georgia. Near Valdosta. Close to Florida border. Callsign is WSFB. Please DO NOT CONTACT the station!!

1490 KHz. On the air since the laste 50s of the last century (and the last millenium, you fruitloop!)

Joint venture (For this venture, you end up in the joint!) Hi!! Just teasing.

Active or inactive investors with at least $10,000 each are welcome. No individual may own more than 49 percent and that includes me.

"AM bashers" and/or other "negative nabobs" are not welcome. If you think "AM is dead" go flame somebody else and you are welcome to pay a million bux for a class "A" FM in Wyoming. (Yes, there is one going for $950,000 in a town of less than 2,000. Shades of

Tel: (478)741-1710.

The "Radio Crazy" ain't THAT crazy. Former Chief Engineer, AM in NYC. Past President and founder of an FM in San Francisco on the air since 1973. Ham since 1950.

I trust that High Art refers to the state that most artists are in when they compose or fashion it.

http://simsim.rug.ac.be/staff/rob/Include2001/intro4.html
"Ways of seeing are also culturally determined processes.

Ways of seeing modern art, for example- are guided by mental and cultural models, models that are framed in stories. One particular story on ways of seeing modern art is that 'Le Bateau', a painting by Henri Matisse, was exposed upside-down for forty-seven days by the New York Museum of Modern Art in 1961:"

Fine example of art follows.
http://209.11.144.65/eldritchpress/el/mp/m47.jpg

http://www.techno-impressionist.com/evolve.htm
Abstract art reached a zenith towards the middle of the 20th Century when artists were first able to produce paintings that could be accidentally hung upside down.

http://www.techno-impressionist.com/quotes05.htm
"Paintings that can be accidentally hung upside down are a unique accomplishment of 20th Century artists."

I'm looking forward to public funding of gun ranges, car races, etc. No reason that public money should go to something that benefits so few. Why not branch out, start using that money for something the common Joe or Jane goes for? Besides, artists generally have such a myopic political structure, they are pro-abortion, anti-gun, democrat, communist, anti-Christian, etc.

Am I the only one around here who finds Roy Masters and his right wing cult dangerous and scary.  This guy has been working for years to get his new age right wing agenda before the American public and now he has found a way through Savage, Drudge, Dornan and others to do it sereptitiously.  How come more people aren't wise to this and worried about it?

The ex-gay thing is a bit of a stretch from reading the article, and Roy Masters isn't mentioned. I did find this:

http://makeashorterlink.com/?S4E022705

I never knew there was an alt.religion.roy-masters newsgroup, then again, is Roy Masters about religion or mind control...

Roy seeks out weak minded people because they are easy to turn into Roy-bots. Scary? You bet. The fact that he owns more "legit" outlets like Weiner et all is every scarier.

I think we're not worried because cults like this have never worked. I think this is the cult that had two "cured" men as spokespeople who ended up as lovers.  It's not a new revelation that Savage and Dornan are homophobes and make their livings finding groups they can attack and make other homophobes feel validated in their hate. They often do the same with Immigrants, the poor and any other group that society in general looks down on. Hopefully, criminal corporate executives will join those ranks.

As you well know, a specific radio show reaches a tiny portion of the population. Even Limbaugh is unknown or unheard by the vast majority of the population. The last figures I saw had 96% of the population not listening. He still has a huge audience because he's entertaining and isn't driven by a mission. I don't put any ot these characters in Rush's league.

Dornan has a tiny audience and isn't really a factor. He's a pseudo macho caricature that has never been taken seriously. He could be a character in "Dr. Strangelove." Savage does a bit better but has recently lost two huge markets that will cause his ratings to drop dramatically - San Francisco and New York. Even his San Francisco replacement (probably a rimshot) will never come close to KSFO. There's no place for him to go in New York. Someone who feasts on free speech then sues those who challenge him makes himself look awfully foolish.

I think even the rightest of the right wing see these characters as buffoons and don't take them seriously. The shows are entertainment.

Once they link up with "missions" not driven by the audience, they waste away.

I also think it's good for the population, in general, to know these cults exist. It makes it easier to read the hidden agendas.

If that's what it is why has every culture that has been at war frantically tried to save its artwork? Why were people so concerned that the museum in Bhagdad had been looted before they found the real stuff in storage?

Why has classical music been viable for centuries? The same with fine art? It shows the heights mankind can achieve and is every bit as important as the scientific accomplishments we've made.

It's clear from your posts you're not an art lover and culture belongs in a yogurt container. Since more people attend cultural events than sports I have to assume great artistic accomplishments still have their place in the 21st century.

For that I'll be eternally grateful.

Isn't that the cult that had two men as spokesmen who later became lovers?

No, you're thinking of mass market rock "musicians".

Name five classical musicians, most of whom are and have been funded by the "evul gumbint" or by the church, who died of drug overdoses.

At the following URL you will find a table of "rock deaths" compiled by a rock "music" fan:

http://rockdeaths.mybravenet.com/rdl/rlistN.html

It lists the causes of death of what appears to be a comprehensive list of dead rock stars, by name, date, cause, etc.  Last I checked, of the 556 deaths listed on this page:

60 are due to Drugs (10.8%)
50 are suicides (9%)
31 are homicides (5.6%)
12 are due to alcohol (2.2%)

All in all, over 1/4 of the rock stars listed died violently or via some form of substance abuse (not including lung cancer, btw).  Over 1 in 5 die by their own hand (suicide or substance abuse).

I invite you to compile a similar list of deaths of classical musicians. The table covers 39 years of rock history.  If you wish, you may draw your data from the last 400 years of classical history, over ten times the scope of the above table.

Have fun.

That's what mass market "culture" produces.

> I'm looking forward to public funding of gun ranges, car races, etc.

Of course you are, since you're apparently a brain-dead, talk-radio brainwashed chimp.

When large sums are disbursed for opera or similar minority interests, there is always a fallback to incontestable sentiments regarding the value of high culture and performance, the importance of maintaining standards of a kind which are necessarily elitist, and the quasi-religious qualities of great music, painting, and poetry. However, even the best of opera remains an elite enjoyment.

In spending on the arts there is a kind of organised governmental philanthropy, in the form of handouts to aspiring artists, performers and organizations dedicated to particular types of cultural activity. Official philanthropy tends to be captured by movements and fashions, the ruling orthodoxies of the political class and the bureaucracies which are set up to administer them produce a culture of mediocrity.  To expect organised governmental philanthropy to find genius or even outstanding quality is as unlikely as to expect the well-known room full of monkeys with keyboards to write the works of Shakespeare.

No, but what are we going to do about it? He's got money and followers. He owns a talkradio network. He and his followers own the town of Cave Junction and have been moving in on Medford for some time. But, what do you do about it?

I was once driving in LA about 15 years ago and heard a woman call in to his show, then originating from KIEV in Glendale. The woman was distraught about her failed relationship, her daughter on drugs, and whatnot. She was talking about killing herself. Roy Masters actually told her that she should kill herself because she was a failure as a wife, since she failed at her duty to satisfy her husband and take care of her family.

I phoned the local police (I forget if it was Glendale or LA), and told them the story. They acted as if they heard this kind of stuff all the time from the Masters program and didn't take any of it seriously.

But once again, the question, what can anyone do? Since they're not attempting to violate the tax laws or attack the government, the government isn't going to do anything against them. It doesn't matter to the authorities if people give all their money to him. It doesn't matter to them if people's lives are ruined.

Actually, no.  It was the two FOUNDERS of "ex-gay" group Exodus Intl, who one day awoke from their own brainwashing and became partners.
Incidentally, this is the same Exodus Intl that is often represented on virtually any Salem broadcast that focuses on homosexuality.  They are also the same folks that like to take out full page ads in the NY Times, Washington Post, LA Times, etc to promote their "love the sinner, hate the sin" concept.  If they have to advertise that aggressively, is it really worth buying?  Of course, I say the same thing about organized religion...

As many of you may be aware, not much has been done with the Airwaves.com site since Bill Pfeiffers death in 1999.  I was very fortunate to have been a close friend to Bill.  It was troubling to me to see that his site (which was very important to him) had not been updated for a few years.  Long story short, I contacted John Levine who has been hosting and managing Airwaves.com issues since Patrick Townson fell into bad health in 2000.  I told John that I wanted to redesign Airwaves.com and restore functionality and resources that were there before.  He and Patrick gave me their blessings and I began work on the site a little over a month ago.

The new site is up.  You can browse through the Airwaves Digest Archives which currently contains digests from Dec 1997 through Nov, 1999.  I hope to get more archives up as we find them. You can also search these articles for keywords like LPFM or Lujack or whatever.

The FCC Database search is also up.  I have the entire FCC Database on the system but am only displaying a limited number of fields from that database.  If you would like to see more info displayed or different search criteria, let me know.

There is also a working Radio Classifieds.  It is database driven as well and only shows ads that have been posted in the last 30 days.

Soon there will be a radio links page and a page that contains the Bill Pfeiffer memorial. This will have the Real Audio file of Bill's funeral as well as stories about Bill.

I hope you like the site, but more importantly I hope you use the site.  Is is for broadcasters, by broadcasters in memory of a real broadcaster.

Thanks

Val Davis

Sheesh, that sounds like a personals ad, but it's not!

When I was overnight at KGY-AM Olympia, WA. I would listen, over the offair monitor( used for the Mariner games)  to Dave Dolacky on KIRO. Occasionally, I would call and we would chat over everything, inbetween the breaks.

I know Dave's still about the Emerald City, and I would love to have at least an e-mail or snail mail address to pass along regards from myself and a mutual friend.

Thanks for any help here.

I ordered stuff from them worth �152. Payed with my VISA and the transaction was quick. Few days later I sent them a mail correcting my order but got no reply. Few days more and I sent to their second mail...no replay! now it's been 15 days and I have heard nothing from them! What should I do?? I thought Veronica FM was a reliable company! :(

The average Zimbabwean (whatever the spelling) gets better quality programming from state-financed Voice of America than the average American gets from commercial radio. Unless, of course, you enjoy the stupid strident commercials...

According to reports on Dutch media sites, the radio ship MV Communicator was moved from her old mooring in the Pampushaven near Almere yesterday afternoon. The vessel is now said to be in the harbour of the Dutch fishing port of IJmuiden. Volunteers had earlier carried out repairs on the ship to plug leaks in the hull. The new owner of the ship says he plans to take her across the North Sea to Essex in the UK, where she will be re-fitted as a working offshore radio ship.

Are there any fans out there that have Chick Hearn's broadcasts from the 1980s?  I'm looking for the 1985, 1987, and 1988 Finals in particular.  I know some people have his radio broadcasts saved over the years and might have even dubbed them into VHS.

Please email me if you have these games.

Thanks,

So now you're just automatically crossposting everything to rec.music.classical, even when there's no reason to do so at all?

I feel sad for people who can't go into a museum and enjoy a sense of awe at the things humanity has accomplished. Since I can't answer the question "why are we here," I feel some comfort in knowing what we've done while we've been here. even if it's nothing more than curiosity about how the wheel came to be invented.

Much of what we do has its roots in Greek, Roman and Middle Eastern cultures. Frankly, I care much less about how the latest Nike running shoe was designed than I do about how social rules came to be what they are.

Without culture, we'd be like most recent graduates of our public school sysms

Does anyone know of, or have a copy of the tanner spirit music. I'm looking to get a re-sing of the jingle and can't find anyone who has, or knows where the original music is. There is a sung version on the Ken R CD, that comes with his book. I contacted TM Century but they don't have the original. So if anyone has or knows where the Tanner Spirit original jingle master is, can they let me know or give me any contacts who may know anything about Tanner Spirit.

What bothers me is that lying to suspects and altering evidence is standard police behavior. Neither police nor courts consider it wrong, let alone illegal, to offer a suspect a plea bargain then tell him/her that they have witnesses that don't exist, that he failed a lie detector test he actually passed, or even show him doctored pictures to convince him to plead guilty, whether he is or not; never mind the real perp escapes. But if you lie it's obstruction of justice.

What you think, to name just an example, of the ever present talk shows where they degrade human beings into violent puppets?

British television is much better both because they have a more enlightened audience and because they don't suffer the pressure from the "ratings". The only way to see culture take preference over money is to have an INDEPENDENT MEDIA--just like the BBC.

Like I said, when people agree with me strange things happen.

That's probably true. I'm sure he feels our pain.

I agree. All it does for me is lessen my respect for the law. However, I doubt she's being beaten with rubber hoses and, since there's a preppie broker involved, I'm inclined to believe the evidence was altered to cover their butts.

I believe Wall Street to be corrupt to the core and completely understand the small, "not from the Hamptons" investor's reluctance to lose the rest of their investments.

Yes I do.  A great civilization will have a better chance of surviving if it doesn't take money away from its people and wastes it on needless spending programs.

I seem to recall the BBC scrambling in radio and TV when commercial radio and TV came to the UK. As a matter of fact, I was offered jobs to help both sides. Each one felt the American way of broadcasting would beat the other. The same thing with Australia and New Zealand when FM began to grow. Being an American broadcaster gave you some magic power.

I have a hard time considering a government run service as independent. Friends at the BBC often complain of government pressure to report things differently or make one change or another. One day a Prime Minister will be elected and he'll throw the BBC tradition to the wind and the UK will have one, national, Clear Channel.

It's the same over here with the VOA. I had lunch with the gentleman in charge of English Programs Public Affairs. Politicians swarm over the place wanting to change it into a propaganda machine. I have friends who work there and complain about pressure from politicians. It's supposed to be independent, too.

In my view, "preservation of culture" and like phrases are just politically correct verbiage for promoting government subsidy for middle class entertainment.  Again, in my view, if you want it, you pay for it.

Not everything, just whatever is relevant. We are talking here culture vs. commercialism, kind of, no?

Anyways, we must start recycling. :)

Will a great civilization survive if it removes tobacco subsidies? How about subsidies for large corporate farmers? Will it survive without all the pork in the budget that goes to contributors or to useless projects intended only to get Senator Foghorn reelected?

I don't believe there's ever been a great civilization without art. In fact, what physically remains of those former great cultures is often their artwork.

OK, here's some interesting look from outside at American TV...

Foreign Insight
Wiebke Lamer
Now, it would be impossible for me to write a column on American culture without looking at the one medium that has so much influence on it. Yes, I'm talking about television. Plus, I'm a media student, so there's no way that I'm missing my chance to get my two cents in on a topic like this.

Thanks to that lovely little thing called American cultural imperialism, I grew up with most of your television shows. The Flintstones, Cosby, Dallas - I've seen most of it. And of course we get all the cool new shows too. I think I watched more American shows than I watched German ones. Needless to say, I was excited to finally get to experience American television in all its beauty. So, the first thing I did when I got into my hotel room was to switch on the TV. But as usual I wasn't prepared for what I saw. After the initial shock dissipated, my only reaction was disappointment. How can you produce all these fabulous programs and yet manage to turn watching television into a torture?

You're right, that's a no-brainer. Of course it's the commercials that make watching American TV so deterrent. But I guess after you adjust to British television and its amazing public broadcasting system where a thirty minute program is interrupted by a single three minute break only, you would probably have a difficult time to get used to the excessive commercialism that's underlying American TV, too. And the massive amount of channels doesn't help either. Surely, it's a paradise for channel surfers but it's so frustrating to have about a hundred channels and you're still not able to find something interesting. In Britain my television access is limited to five public broadcasting channels and, believe it or not, they show everything you need.

Also, it might interest you to hear that American shows are dubbed over for German TV, since that's the first thing most people ask me about our television back home. I don't think a lot of countries do it; well the French obviously do, but the Scandinavian countries don't. It's really a rather peculiar procedure. Just imagine, they have to translate and rewrite all the dialogues and then they have to find German voices for the characters. Sometimes that works out for the better, but you have no idea how annoying the German voices of the Friends characters are. It's gruesome, and it's not as funny as the original either. And after having seen many shows in their original version, bad synchronization gets really irritating. So, I'm not wild about German TV anymore and try to limit my TV consumption to MTV and CNN when I'm at home.

For some reason, however, I assumed that MTV would be even better in its homeland. Wrong again. I have to tell you that MTV Europe is doing a more presentable job. I mean, is there any music on that channel here at all? No. Instead, you find endless re-runs of award ceremonies or reality TV shows. I can only hope MTV 2 makes good for these shortcomings.

And don't get me started on your news. There is really no point in watching it as I have discovered. But at least I get the impression that this is a widespread sentiment among Americans, too.

Let me tell you however, that when it comes to movies, American television is great. You switch on the TV and there's always a good film on somewhere. British and German television suck in that regard because they tend to turn film premiers on TV into huge media events. Hence, we're lucky if we get to see good, recent movies twice a year, and all the time in between we are bombarded with re-runs of cheap or old films.

So, while I'm here I'll just stick to HBO and avoid those annoying commercials as much as I can.

Wiebke Lamer is always happy about some feedback from you, so email her at wiebke1@umbc.edu.

The Greeks funded the theatre so the poor could afford it! Nah, they

I agree. All it does for me is lessen my respect for the law. However,
I doubt she's being beaten with rubber hoses and, since there's a preppie broker involved, I'm inclined to believe the evidence was altered to cover their butts.

I believe Wall Street to be corrupt to the core and completely understand the small, "not from the Hamptons" investor's reluctance to lose the rest of their investments.

It's funny how in Disney's characters the small/weak beats the big/strong, while in real life is the exact opposite. But I guess it wouldn't be such a box office hit if the lion beats the little mouse...

I wonder if kids correlate those things. Chances are, they'll feel very confused.

I suspect the real Michael Moore would be disgusted by your posting such sentiments under his name.

People....

My scenario is as follows.....

To get the L+R signal you must sum up the L and R channels...so far ok..

Now when summing these two signals it seems we would also get a sum of Common Mode signals. In my prac and theory when +L+Vcm (common mode)is summed with +R+Vcm we get +L+R+2cm...so far still ok....

We send this to the reciever along with +L-R. It decodes this, i assume, with  the following equation...
+L+R+2cm - +L-R => +2R+2cm/2 => +R+cm....so far all is still excellent!!!!

Now if in the case of a MONO receiver it would ignore the L-R signal and simply output the +L+R signal.

Here is my BURNING question......if above equations taken into account then it seems that a mono reveiver would output +L+R as well as 2cm!!!

Is it true to say that a mono reciever would output TWICE the common mode signal ?????...And if not WHY NOT...That is what I need to know

Can someone please tell me I am wrong and why...please!!!

Thanks guy's....

I was given ("get this thing out of here for us would ya?") a Gates "The Yard" broadcasting console the other night. It is a vintage that has tubes, 12ax7's and 6267's mostly on every card as well as transformers everywhere. I'd like to find out as much as I can about it. I'd love to find out how to get it fired up to see how it sounds before I let it retire with some dignity. I'm mostly into audio recording, not broadcast but I love old stuff and I don't recall ever selling a single thing in all my years of working with equipment. I have no intention of butchering this piece in search of some TOOB preamp.  Just want to see if I can get it working and let it hang around in my "Hall Of Dinosaurs".

I's very much appreciate any info on this unit or links to any info or schematics.  Thanks in advance.

So instead of culture, you get Rush Limbaugh. No wonder America is at odds with the rest of the world.

This is the commercial "culture" you get in America...

Rush: The 35 Undeniable Truths

(All equally truthful: number 1 is not more or less important than 35.)

There is a distinct singular American culture - rugged individualism and self-reliance - which made America great.

The vast majority of the rich in this country did not inherit their wealth; they earned it. They are the country's achievers, producers, and job creators.

No nation has ever taxed itself into prosperity.

Evidence refutes liberalism.

There is no such thing as a New Democrat.

The Earth's eco-system is not fragile.

Character matters; leadership decends from character.

The most beautiful thing about a tree is what you do with it after you cut it down.

Ronald Reagan was the greatest president of the twentieth century.

The 1980s was not a decade of greed but a decade of prosperity; it was the longest period of peacetime growth in American history.

Abstinence prevents sexually transmitted disease and pregnancy -every time it's tried.

Condoms only work during the school year.

Poverty is not the root ("rut") cause of crime.

There's a simple way to solve the crime problem: obey the law; punish those who do not.

If you commit a crime, you are guilty.

Women should not be allowed on juries where the accused is a stud.

The way to improve our schools is not more money, but the reintroduction of moral and spiritual values, as well as the four "R's": reading, 'riting, 'rithmatic, and Rush.

I am not arrogant.

My first 35 Undeniable Truths are still undeniably true.

There is a God.

There is something wrong when critics say the problem with America is too much religion.

Morality is not defined by individual choice.

The only way liberals win national elections is by pretending they're not liberals.

Feminism was established as to allow unattractive women easier access to the mainstream of society.

Follow the money. When somebody says, "It's not the money," it's always the money.

Liberals attempt through judicial activism what they cannot win at the ballot box.

Using federal dollars as a measure, our cities have not been neglected, but poisoned with welfare dependency funds.

Progress is not striving for economic justice or fairness, but economic growth.

Liberals measure compassion by how many people are given welfare. Conservatives measure compassion by how many people no longer need it.

Compassion is no substitute for justice.

The culture war is between the winners and those who think they're losers who want to become winners. The losers think the only way they can become winners is by banding together all the losers and then empowering a leader of the losers to make things right for them.

The Los Angeles riots were not caused by the Rodney King verdict. The Los Angeles riots were caused by rioters.

You could afford your house without your government - if it weren't for your government.

Words mean things.

Too many Americans can't laugh at themselves anymore.

TIP: AMERICANS, LOOK YOURSELF IN THE MIRROR! :)

Patric: Try here: http://www.halls.com/manuals.html#sub1

If the manual isn't listed, contact him directly by email or phone.
He may have what you are looking for or could direct you to where you might find the info.
Sadly, much of the printed info on old radio consoles and othere equipment died with the companies that produced them.
I can't find any Gates liiterature where I'm currently employed but there may be some squirreled away in the warehouse.
I'll take a look next time I go there but in the meantime, try Jon at the webpage above.

You are wrong because any "cm", or "common mode" signal is removed from both the left, and the right channel signals before they enter the matrix stage.

Also it appears from your analysis above that if the "cm" signals are not removed from the left and right channel signals, the "cm" signal would appear not just in the output of a monophonic receiver, but also in the left and right channel outputs of a stereo receiver, which you say is "still excellent", although it doesn't seem so excelent to me.

For sale:

Part ownership (Joint venture) of 1 KW full-time AM in important KY city of over 25,000 population.

Full price only $100,000.

Active or inactive (I prefer active) investors with at least $10,000 each are welcome. No person, including myself, can own more than 49 percent. These are the ground rules. Bullies, stay away! "AM bashers", stay away! Negative "nabobs", stay away!

High soil conductivity allows this station to be heard on car radios 40 to 50 miles from the tower! A "zillion" people in the daytime coverage area.

I am a semi-retired radio engineer aka "The Radio Crazy". I am sure you have seen my annoying posting from the past. Hi!

hi,

i want to check the output power of an fm transmitter, and i don't have a wattmeter. most of the wattmeters available in market here have a range of 0-50watt or 0-100 watt.
i want to design one, with a range of 0-2 watt approx, using the components available with me - digital multimeter(V,A,ohm), diodes, transistors, resistors and capacitors. someone please suggest me a design or point me to a schematic.

i am very much interested in designing a low power fm transmitter, yet all that i hit upon while searching the net are readymade schematics, which ofcourse work, yet i do not get the real idea of how it was designed. is there any good document about how to design an fm transmitter from scratch, given that "i need to transmitt an fm signal at 90Mhz with an output power of 2 watt". i would like to know how to design circuits for oscillators, pll, power booster, amplifier etc. and how to tweak them for getting the desired output.

please don't worry about the output power(2 watt as i mentioned). i know it's illegal, and i am not going to cause any damage. i just want to learn how to design. let me mention that i am very new to this subject.

thanks.
anand saha.

I know Rush is Right... by political affiliation only, that is. :)

But they are probably 'undeniable' because there's no reasonable voices paid by Big Business to counter him in American radio...

John,

I'm not sure we are talking about the same common mode signal.The common mode I refer to is for instance a DJ coming through in the centre field of the stereo image. I suspect you are talking of unwanted noise.

Regards,

Dem..

At least someone's posting links rather than stealing copywritten material and cross-posting it like someone who's taken their name from a Cervantes novel.

But like so many of these things, there is a correction to be made (also, it would help if the guy stated the call letters and city of his Salem station). Michael Savage is a moron, but he's not syndicated by Salem--he's syndicated by Talk Radio Network.

As for listening to Pacifica instead, yeah--if you want to substitute far-left-wing-wackoness for far-right-wing-wackoness. For civil, centrist discussion, there's still nothing like NPR (and if the extremists on both sides hate NPR, then they must be doing something right).

BTW, seems that Savage is off the air right now in his home base of San Francisco--rumors are that KSFO didn't want to pay him more (they also probably didn't want any more headaches from this guy) and that when his contract runs out at the end of the month he'll be moving his flagship to KNEW, which recently flipped to general talk from CNET. And guess who owns KNEW, boys and girls? That's right--Clear Channel!

Assuming you know the value of the transmitter load resistance.

With the diode (preferably germanium or other low-forward-voltage diode) rectify the RF voltage across the load, bypass the RF component of the DC volts down to transmitter ground with a 10,000 pF capacitor. Connect a 2M-ohm 1/4-watt resistor across the capacitor.

With the high resistance digital voltmeter measure the DC volts across the capacitor. The measured DC voltage  + diode forward volts will be equal to the PEAK RF voltage across the load.

Transmitter power output in watts = Squared(Peak RF Volts)/2/Load resistance.

The above circuit will work up to a measured DC voltage not more than the rated reverse voltage of the diode.

Right, this is just a "design experiment."  Except that you have a particular frequency and power in mind, and you know it's illegal.

Why didn't you make the subject line, "Help me build an illegal transmitter"?

I hope no one else aids and abets this activity, I sure won't.

Hi Anand,

Your first problem is one of available voltage. Available from the transmitter, across the load, for the diode to then rectify and present to a meter for display. At 2W into 50Ohms you can at best develop:

    P = E� / R
    2 = E� / 50
    E� = 2 * 50
    E = 10V

This is far and away more than enough voltage to make the diode sing, as long as you use this meter AS the load. Trying to design a Wattmeter like an Amateur SWR meter (which is more versatile) would lead to a design that attempts to use as little power going to the load as possible. You don't ask for that, so the Meter, AS load is appropriate, but then you need to ask yourself how much your real load appears to be like your Meter AS load (frequently not much at all).

Very few antennas offer a load of 50Ohms, which is simply the conventional value engineered into a system (your simple transmitter barely qualifies, and yet at some point it does have an output impedance and is driving a load of some input impedance - a system).

You should then build your Meter AS load with a value you can trust to be close to the actual value.  For a ground plane style antenna this varies between 35 Ohms (with a flat radial design with around four spokes at 90� to the radiator, or 0� to the horizontal) and 50 Ohms (those same four spokes drooping at roughly 45� to the horizontal); or 70 Ohms for a dipole (vertical or horizontal) as long as they have been tuned to resonance (and now we return to the flexibility of the SWR meter which would allow you to determine this, but would be starved for power with only 2W available).  Simple formulas for frequency and wire required to design these variations abound and you probably could trust them to be close enough.  Download the free version of EZNEC and you will find them all and certainly within the means of the limitations imposed (for being free software) to determine those lengths for your self, to the materials at hand.

As for the detection portion of this we start with a 35/50/70 Ohm resistor.  Connect this across the output of the transmitter (its antenna output connection and the chassis/ground or power supply common which is frequently the negative pole of the battery or lead of the supply).

Some cheap transmitters expect you to simply connect a whip to it and ignore that this point is also hot with supply voltage.  As a precaution, insert a capacitor (one of the small disk types with a value of 0.001�F to 0.1�F) between that connector and the resistor. This capacitor will be invisible to the transmitter and the load (it won't matter).

I presume your meter is a solid state model from Radio Shack, but it could as easily be one with a needle that moves with input (probably found in a receding glacier).  Either way, connect the negative lead to the common/chassis/ground described above.

Parallel connect an 1000 Ohm resistor (not critical - could be 620 or 2200) and another disk capacitor (not critical - like the one already described above) across the resistor.  One side of this combination should go to the common/chassis/ground described above.  The other side should go to the meter's free lead (the positive one).

You now have a lot of connections to common/chassis/ground and you have the 35/50/70 Ohm resistor being fed through a cap on one side (make sure the resistor can take 2W) and the meter with its circuitry (specifically the +lead) isolated from it.  Add a diode between these two points and you are complete: Resistor Load - Diode - +lead.

Apply power, measure voltage, apply Ohm's Law.

Let's see, now, he wants to learn how to design an illegal transmitter, and the existing readymade designs are no good to him. He wants a fairly sophisticated design (pll). He wants us not to worry about his power level.

He's posting from a free account.

Anyone else hearing alarm bells ringing?

Do you have any schematics for an RF probe? There are schematics out there for an RF probe which you can use on a VOM. You read the RF voltage on the output and use the formula P=E - squared / R (which should (in most cases) be 50 ohms - a standard dummy load). It will give you a ball park idea. Accuracy? Well, I've found it close enough for my uses and experiments with Wattmeters also have shown a close proximity.

Start out with a higher scale, say 40-50 VDC so as not to overload the meter. Can work down a level or two depending on voltage measured. I have an RF probe in my tool box to use on my VOM just in case I need to measure the RF voltage to get an idea of output, should I not have a wattmeter or dummy load with me. Even checking with the existing antenna, will give you an idea of output.

An RF probe utilizes a diode, a cap or so and resistance. It may be frequency limited, so you have to watch that. The schematic will usually give the range limit, usually to 500 MHz. I've made a few with RG 58 cable, perf board cut to size, and a piece of aluminum tubing cut to size and drilled as needed. About $7 in parts and 1/2 hours work. Most of the parts may be in your junk box or found at Radio Shack.

Hi, I have a dipole antenna for 79Mhz that I want to modify to use on my 1 watt FM transmitter. The dipole is an Allgon block with some kind of glass fibre elements. How much do I need to cut them?

Thanks in advance!

Regards,
Henrik

CBS/NBC/ABC/CNN/BBC?

Do you think the media outlets noted above represent "the same conglomarate of news, where big business--oil--is #1..." >

The answer is...

"In response to the 2001 NSF survey, 90 percent of adults said they watched television news reports or news shows every day (63 percent) or a few times a week (27 percent)."

The only ones that are less corrupt would be the more or less independent BBC and PBS, which you forget to mention. (And I don't think their combined audience amounts to a sizeable percentage.)

Other than that, their SUV commercials speak for themselves...

Has WBT 1110 Charlotte been broadcasting in "digital" (a.k.a. IBOC) for the past few weeks?

They seem to be "splattering" either side of their center carrier quite annoyingly of late.

I like to catch the 12:00-1:00 weeknight repeat of Coast to Coast AM on WTAM 1100 Cleveland, but it has been difficult of late with all the QRM (ham radio term for adjacent interference) from Charlotte NC.

Any ideas?

Good idea! And while at it, let's stop funding the goverment... Who needs anyway a government who doesn't care about the things that matter?

Not everyone needs or wants a course in music appreciation (my favorite waste of time class in college) in order to enjoy listening to music.

WTAM and WBT are stations of the same class, therefore they are not interfering with each other.

Meanwhile in a not-so-distant place called Canada...

ISSUE DEFINITION

Cultural policy is the expression of a government's willingness to adopt and implement a set of coherent principles, objectives and means to protect and foster its country's cultural expression. The arts are the very foundation of this expression. In an age when countries are becoming increasingly interdependent economically and politically, promoting cultural expression by means of a coherent cultural policy for the arts is a valuable way to emphasize and define what distinguishes one country from another.

Canada faces considerable challenges in this regard. Its vast territory and small population make it difficult to produce, exchange, disseminate and communicate works of art, while artistic production itself is economically fragile. Canada must also contend with the constant cultural presence of the United States in this country and the influence of this presence on the cultural identity of its population.

This review focuses exclusively on Canadian cultural policy as it concerns the arts; that is, on the range of government actions that have a direct effect on creative and performing artists and on the organizations within which these artists work. The review describes the leading concerns with respect to this country's cultural policy for the arts and the main responses of the federal government.

BACKGROUND AND ANALYSIS

A. Role of the State

A country's culture is its body and soul, reflecting the way its inhabitants act and think. In its broadest sense, its culture includes a community's knowledge, experience, beliefs, values, customs, traditions and distinctive institutions. A country may be composed of various distinct communities, each with its own exclusive cultural characteristics. An individual's cultural identity and sense of belonging are clearly in many respects a function of familiarity with the cultural characteristics of his or her own community and the surrounding communities.

Through a government policy that promotes the arts and whose primary goal is cultural, individuals are familiarized with the characteristics of their own society and their sense of belonging and cultural identity are strengthened. The role of artists is not only to mirror the values of the society in which they live, but also to reflect on the issues that society must address if it is to know itself better. The role of the State in this regard is to support artistic activity, to provide creators with conditions favourable to the practice of their art, and to ensure access to their work by the general public.

Compassion is one thing, but "stopping the spread of disease so that

The problem is that eventually they'll lace it with commercials.

Originally cable was pretty much commercial free, but now it has become another outlet for Big Business. Channels like 'Animal Planet' repeat their programming every three hours (8pm and 11pm) and show more SUVs than dinosaurs...

Thanks to Ninth Grade "music appreciation," I _still_ cannot bear to hear Rimsky-Korsakov's Sheherazade. That was 39 years ago.

Sound Advice

Classical music is becoming more and more popular. But with the thousands of classical CDs that are released every month, how do you make any sense of it all? Which ones do you buy?

SOUND ADVICE is the weekly guide to the world of classical music and recordings.

Rick Phillips makes classical music selection easier for both longtime classical devotees and new fans of all ages. This program takes the latest Classical releases and offers musical comparisons to other recordings still available. There are also hints on how to listen critically, how to appreciate music more, what to listen for, and a host of other topics.

There's also a Library segment every week, where Rick looks at how to build a classical music library, or brief surveys of some of the great performers from disc, or explanations and musical examples of some of the basic forms in classical music.

And there's the popular SOUND ADVICE Music Quiz to close the show every week.

Does anyone know of a radio station with the call letters HEAR.FM

I'm putting the domain up for sale and guessing it might be of interest.

I've been hunting on the web for the station, but to no avail.

Thanks,

I think there were dj's who would do exactly that ... LPs usually had much better essays; they had a lot more space to fill up (plus, of course, you could read them _before_ you bought the item, and you'd learn about all sorts of interesting things you might hear inside).

<Didn't want to spoil your fun.....(and it's better for you to see what the actual numbers are) I'd bet that out of 284 million viewers, ABC/CBS/NBC/BBC only draw about 25 million on a given evening...I could be wrong, but that's my guess, what's yours?>

OK, it sounds right. The question is, what about the quality?

TV ratings: A competitive race again for network evening news

Friday, June 15, 2001

By DAVID BAUDER, AP Television Writer

"The "CBS Evening News" averaged 8.3 million viewers last week (6.2 rating, 14 share). NBC had 8.2 million (6.1, 14) and ABC had 7.8 million (6.1, 14)."

Ratings and quality...

FIXING TELEVISION NEWS.

Author/s: Bob Papper
Issue: Jan, 1999

Improvement will come only if viewers discourage the lowest-common-denominator approach too many stations take to boost ratings.

WHAT IS WRONG with television news is mostly a perversion of what is right with the medium. In an unbelievably competitive environment, television too often finds itself unable to settle merely for what it does exceptionally well. If this is the land of excess, then TV clearly defines who we are.

Television is the greatest mass medium of our time--arguably the only remaining one. As others specialize to survive, television invites everyone in--or at least everyone from the advertiser-desired ages of 18 to 54. In a mass medium, those with the biggest mass win.

"What's wrong with TV news? A simple one-word answer would be Nielsen," says Ramon Escobar, news director at WTVJ-TV in Miami.

Ratings are the god before which all TV bows. Can stations or networks win by taking the high road? Sure they can, but it is harder, calling for a long-term commitment and requiring better, smarter, and usually more expensive people. Moreover, it takes longer. Alternatively, there's the Jerry Springer low road to a mass audience, including sensational, screaming news coverage and sleazy special sweeps series. This may be the dictionary definition of lowest common denominator, but don't kid yourself, there are lots of ones and zeroes generated.

"Yeah, there's a lot of junk out there," concedes Marci Burdick, news director at KYTV-TV in Springfield, Mo., and a former chair of the Radio Television News Directors Association. "Sometimes I flip on television in motel rooms, and I just laugh at what I see." Nevertheless, Burdick maintains that television news, in general, is a lot better than people give it credit for. "I think there's more excellent journalism being done than lousy journalism. Unfortunately, the consumers never hear about it from us, and that's one of the greatest ironies."

It can be tough for a news director and news department to take the high road. Some of the competition can be brutal. "We did a story on kids and values; we did a story on racism and race relations," notes Escobar. "While we're doing that, we've got other stations in town, they're doing bathroom sex. The last [ratings] book, we had sort of a bathroom motif going on. Another station did, can you imagine, that public restrooms are dirty? What kind of a story is that? Another station did bathrooms of the future."

"It's troubling," reflects Tamara Lehman, news director at KREM-TV in Spokane, Wash. "It is frightening to be looking at rating points and see when some stations do unethical things for ratings." Among the "unethical things" she has in mind are news contests, station-sponsored giveaways to "lucky" viewers who watch the news. Defending this demeaning practice, station managers point to newspapers that do the same thing--proof that the juvenile response that "Johnny did it, too" is alive and well in television today.

You (wasn't it you who started this thread) seemed to be saying you'd want something as elaborate as this before every record they play? You'd never get to listen to the music!!

George Jellinek (sp?) of WQXR, New York, had a column in Stereo Review Magazine called "The Basic Repertoire."  The danger is that it's one man's opinion and other "experts" will argue that the Moncton Auxilliary Orchestra's performance of Janacek's "House of the Dead" was much better than the Metropolitan Opera.

Someone asked an Arbitron representative how they'll deal with the people meter while in the shower. Make sure you take it into the bathroom was the answer.

Unless you're able to imitate the subaudilbe code in the shower, the meter won't register your version of "Feelings" in their report.

I avoid singing in the shower. Replacing the cracked tiles gets expensive. I'm the person bars hire to sing at 1:45am to make sure the room is cleared by 2.

I don't know if this is "Rich Wood" philosophy (I doubt it) or just a tongue-in-cheek comment, but for the second time today I fond myself agreeing with one of your posts (the other was your statement on Martha Stewart).
Somehow Rich, over the years I have never quite figured you out....

According to former, kinda conservative Arianna Huffington, SUV's are dinosaurs. I envision a plea for everyone to drive their SUVs to the La Brea tar pits.

Of course, once Dubya and his oil buddies get hold of the Iraqi oil fields we'll be swimming in the stuff and new SUVs will be spawned because we need to burn the stuff even faster. The Lincoln Navigator will look like a VW Bug compared to the revived generation of land vessels.

Be careful. The gummint is taking notes on how best to torture us to get information when we're arrested as terrorists. Ashcroft will get to you, one day.

I learned how best to destroy space aliens from "Mars Attacks." Slim Whitman records caused their heads to explode.

You'd be surprised how valuable little snippets of information can be.

Do you ever, ever see a European--or even Canadian--program on TV, the way they must swallow our stupid shows?

"From its introduction in American society, television has proven itself capable of holding its audience riveted to the screen for countless hours. As a result, people who saw television as a means through which to provide culturally uplifting programming to the American public were gravely disappointed. Instead, TV almost immediately became an unprecedentedly effective means of selling products. Most Americans weren't interested in "educational" programming, and if people don't watch advertisers don't pay for air time in which to sell their products. TV shows in the late 1940s followed the model established by the success of radio; single advertisers paid for whole shows, the most common of which were half hour genre and variety shows. But in 1950 a small lipstick company named Hazel Bishop changed forever the way companies sold their products.

When Hazel Bishop first began advertising on TV in 1950 they had only $50,000 a year in sales. In two short years of television advertising, and at a time when only 10 percent of American homes had televisions, that number rose to a stunning $4.5 million. As advertisers flocked to hawk their products on TV, TV executives scrambled to find a way to accommodate as many companies as possible, which would result in astronomical profits for both the advertisers and the networks. TV executives realized that single product sponsorship was no longer effective. Instead, they devised a system of longer breaks during a show, which could be split up into 30 second "spots" and sold to a much larger number of advertisers. Although this advertising innovation led to television's greatest period of profitability, it also led to advertising dictating television programming.

In the early 1950s television advertisers realized they had a monopoly on the American public; they were competing with each other, not with other mediums, such as books or magazines. Americans watched regardless what was on. Advertisers discovered that what most people would watch was what was the least objectionable (and often the most innocuous) show in a given time slot; hence the birth of the concept of "Least Objectionable Programming." A TV show didn't have to be good, it only had to be less objectionable than the other shows in the same time slot. Although more "serious" dramatic television didn't entirely disappear, the majority of shows were tailored to create the mood advertisers thought would result in their consumers being the most amenable to their products. By the mid-1950s lightweight sitcoms dominated the American television market. The relative success and happiness of television characters became easily measurable by the products they consumed."

FEDERAL LAW VS. HAM RADIO:  THE CONFUSION OVER HIPPA

A new federal healthier law with the acronym HIPPA is affecting Amateur R= adio.=20
Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, takes a look at the recent implementation of the He= alth
Insurance Portability and Accountability Act and its impact on the hobby.

--

If you are a ham with a disability and are a member of a group any other organization that has knowlege of your problem, then listen up.  In order= to continue receiving most benefits from such a group you are now required u= nder
Federal law to fill out and return the new Health Insurance Portability a= nd
Accountability Act privacy guidelines forms that you may have already rec= ieved or will recieved from each group.

Its the Federal government that requires the paperwork, and signing it wi= ll
allow groups that must disclose disability information in the course of r= outine business to continue to serve you.  For hams with disabilities it means t= hat groups like the Handi Hams can continue to provided direct assistance wit= h license renewal or license changes, publish news of individual license upgrades, and even send a birthday greeting by the ham radio's National T= raffic System.

What about individuals who do not sign the forms?  They will still be abl= e to receive some services offered by these groups, but limited to those which= do not involve releasing information about their physical condition.  Howeve= r, in the case of the Handi Hams, a disabled ham  could no longer be connected = with the groups assistance community of other members and volunteers because o= f the new federal privacy regulations.

INTERNATIONAL - SOLOMON ISLANDS:  LICENSING CONFUSION

Meantime, in the Southern Hemisphere, some questions and some possible an= swers regarding the confused state of ham radio licensing in the Solomon Island= s.=20
Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, has the details:

Sam Voron, VK2BVS, spoke to QNEWS from an Internet kiosk at Dubai airport=
.  Sam was  en route to Somalia, but paused just long enough to answer a few rum= ors regarding the Solomon Island H44 prefix  licenses.

According to Voron, there had been no way for people to get a license in =
the Solomons because there are no exams there.  So in 2002 the H44 national r= adio regulatory body called Spectrum printed 21 novice licenses with the call = signs chosen by students at a radio school.  These are people took the Unrestri= cted level license class of ham radio training.

But Spectrum said that it first wanted to issue Novice licenses because i= t felt new operators should start with an entry level ticket before moving on to= a full license.  But Voron admits that at least two of these licenses may h= ave
been issued with Unrestricted privileges.

According to Voron, the Secretary of the H44 national ham society has now= drawn up an Unrestricted exam.  Students not happy being forced into the novice license when they spent 6 months studying for the Unrestricted will be ab= le to take the exam.  If they pass,  they will go directly to the Unrestricted instead of the Novice class operating privileges.

In further news just in and unsubstianted as yet, the real exam is ready.= =20
Spectrum has directed the candidates to sit for it.  The school and candi= dates are said to be dealying because they are frightened that it may be to har= d.=20

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I=E2=80=99m Graham Kemp, VK4BB, of Q-News=
down-under, in Brisbane, Australia.

No matter when that first upgrade test is held, it appears as if a method= is at least now in place for native born Solomon Islanders to take an Amateur R= adio
exam.  (Q-News)

FCC:  KILLS RULES FOR LIGHTING DEVICE EMISSION LIMITS AT 2400-2500 MHZ

Remember a few years back when hams became very worried about degradation=
 to the 2 point 4 Gigahertz band?  This,  after the FCC adopted a First Repor= t and
Order that relaxed the emission limits for R F lighting devices. =20

That was on June 9th of 1999 and at that time the Commission deferred to = a future date action on changes to the rules to permit such devices to oper= ate from 2400 to 2500 MHZ. =20

Now, with no apparent remaining interest by the lighting industry to prod= uce RF lighting devices in that spectrum, the FCC has decided to forego any furt= her rule change.  Well, at least for the moment it has.

The whole story is at =20

Wide Web.  (CGC)

RADIO LAW:  FCC ACTS TO EASE MEDIA OWNERSHIP RESTRICTIONS

Federal regulators have acted to relax rules that restrict media ownershi= p.=20
The change will permit companies to buy more broadcast properties and own=
 a newspaper as well as a radio or television station in the same city.

On Monday, June 2nd the Federal Communications Commission announced that = it voted 3 to 2 to adopt a series of changes favored by media companies.  It= now says that a single company can now own TV stations that reach 45 percent = of

United States households instead of the previous 35 percent limit.  The a= gency also eased rules governing local TV ownership so one media conglomerate c= an own two television stations in more markets and up to three stations in the l= argest markets like New York or Los Angeles.

More controversial was a decision to end an age-old ban on joint ownershi= p of a newspapers and broadcast stations in the same city. The revised rule lift= s all
'cross-ownership' restrictions in markets with nine or more TV stations.=20 Smaller markets still face some limits and cross-ownership is still  bann= ed in city=E2=80=99s and towns with three or fewer television outlets.

And even these rule changes are expected to face court challenges.  Some = media companies already indicate wanting more wide spread deregulation.  Meanti= me consumer advocates will be seeking to reverse the deregulatory trend in f= avor
of more local control over the print and broadcast media.

Not approached in this latest round of broadcast deregulation was the sub= ject of direct foreign ownership of U-S broadcast properties.  Currently forei= gn entaties and governments are banned from such ownership.  But over the ye= ars
there has been intensive lobbying by foreign interest groups to do away w= ith this ban which requires an act of Congress to lift.   Most annylists say = its not likely to happen in the near future.  (Published news reports)=20

ENFORCEMENT:  LOCAL CHARGES FILED AGAINST OHIO CB  OPERATOR

Complaints from a group of neighbors experiencing interference on househo= ld appliances from phones and TV sets to baby monitors have resulted in a co= urt case against a citizens band radio operator.  Amateur Radio Newsline=E2=80= =99s David
Black, KB4KCH, takes a look at a most interesting case:

--

On the CB airwaves, he's said to go by the name Sugar Bear. James A Disbe= nnet, of Lancaster, Ohio, faces first degree misdemeanor charges of operating a= CB
radio exceeding 4 watts.  He also faces two counts of operating a CB radi= o without certification.  The Lancaster Eagle Gazette says  Disbennet was released on bond after answering a summons in Fairfield County Municipal = Court
May 20th.

The Lancaster City Council was the first such group in the U-S to pass an ordinance allowing the City to enforce rules set by the FCC governing the strength of CB radios.  On April 10th, an assistant superintendent of the City's Electrical, Communications and Signals Department went on a transm= itter hunt.  The interfering signals were traced to Disbennet's home. The City = then obtained a search warrant, with Lancaster police serving the warrant the following day. Officers seized four pieces of CB radio equipment worth mo= re
than a thousand dollars.

A trial date has yet to be set. If convicted, Disbennet could be hit with=
1,000 dollar  fine and 180 days in jail.
For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm David Black, KB4KCH.

According to the law under which Disbennet was charged, the definition of= CB
radio "includes all private, two-way, short-distance voice communications service for personal or business activities of the general public.  Citiz= ens
filing complaints must keep an accurate log of the interference for a min= imum
of four weeks and there has to be more than one complainant in order to f= ile charges.  The only exclusions to the law are for emergency communications services like police, fire and FCC licensed radio amateurs. =20 who run enhanced or so-called high fidelity single sideband?  The FCC tol= d

those operating the mode that the agency had received complaints from oth= er radio amateurs alleging that the enhanced mode transmissions were using bandwidth wider than necessary.  The FCC termed this as being contrary to= good engineering practice.

One of those hams receiving such a notice was Anthony G. Latin, W4NSG, of= Ocala
Florida.  Now, a month later the FCC has withdrawn its original letter to Latin, stating that it was issued to him in error.  The regulatory agency= also apologized to W4NSG for whatever inconvenience that letter may have cause= d him.
 No specific reason for the withdrawal of the letter was given.  (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT:  FCC ISSUES ANOTHER ENHANCED SSB WARNING

But its not over yet.  This is because the FCC has issued another ham a s= imilar
warning regarding the use of enhanced SSB on the Amateur Service bands. =20

The May 12th letter went to Tyler Stampfli, KA0KA.  Like those issued bac= k in April, it tells the La Grange, North Carolina ham that use of enhanced Si= ngle
Sideband emission with a bandwidth wider than necessary is contrary to go= od engineering practice.  It also notes that no spectrum in the Amateur Serv= ice is designated specifically as =E2=80=9Cwideband audio=E2=80=9D frequencies, = either by Commission rule or in any informal band plans.=20

The FCC did not cite Stampfli.  It did however request that he fully revi= ew the relevant Amateur Service rules and to make certain his station conforms t= o
them.  Also that he operate in the best interests of the Amateur Radio Se= rvice
as a whole.  (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT:  BIG CELLULAR FINE

The FCC has issued Western Wireless Corporation and WWC Holdings two Noti= ces of Apparent Liability to Monetary Forfeiture in the amount of $200,000 each.=
 The companies are the licensee of Cellular Radio Station KNKN343 in North Da= kota.=20
The FCC says that the the companies are operating radio transmitting equi= pment
from an unauthorized location resulting in the first fine. =20

The second $200,000 is the result of what the FCC says was Western Wirele= ss for operating radio transmitting equipment from another unauthorized location=
. The
two NAL=E2=80=99s wewre issued on May 5th and the companies were given th= e customary

HAM RADIO AND THE LAW: CA HAM FILES FOR COURT COSTS

Mark Abrams, WA6DPB, the ham who recently triumphed over the city of Ranc= ho
Palos Verdes California in an antenna zoning case is headed back to court=
. In an e-mail to Amateur Radio Newsline, Abrams says that his attorneys have recently completed our briefing in the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals on th= e
issue of damages. Abrams says that he is now waiting for a court date wh= ich he expects will be around the end of August or early September. After the hearing, Abrams says that he expects to wait another 60 days for a writte= decision from the Court. If the Court decides in his favor he wins the r= to have another trial on the amount of attorney's fees, court costs and damages. If he looses Abrams says that it will be unlikely that he will =

CHANGING OF THE GUARD:  FRANK SCHWAB, W8OK, - S.K.

Some sad news to report.  The changing of the guard in ham radio continue=
s.=20
This with word that Frank Schwab, W8OK, has passed away.

As we reported last week, Schwab, who helped to craft the Dayton Hamventi= on over a half century ago suffered a heart attack a few hours prior to this= event.  At the time, the 77 year old Schwab was also fighting cancer and several other ailments.

While best known for his work in creating the Hamvention, W8OK was also a world-class D-X=E2=80=99er and heavily involved in public service activit= ies.=20
Services were held Monday June 2nd at St. Christopher's Church  in Vandal=

TIME TO RETIRE:  WISCONSIN SCHOOL CLUB GOING QRT

After over 25 years in operation, Andrew Martin, KB9ZLL, reports over qrz=
.com
website that the Fond du Lac, Wisconsin High School's ham radio club is dissolving.  This, due to the retirement of it's trustee Jeffry Hoeft, K9= NC.

The club had its beginnings in the old high school building in 1972.  Bac= k then it consisted of a wire antenna and CW transciver.  Today the group has operations on the high frequency bands as well as two meters and 440 Mhz.=
  More important, the Fond du Lac club has been responcible for the licensing of nearly two dozen new hams over the years it has operated.  (KB9ZKK, QRZ.C=

ON THE WEB:  AMATEUR REPEATER BUILDERS HOME PAGE GOES QRT

The Amateur Repeater Builders Home Page appears to have gone QRT and its = events resulting from this groups  actions the Amateur Repeater Builders = page will no longer be maintained.=20

Whats involved appears to be a dispute over universal recognition and acceptance of the the Northern California Amateur Radio band plan and wha= t the board administrator terms as intentional interference to coordinated 420 = with an ATV transmitter.  He says that the FCC's lack of time and/or inte=

THAT FINAL ITEM:  THE OWLS ARE BACK

And finally this week, its time to get ready to T-Hunt down those ever el= usive
Burrowing Owls.  And this year there=E2=80=99s another creature to look f= or -- bats.=20
Heres Joe Moell, K0OV, with all the details:

For five years, ham operators and scanner listeners in western states hav= e monitored VHF frequencies to help researchers in Saskatchewan and Washing= ton
state study the migratory behavior of Western Burrowing Owls, a species o= f concern.  Now three more monitoring projects are beginning, and this time= we need volunteers in south-central and southeastern states.

A biologist at the University of South Florida at Tampa (USF) is studying Florida Burrowing Owls.  That's a slightly different subspecies from the Western Burrowing Owl.  It is thought that their range is limited to Flor= ida
and the Keys, but there is one 40-year-old report of a sighting in North Carolina.  Researchers have banded the legs of these birds in the past, b= ut
none of the banded owls have been recovered after leaving their Florida h= omes.

For the new study, some Florida Burrowing Owl chicks are being radio-tagg= ed right now.  Local researchers are tracking them as they leave their nests=
learning to forage.  In the summer, the young owls are expected to take o= ff for parts unknown.  USF wants volunteers throughout the southeast to listen f= or the VHF radio tags in an attempt to determine their routes and final destinat= ions.

That's project #1.  Number two involves Mexican Long-nosed Bats.  For abo= ut a month beginning in mid-June, Bat Conservation International wants volunte= ers to join a team that will track their movements in and around Big Bend Nation= al

Park in Texas as they pollinate century cactus plants.  Physically fit hi= kers are especially wanted, but a few vehicle-based monitors will also be help= ful.=20
And there may be opportunities for some home monitors.  Hams with VHF rad= io
direction finding equipment are particularly needed.

Project #3 is a study of orphaned Great Horned Owls.  It's being done by =
the Heard Natural Science Museum and Wildlife Sanctuary in McKinney, Texas, a= long with the University of North Texas.  After being raised at the sanctuary,= up to two dozen of these owls will be released into the wild this summer, with = radio tags attached to help determine their dispersal patterns and survival rat= es.=20
Volunteers are needed to monitor for the radio tags, especially in the De= nton and Collin County areas.  Great Horned Owls are territorial and do not mi= grate long distances.

My Web site on radio direction finding carries the latest details, freque= ncies, and contact information for all three projects.  Point your browser to www.homingin.com  HomingIn is one word --- homingin.com

Thanks in advance for your help!  From southern California, where Burrowi= ng
Owls are diminishing but still can be seen in the farmlands, this is Joe =

Well, just a little bit. But, of course, there can more specialized programs. Actually NPR had something like that a few years back.

The thing is that if you don't explain music to some degree, how can you expect the regular people to listen to classical or jazz?

I still don't listen to jazz, but I've been exposed to "explanations" every so often on general-interest radio or TV programs. It just doesn't do anything for me.

yes they were and not picking up the phones. also on other occasions they claimed they had no winner and urged people to call when in fact they did have a winner.

If they like it they'll listen, if they don't like it they won't listen. I live in the 219th largest market in the U.S., yet there is a commercial jazz station here. If enough people cared about classical, I'm sure there would be a commercial station playing that too. What we certainly don't need to be doing is spending taxpayer dollars so a very small majority of people can be "educated" about the music they listen to on the state-run radio network.

I wanted to alert you to a personal story about me I produced for National Public Radio. It will be airing on the radio this Sunday (FATHER'S DAY) June 15, during "Weekend Edition". It is partly about how I got into producing radio theater. It also features rare sound of DAWS BUTLER demonstrating how he did his voices.

You can hear the 10-minute piece on your local NPR station sometime between 8 and 10 a.m. To find out which radio station runs NPR programs in your town or city, check here:

http://www.npr.org/stations/index.php

If you have trouble finding the correct radio station, e-mail me back and I will find it for you.

Packing and unpacking one of my closets in the course of a recent move, I found some bits of my life in a box of audiocassettes made by me as a child growing up under the aegis of a volatile father. Listening to them proved an unsettling yet fulfilling experience.

During the radio piece, I confront my difficult relationship with my father, a Newark, NJ police officer, and the better one I had with cartoon voice legend DAWS BUTLER (Yogi Bear) who became my surrogate father, and I play some of the sounds I recorded of them and myself as a child.

It was a cathartic experience that I hope helps others as well. I tried to portray the paradox of being an adult that was once an abused child. Although a troubled relationship between parent and child has oblivious negative effects, it often produces character strengths that serve the child when they reach adulthood. I'm reaching out to every adult who was once an abused child and given them a bit of comfort.

EVOLVE OR DIE

Once upon a time lived a race of dinosaurs whose violence and appetite alarmed everybody... One day a Little Ant, tired of feeling stepped upon, and worried about her cooperative enterprise, came up to the Americanus Raptor--the biggest dinosaur of them all--and asked: "Why you always have to protect the right of the dinosaurs, who do nothing but eat everything in their path? Why don't the little animals get a fair share of this world?" Then the dinosaur, who had a bad temper, replied: "Bigger is better, so get lost..."

The Little Ant, then, gathered the whole cooperative and said: "Comrades, our world is being threatened by the dinosaurs, so..." And at that precise moment the Earth was hit by a big ball of fire, destroying everything but the small animals...

What makes you believe we don't need to preserve and encourage the flourishing of culture?  Do you think a great civilization can survive with just the sort of crap the "market" dredges up?

Over here is one commercial classical station that went into the AM band because of costs...

What's sad is that $500 are being channeled into shortwave radio to sell the 'American way of life' to the world.

Very small majority?

What makes you believe we don't need to preserve and encourage the flourishing of culture?  Do you think a great civilization can survive with just the sort of crap the "market" dredges up?

OK, we are talking about delivering culture to the people at large. If you don't explain it, it'll remain the realm of an elite.

Something that I found in American sitcoms is that they are so deep that they actually make you feel like crying, which is the reverse of 'serious' programming, where you end up laughing at it.

British comedies are lighter, and their dramas are dramatic.

The real problem with American programs though is the ratings that make 'em appeal to the lowest common denominator.

OK, we are talking about delivering culture to the people at large. If you don't explain it, it'll remain the realm of an elite.

Over here is one commercial classical station that went into the AM band because of costs...

What's sad is that $500 are being channeled into shortwave radio to sell the 'American way of life' to the world.

EVOLVE OR DIE

Once upon a time lived a race of dinosaurs whose violence and appetite alarmed everybody... One day a Little Ant, tired of feeling stepped upon, and worried about her cooperative enterprise, came up to the Americanus Raptor--the biggest dinosaur of them all--and asked: "Why you always have to protect the right of the dinosaurs, who do nothing but eat everything in their path? Why don't the little animals get a fair share of this world?" Then the dinosaur, who had a bad temper, replied: "Bigger is better, so get lost..."

The Little Ant, then, gathered the whole cooperative and said: "Comrades, our world is being threatened by the dinosaurs, so..." And at that precise moment the Earth was hit by a big ball of fire, destroying everything but the small animals...

Maybe. It's also probably legal to travel at 25 MPH on most interstate highways. But it's likely to get you in trouble. Let's stick to the practical situations.

>Commercial stations (in particular) broadcast what they think will

Granted. However, many stations are broadcasting what effectively appears to be nothing short of payola with a middleman. True, it's not called payola because Congress and the FCC explicitly said so. However, the bottom line is that it's very difficult for a startup group to get radio exposure because it costs too damned much to get the attention of the program consultants. The whole exercise is a chicken and egg problem where you can't get air time without a lot of cash and you can't sell records without much exposure.

This point has been hammered home by the existence of programs such as American Idol, where the whole process becomes an insipid and idiotic game-show. Cash and recognition produces an instant pop-star who is talented enough to sing nearly anything written in the last four decades, but bland enough not to have many original ideas of their own.

The end result is that more and more listeners are turning to other media. Oh, I know, the radio moguls find reasons to claim statistics that they have more listeners than ever. But what those statistics don't say is what that radio is doing. For many, if not most, it's background noise. Thus, my question: How effective is an advertising spot going to be if it's part of the background noise instead of the foreground?

I need to raise some important issues:

Ratings Services have a conundrum to consider, along the lines of the Heisenberg Uncertainty Principle.  You can know with great detail what music is working well on a station as long as you don't use those same statistics to determine what to play next.  You can also know, overall how well a station is doing.  But you can't use how well the play lists work to direct the what to play next.  Unfortunately, that's exactly the sort of narrow-minded foolishness that many stations do with their ratings data.

Radio stations are not alone in this problem.  Educational Testing Service, ETS, is guilty of this phenomenon with the high school SAT scores.  These scores are built by salting the test with new questions to see how students rate on the new questions.  Then, based on curved data, this is used to build new tests.  In effect, they were trying to predict how well students would do in college based on a test that previous students took.  The SAT, once high regarded for it's predictive value, is now dismissed as nearly worthless.  Why?  Because it's a test for testing sake; it is not focussed on how well a student understands a relevant topic, or how well a student can parse a new language or mathematics problem.

Likewise, despite this experience, most radio stations still don't understand that their beloved ratings have very little foundation in reality any more.  An phenomenon similar to the Heisenberg Principle is at work here:  When the measuring method affects that which is measured, there are limits to what you can know about the situation.

Basically, this is WHY so many are turned off by radio programming. It has to be programmed with a notion of what they're following or what they're leading --or it's noise.

>The broad masses of people out there (who, by the way, tend not to post >in online discussion forums and complain about the radio/music etc.) are >pretty complacent in their listening habits anyway. They like the oldies >they heard in high school and college, or perhaps some MOR in the office, >the evening, etc. They're not actively seeking out radically different >stuff (although I think they can have their listening habits gently >"stretched" by competent programmers).

The broad masses use radio for background noise.  Yes, they show up on ratings services, but they don't pay nearly as much attention to the radio as they did before such practices became common.

Thus, the questions are still very much unanswered.  Where should programming come from and who should care?

Before you answer, consider that most Music formats along the lines of Top 40, Mix, Country, Classic Rock and so forth are very much closer to commercial speech than free speech.  Remember, the Recording

Distribution companies pay to put this music on the air in the hopes that they can sell it more.  So be prepared to argue why this IS a free speech issue and why the public can't regulate it.

I find it quite improbable that the bell curve could be made to accurately represent the IQ of a population. It would mean that there are the same number of mentally retarded individuals as there are intelligent ones. If this were so, the population of the mental retardation centers would greatly surpass that of the universities, as students are transient while mentally retarded individuals remain in specialized care all their lives.

That of course all depends on how you define "mentally retarded" and "intelligent". The bell curve is not made to represent the IQ of a population, but if I remember rightly the raw scores of a population are adjusted to bring the average score to 100. Hence the discovery, by a Dunedin academic whose name escapes me, that the raw scores have been steadily improving over many years, and the argument as to whether people have been getting more intelligent, or just better at doing IQ tests. It is also I think generally agreed that the further a score is from 100, the less it means in terms of a linear relationship with other scores.

That sounds good, unfortunately most RCVR's are bad. I'd like to tune it

Do you have the slightest idea what the US arts budget (such as it is) goes to fund? Operas and symphonies get a tiny fraction of it -- most of it is for things like high school bands and companies that put on musicals locally.

Not to mention, of course, the budget for military bands, which is larger than the entire NEA.

WNYC-AM wasn't interrupted for a moment. Staff announcer Mark Hylan stayed at the mike the entire day (the regular on-air talent couldn't get to the studios, which are in the Municipal Building across from City Hall) relaying reports from reporters who called in from wherever they could to provide information.

And who suggested they did?

WNYC-AM and FM simulcast ME and ATC; their weekday local talk shows 10 am - 2 pm; Marketplace; PHC live (repeated on AM, but not FM, Sunday 11 am - 1 pm); and This American Life Sunday 6 pm. (And some of the network newscasts on the hour.)

I 'only' see a couple of problems with that...

Firstly, your lack of funding for the arts produces aberrations like Rush Limbaugh and other clowns to manipulate American public opinion.

Secondly, you money is indeed being spent on foreign broadcast (at the tune of $500 a year) to sell the 'American way of life' across the globe. Believe it or not the listeners in Zimbabwe get better 'culture'--and VOA is much better than the clown aforementioned--than you do in Kansas City...

Radio stations buy ratings principly to sell with. They are the currency by which radio audiences are measured. Additionally, ratings are a report card for programming. Where did we do a good job, where did we fail?

Radio ratings are not used except very indirectly to determine playlists. Stations do in-house research, or, in smaller markets, simply guess, to determine what established songs to play. There is no research done to determine what new songs to play... that is based entirely on gut feel, perception of the artist, needs to balance the playlist as to tempo, etc.

The ONLY place where the ratings can help in constructing a format is in the speed of rotations. Using Arbitron data, one can see how long and when listeners tune in, and derive reach and frequency ranges. With this in hand, a programmer can say, I want every listener to hear the top 5 songs at least 4 times a week and will be able to calculate whether to turn them every 2 hours or 2 hours and 20 minutes, etc.

Other than that, Arbitron provides no highly correlated data on the music a station plays. While ratings can show whether an overal format is working, it can not tell you whether it had to do with the specific songs or how they are played.

> Likewise, despite this experience, most radio stations still don't understand that their beloved ratings have very little foundation in reality any more.  An phenomenon similar to the Heisenberg Principle is at work here:  When the measuring method affects that which is measured, there are limits to what you can know about the situation.

Radio ratings are bought mostly to find out how many people in what ages are leistening to each station in a market, so that each station's advertising can be priced. Your comparison with scholastic testing is not relevant, because Arbitron does not change its "questions." In fact, aside from finding out age, sex, and other demographic data, Arbitron doe snot ask questions in the radio survey. It privides each selected participant with a diary in which to write down what they listened to, and when. There is no questioning about opinion, songs, DJs, etc. Just a list of listening.

> Basically, this is WHY so many are turned off by radio programming. It has to be programmed with a notion of what they're following or what they're leading --or it's noise.

The most prevalent comment in this group has to do with so many people being burned out on radio. As I have posted before, 95% of Americans listen to radio weekly, and they listen for an average of 21 hours per person per week. Interestingly, this is the same number of weekly hours as given the medium by the "Average American" in 1950. I'm, for one, amazed by this. With all the gadgetry and new media available to suck up leisure time, radio still commands a hefty amount of people's time. Hmm. It must not be so bad.

I was about to say that, util I read ahead. Mosat people don't dislike radio, they don't post about radio to newsgroups. They listen in the car, the office, the workplace, the bathroom, they yard. If they like th emusic or the show, they stay. If they don't, they don't. It is not complicated. Radio is free, and used like an appliance. It has a use, a purpose.

What practices are those? Radio today is simply a progression of the trends started in the 50s of music segmentation and formatic focus.

This is not true. Nearly no staitons are taking money to play specific songs. Most major companies in broadcasting don't deal with the independent promotor group any more, and pay-for-play (songs played as commercials) were never prevalent. record companies pay promoters to try to get songs played. In most cases, good songs get played and stiffs don't. Big aritsts get played before unknown ones, catchy songs become hits while hookless ones don't.

More than ever, money is not getting records played. In a big part, this is due to the fact that the record companies have an outdated marketing model, and are being eaten alive by downloads and pirates, and have very little money to spend on poromotion at all. In many areas, there are more smaller, idependent lables than ever, as the big companies can not justify large artist rosters and have to cut back.

Just so you know, here is how new songs are added at a radio station.

First, larger stations do call out research on currents. They know regularly, often once a week, which are moving up and down and which are not happening. So, a station knows how many open positions on the list are available for new songs. In most formats, this might mean between 1 and 3 tunes a week.

During the week, depending on format, a station has received anywhere between 5 or 6 and 100 new songs. So, let's say we have a huge 3 openings on our playlist. the first thing to see is if there is a good song or two or three by core artists... the artists that identify who we are and what we play. We take another listen to them. We put them in order on the desk. then we see if there are any songs happening on similar stations in other markets that we have been waiting on to see if there is a buzz on them. For this, we use BDS, MusicScan, R&R and tip sheets specific to our format to see what stations we respect have added. We identify these tunes, and listen again. We put them in the "potential" cue. Then we look at some of the maybe 100 songs that have no "papers" but might be long shots. Usually, the station Music Director will have reviewed the new arrivals, but most don't have time to do all this, do an airshift, remotes and production. Finally, we look at the existing list. If we have too many ballads, we don't select a new ballad.If we have too many songs of a sub-genre, we don't add another.

We end up with 3 songs to add. The other 90-some are divided into ones we will keep watching, and those that go into the trash.

But research, money and record companies have little to do with this process.

By the way, many stations these days use a music committee, where several people of different ages, sexes and even ethnicities share opinions on songs that could be added.

>(I don't know much about ERP, but it seems a bit odd to me that a >station at 39kw ERP ~200km away could take out a station at 30kw ERP >~30km away... Explanations?)

This spring we have experienced  a great amount of tropospheric ducting, which is a fancy word for "skip." It is a weather condition, although conditions may seem perfectly sunny and nice otherwise.  This problem is usually worst in the morning, and tends to go away as the day progresses.

One day last month, our station got totally wiped out in the vicinity of our 50 dbu contour  by a station that is located over 300 miles away.  This problem was not caused by the distant station, but it makes me wonder who we are wiping out. Thankfully this interference didn't last very long, but it is a problem that is very real.

There is a very good predictor map available at this web site:

http://www.globalserve.net/~hepburnw/tropo_car.html

The good news is, it is suppose to subside soon.  You might want to wait a while before you call the folks at the FCC.

It takes ownership levels from 35% to 45% with an allowance to go beyond that. It's fun to pull figures out of the air, I'm sure, but it's not very productive, is it?

Boy, are you dumb.  I feel sorry for you.  If you think this issue does NOT effect you or your children's future, you are really living under a rock.  Five MEGA media companies own 75% or what you see in movies, watch on TV, and read (books, newspapers & magazines) and listen to on radio.  Several FCC employees (including Michael Powell) had 34 meeting this year with media lobbyist.

You think the media is BAD now, just wait another year and it will be much worse.  You might want to read about what happen in Minot, N.D. -

An 'era of media megaliths'
05/14/03
ELI PARISER

It's like something out of a nightmare, but it really happened: At 1:30 on a cold January night, a train containing hundreds of thousands of gallons of toxic anhydrous ammonia derails in Minot, N.D. Town officials try to sound the emergency alert system, but it isn't working. Desperate to warn townspeople about the poisonous white cloud bearing down on them, the officials call their local radio stations. But no one answers any of the phones for an hour and a half.

According to The New York Times, one resident died after inhaling the gas and more than 300 people were treated at hospitals -- some partially blinded -- and pets and livestock are killed.

Where were Minot's disc jockeys on Jan. 18, 2002? Where was the late-night station crew? As it turns out, six of the seven local radio stations had recently been purchased by Clear Channel Communications, a radio giant with more than 1,200 stations nationwide. Economies of scale dictated that most of the local staff be cut: Minot stations ran more or less on auto pilot, the programming largely dictated from farther up the Clear Channel food chain. No one answered the phone because hardly anyone worked at the stations any more; the songs played in Minot were the same as those played on Clear Channel stations across the Midwest.

Companies such as Clear Channel argue that economies of scale allow them to cut costs while continuing to provide quality programming. But they do so at the expense of local coverage. It's not just about emergency warnings: media mergers are decreasing coverage of local political races, local small businesses, and local events. There are only a third as many owners of newspapers and TV stations as there were in the 1970s (about 600 now; more than 1,500 then). It's harder and harder for Americans to find out what's going on in their own back yards.

On June 2, the Federal Communications Commission will consider relaxing or getting rid of rules to allow much more media concentration. While the actual rule changes are under wraps, they could allow enormous changes in the American media environment. Theoretically, one company could be allowed to own ABC, CBS and NBC. Almost certainly, media companies would be allowed to own newspapers and TV stations in the same town. We could be entering a new era of media megaliths.

Do you want one or two big companies acting as gatekeepers and controlling your access to news and entertainment? Most of us don't. And the airwaves explicitly belong to us -- the American people. We allow media companies to use them in exchange for their assurance that they're serving the public interest, and it's the FCC's job to make sure that's so. For the future of American journalism, and for the preservation of a diverse and local media, we have the hold the FCC to its mission. Otherwise, Minot's nightmare may become our national reality.

Eli Pariser of New York represents the MoveOn Media Corps, a group claiming membership of more than 29,000 Americans working for a fair and balanced media (www.moveon.org/mediacorps/).

No, it isn't legal to travel 25MPH on an interstate, at least not in any state I've driven in. Ohio and Michigan both have minimum speeds, Ohio's minimum typically being 15 MPH under whatever the speed limit is.

Here is the letter that I wrote to Sen. Gordon Smith, OR

~~~~~~~~
The FCC has sold it's soul to the devil.

They were created to remove ROGUE broadcasters and protect the airwaves for the American public plus foster competition and spur better radio practice and promote technologies (such as FM and TV) to make American life better.
There is little belief of the last point being valid anymore. This is what you face in an FCC headed (hardly) by Michael Powell, a man/fool whom many of us simply called "Gen. Powell's kid" when he came to office. We were wary then, we are angry now!

Do what you must do! Ask Powell to RESIGN. Then get Mr. Bush aware of a much better leader (I do not pretend to know whom).

Thank you for your valued time.

Dear Phil:

Thanks for cc'ing me on comments to Peter. The station in GA is WNGA, Nashville, GA. 1600 KHz, 1 KW days, 500 watts presunrise (6 AM to actual sunrise) and 43 watts at night. Nondirectional. $90,000 full price including the building, land and tower. Their consultant says they can go to 5 KW days. For $100,000 the seller will finance with about $25,000 down.

Glad WLYC is up and running. Williamsport seems to be a nice area.

Meyer

Where on earth do you get 15%? Cite, please.

"Legacy"? Yes, the Telecommunications Act was one of many Clinton legacies.
He made it possible for this nonsense to come to pass.

Lots of us saw this day coming the day he signed that idiot piece of legislation (hint: that was the day I decided Bubba was a moron--it had nothing to do with the which party he represented. Stupid is stupid, regardless of political affiliation...).

But since he did you a favor, are you gonna give him credit for it? Of course not! Because--you are a poor dumb sap, lemming-like in your propensity to turn this into a right vs. left debate. And we know you wouldn't be caught dead giving a leftie credit where it's due.

That's exactly what a drooling stooge does--follow their leader, regardless if they are right or wrong.

Meanwhile, since it's a done deal, you'll be happy to know that the Heritage Foundation, in their appeal to Powell to relax the laws, stated that the Internet is a FINE alternative to 'teevee news'.

So in case you were wondering why I bring it up, it's very simple. You got your way out of this, but the price you will pay is that the days of bashing Internet news sources as an outpost for the lunatic fringe are over.

mellstrr--y'all should be careful what you wish for...

Sounds like you did it right. Have you contacted the 2 stations involved??
If not try that as well.

An atmospheric phenomenon called ducting is probably to blame.  Nothing you can do about it.

Absolutely true.  Another explanation for the score variances can be differences in methodology.  Tests have been refined to eliminate cultural bias, a problem recognized but not addressed when the initial studies were made.  I believe that I'm not alone in believing that the original motivation behind the bell curve was to prove that a certain race was more intelligent, ergo superior, to others.  This should place it in the same shelf as phrenology.

I used the terms "intelligent" and "mentally retarded" in a gross, inexact way, as extremes in the range of scores.  I could have used raw scores of 130 and 70 for the same purpose.

I'm no professional in the field.  My wife is. I have done some reading on the subject fom her sources.

The bell curve is not made to represent the IQ of a population, but if I remember rightly the raw scores of a population are adjusted to bring the average score to 100. Hence the discovery, by a Dunedin academic whose name escapes me, that the raw scores have been steadily improving over many years, and the argument as to whether people have been getting more intelligent, or just better at doing IQ tests. It is also I think generally agreed that the further a score is from 100, the less it means in terms of a linear relationship with other scores.

Just a footnote that one of WOR's engineers has informed me that this audio sample is "illegal" because whatever WOR broadcasts is copyrighted by their owners, Buckley Broadcasting -- apparently even infomercials, like WOR is so fond of airing on weekends, when I recorded this 5-minute clip.

So, if you're scared of that, don't listen to this MP3 file. But then, you might as well yank the Sound Blaster out of your computer because between this and all the "illegal" music files that everybody's downloading and sharing, if you want to avoid participating in "copyright infringement", there's just about nothing you can use it for, except to record and play back your own voice!

I suppose this also means that sites like http://www.northeastairchecks.com will either have to close up shop or risk getting sued, because they feature other recordings of WOR for people to download and listen to at will.

As an illegal parody of a Britney Spears song once said, "I just might sue myself".

Hell, we can't even get a national health care system, let alone state art funding....There's just no national consensus.

On the other hand, if we did get state radio stations playing classical music all day long, the academic geeks would start hollering about "dead white males" and other stuff.

I don't care, personally. Use the state funding to teach our kids about classical and jazz, and let the art geeks who take dirty pictures and pawn it off as "art" sell that stuff on the internet, with the rest of the porno....

It's typical early summer California thermals. This is not the station's fault... it's mother nature.

Town officials try to sound the emergency alert system, but it isn't working. Desperate to warn townspeople about the poisonous white cloud bearing down on them, the officials call their local radio stations. But no one answers any of the phones for an hour and a half.

As it turns out, six of the seven local radio stations had recently been purchased by Clear Channel Communications, a radio giant with more than 1,200 stations nationwide. Economies of scale dictated that most of the local staff be cut: Minot stations ran more or less on auto pilot, the programming largely dictated from farther up the Clear Channel food chain. No one answered the phone because hardly anyone worked at the stations any more; the songs played in Minot were the same as those played on Clear Channel stations across the Midwest.

How much good would it have done to actually get an alarm through the radio.  How many people are listening at 1:30 am?  Not many.  My feeling is that without the economies of group ownership most of the stations would have been off the air because management would have wanted to save the salaries and other overhead.

The answer of course is that if a station is on the air, there MUST be a warm body covering the studio locally.  Sounds like a good idea to me. Oh wait, that'll take us back 20 years in the rules and cost $500 a week (or so).  I know minimum wage job.

Too logical.

Valfer,

"I believe that I'm not alone in believing that the original motivation behind the bell curve was to prove that a certain race was more intelligent, ergo superior, to others."

The Mean, Standard Deviation, Normal Distribution (Bell Curve) are all Mathematical Tools used to organize and analyze information (data). These tools are applied to a variety of scientific applications. In and of themselves they have no 'motivation'. They simply represent the facts from a quantitative point of view.

The "Bell Curve" is used in Brown Mexico, White Russia, Yellow Japan, Black Nigeria, all for the same reason it is a valid mathematical tool that has its uses in science, industry, and education.

Or, are you implying that 'certain individuals' (the evil ones) are . . .
- - - Torturing the Data Until It Tells Them What They Want It To !

And Who Are These "Evil Ones" who are Skewing the Bell Curve out of shape ?

If its not for monetary purposes, and does no harm, any copyrighter would be a fool to complain.

I like way back in the early 70's a local pittsburgh FM station  would broadcast uninterrupted entire new rock and jazz albums each week for our recording enjoyment. I thought that was pretty cool.

I haven't forgotten. Cuba has bilingual broadcasts for the world while its people suffer scarcity. They however do fund the arts internally...

PS: Sorry the previous article somehow got duplicated, but it shows the Arts budget is around 120 million while foreign broadcasts hovers around $500.

You got no Arts, people may have to turn to something... :)

U.S. and the arts, a split personality
Frank Rich NYT  Saturday, May 31, 2003

NEW YORK Given that the artistic muse of the Clinton administration was Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, the creator of the sitcom "Designing Women," George Bush's appointment of Bo Derek to the board of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts could hardly be faulted for breaking with tradition. Culture has always been considered ladies' work in Washington - first ladies' work. It was Jacqueline Kennedy who brought Pablo Casals to the East Room, not her husband, who celebrated his inaugural with a command performance by the Rat Pack. It is Laura Bush who invites writers to the White House, not the president, whose inaugural concert featured Andrew Lloyd Webber, Ricky Martin and Wayne Newton.

But at a certain point Washington's tenuous, tacky connection to culture ceases to be a joke, and that point is now. Almost two months after the world first heard of America's failure to protect Baghdad's museum from looters and thieves, Iraq's treasures are still being pillaged - now at the archaeological sites themselves. According to The Economist, the Italian diplomat the United States put in charge of Iraq's cultural holdings is obscuring the dimensions of this new fiasco by refusing to allow reporters to accompany him on helicopter visits to the scenes of these crimes. Meanwhile, the plundering continues, and each day we lose more of our collective memory of our religious, literary and artistic roots in the centuries before Christ.

As if this weren't enough, the government is now trying to cover up its culpability in the desecration of the Baghdad museum with smoke bombs of spin. On May 7, Lieutenant General William Wallace told reporters that "as few as 17 items" in the National Museum were unaccounted for - a figure that then allowed administration apologists to minimize the tragedy. But this and other low-ball estimates of loss are, as one Unesco fact-finder told the International Herald Tribune last week, "a distortion of reality." The UN's team of experts estimates that at least 2,000 to 3,000 pieces are missing from the museum and that the entire 2 million volumes in the National Library and Archives are ash. "It's only by comparison with the most dire initial reports that said everything was gone that it seems not so bad," said a member of the team, John Russell of the Massachusetts College of Art. "Yes, not everything is gone, but major things are."

Another derogation of cultural duty by Washington, and one hitting closer to home, is probably about to become official. The Federal Communications Commission is expected to hand media giants like Viacom and News Corporation more power by letting them grab still more notches on the TV dial. The fix has long been in. The Center for Public Integrity revealed that the FCC regulators and staff members making these decisions had taken some $2.8 million worth of free trips (some 2,500 junkets in all, many of them to Las Vegas) from the very industry they are supposed to be regulating.

Michael Powell, the agency's Bush-chosen chairman, has freeloaded 44 times to rendezvous with show-business moguls even as he has disdained public hearings on the issues. The template for this behind-closed-doors policy making is Dick Cheney's secret energy task force, to which Enron executives got entree while environmentalists received short (if any) shrift.

Do American entertainment conglomerates need the same kind of government favors being showered on Halliburton? In the recession year of 2002, Variety has reported, the seven major Hollywood studios saw a rise of 18 percent in revenues. The reach of these companies is already so pervasive that performing arts institutions dedicated to classical music, dance and theater can barely be heard above the din.

As one critic puts it in the new issue of The Hudson Review, "Our commercialized, entertainment-oriented television-based culture has cheapened and trivialized all forms of public discourse." He points to a recent study showing that the average American spends 24 minutes a day reading - "not just books, but anything," TV Guide and diet tips included - as opposed to "over four hours daily of television and over three hours of radio."

The author of this grim indictment of the U.S. cultural state, as it happens, is himself a member of the Bush administration - Dana Gioia, who took over as chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts during the run-up to the war in Iraq. In the weeks since, I've spent several hours talking with him in New York and Washington - conversations I've found fascinating. The only subject he wouldn't expound on is the mystery of how he ended up in this administration in the first place.

Gioia, 52, is a contradiction. He's a working-class kid of Italian-Mexican heritage from Los Angeles who spent 15 years as a business executive (at General Foods) while building a career as a poet and essayist. He has studied with Elizabeth Bishop and Robert Fitzgerald and marketed Jell-O. He's a Republican who voted for Bush but says "the only people I've ever contributed money to are Green candidates." As a critic, he's a fierce defender of what he considers traditionalist literary standards and yet takes pains to distinguish himself from the neo-con snobs who regularly deplore pop culture.

Nor does Gioia subscribe to the ugly culture wars that the likes of Lynne Cheney and William Bennett embraced. Many of those battles were in one way or another about National Endowment for the Arts grants to artistic projects with sexual content, especially homosexual content. Gioia will have none of it. "If the FBI investigation of me proved anything," he says, "it's that about half of my friends and in some cases my collaborators are gay - like Alva Henderson, the guy I wrote an opera with. How can you accomplish anything in the American arts if you're homophobic? It just can't be done. Someone doesn't want to do a play because it's gay? Well, grow up. This is America. It's just as simple as that. We're supporting arts for all Americans."

He does reserve one cheer for the cultural marketplace - he's not a Republican for nothing. "If you create a system where the marketplace doesn't operate in the arts," he says, "it breeds a kind of institutional stagnation, which you see in a lot of European countries." But he knows the perils: "If you put the marketplace entirely in charge of the arts, you see them very endangered." Like virtually all of his predecessors, Gioia's antidote is to increase the endowment budget and expand arts education. But at a time when arts programs of all kinds are falling prey to the fiscal crunch, the endowment would not make a difference even at three times its minuscule current appropriation ($117 million). Add the catastrophic money woes at American cultural institutions to the growing grip of the media giants that are sucking up the air in their stead, and you've got a crisis.

What can Dana Gioia do about it? He could shake Washington with the same asset that has made him successful as a writer, the power of his ideas. A legendarily contentious essay he wrote for The Atlantic in 1991, "Can Poetry Matter?," started a debate over the merits of the academic poetry establishment that raged for years. While he sees clearly the cultural lay of the land, including what he called the "heartbreaking" destruction in Iraq, his duty must be to convey the urgency of his vision to a larger audience. Can he? The knee-jerk answer, of course, is no. He would appear to be as doomed as another green administration appointee, the soon-to-depart chief of the Environmental Protection Agency, Christie Whitman.

Gioia is too smart not to realize that for all the efforts of the current first lady, a former librarian, to promote reading, libraries are closing, not expanding, on this administration's watch. He is too serious to stand idly by while Rupert Murdoch amasses more power at home and looters subsume the culture of America's 51st state, Iraq. "The measure of a great nation is not merely its wealth and power but also its civilization," Gioia said when testifying before Congress in March. He seems to mean it. The measure of his tenure in Washington will be the extent to which he can counter those administration policies that damage our civilization rather than merely provide them rhetorical cover.

The author of this grim indictment of the U.S. cultural state, as it happens, is himself a member of the Bush administration - Dana Gioia, who took over as chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts during the run-up to the war in Iraq. In the weeks since, I've spent several hours talking with him in New York and Washington - conversations I've found fascinating. The only subject he wouldn't expound on is the mystery of how he ended up in this administration in the first place.

Gioia, 52, is a contradiction. He's a working-class kid of Italian-Mexican heritage from Los Angeles who spent 15 years as a business executive (at General Foods) while building a career as a poet and essayist. He has studied with Elizabeth Bishop and Robert Fitzgerald and marketed Jell-O. He's a Republican who voted for Bush but says "the only people I've ever contributed money to are Green candidates." As a critic, he's a fierce defender of what he considers traditionalist literary standards and yet takes pains to distinguish himself from the neo-con snobs who regularly deplore pop culture.

Nor does Gioia subscribe to the ugly culture wars that the likes of Lynne Cheney and William Bennett embraced. Many of those battles were in one way or another about National Endowment for the Arts grants to artistic projects with sexual content, especially homosexual content. Gioia will have none of it. "If the FBI investigation of me proved anything," he says, "it's that about half of my friends and in some cases my collaborators are gay - like Alva Henderson, the guy I wrote an opera with. How can you accomplish anything in the American arts if you're homophobic? It just can't be done. Someone doesn't want to do a play because it's gay? Well, grow up. This is America. It's just as simple as that. We're supporting arts for all Americans."

He does reserve one cheer for the cultural marketplace - he's not a Republican for nothing. "If you create a system where the marketplace doesn't operate in the arts," he says, "it breeds a kind of institutional stagnation, which you see in a lot of European countries." But he knows the perils: "If you put the marketplace entirely in charge of the arts, you see them very endangered." Like virtually all of his predecessors, Gioia's antidote is to increase the endowment budget and expand arts education. But at a time when arts programs of all kinds are falling prey to the fiscal crunch, the endowment would not make a difference even at three times its minuscule current appropriation ($117 million). Add the catastrophic money woes at American cultural institutions to the growing grip of the media giants that are sucking up the air in their stead, and you've got a crisis.

What can Dana Gioia do about it? He could shake Washington with the same asset that has made him successful as a writer, the power of his ideas. A legendarily contentious essay he wrote for The Atlantic in 1991, "Can Poetry Matter?," started a debate over the merits of the academic poetry establishment that raged for years. While he sees clearly the cultural lay of the land, including what he called the "heartbreaking" destruction in Iraq, his duty must be to convey the urgency of his vision to a larger audience. Can he? The knee-jerk answer, of course, is no. He would appear to be as doomed as another green administration appointee, the soon-to-depart chief of the Environmental Protection Agency, Christie Whitman.

Gioia is too smart not to realize that for all the efforts of the current first lady, a former librarian, to promote reading, libraries are closing, not expanding, on this administration's watch. He is too serious to stand idly by while Rupert Murdoch amasses more power at home and looters subsume the culture of America's 51st state, Iraq. "The measure of a great nation is not merely its wealth and power but also its civilization," Gioia said when testifying before Congress in March. He seems to mean it. The measure of his tenure in Washington will be the extent to which he can counter those administration policies that damage our civilization rather than merely provide them rhetorical cover.

So the 'war drums' get the largest chunk of it. Probably the hard core conservatives dance to it too!

Most of "National Radio" is in AM at present as mono but the transmitters are am stereo ready but they wont do that here:-( Its on FM in Auckland simulcasting with AM756 and Taupo on FM and one or two small towns currently Theres also RNZ International on SW too.

I listen to AM as well but unfortunatly here the AM Band is full of non english programming or religious networks and very little music and no AM Stereo either.

You are mistaken. In the US, the government, which operates by consent of the people, taxes us and spends the money on all sorts of programs, including arts funding. Money for "the arts" is indeed a function of government here.

And the money is certainly not taken by force. You consent to taxation by remaining a US citizen.

> If enough people want to

With rare exceptions, the free market makes crap. 99% of the great art in the history of the world has been wholly or mostly government/church funded. Great ideas can't rely on a common denomenator.

Pardon me for making assumptions.  "The Bell Curve" is one of several detailing studies of comparative intelligence made many years ago in the U.S.A..  Based on these studies, some pseudo-social scientists determined with an exaggerated degree of certainty that individuals of the Caucasian race possessed intelligence superior to that of the African, Eurasian, Jewish, Hispanic, etc.  These studies, unfortunately, have not been completely discredited, and are quoted by interested parties as if they were the Gospel Truth. Just ask our neo-nazi posters, and they will quote these "findings" to you by page and chapter.

The statistical devices you quite properly name have little to do with my subject of discussion, and for this I apologize. These devices are valuable and irreplaceable tools for statistical analysis.

Why, then, aren't people who reject arts funding also complaining about sports funding? Why should my taxes assist George Steinbrenner build a new stadium for the Yankees? Practically every city has thousands of homeless and uninsured sick. Let's stop pouring money into hospitals. After all, why should my taxes fund someone elses health needs when Steinbrenner needs it more. Who needs this compassion stuff? Let the guy who's just been hit by a bus figure his own way out of his mess. Our money is much more usefully spent watching grown men (women not allowed) hit a ball with a stick.

I don't want a huge stadium in the middle of Manhattan. If he doesn't get it, he's threatening to move the team. How does "The Weehawken Yankees" sound?

Oh, I remember. It brings money to the city. I wonder if it brings in as much as it costs, especially in terms of the huge tax breaks they get that other people will have to make up for in property taxes on their homes.

According to the information line at the NY Public Library (you can ask any question and they'll find the answer) more people in this country attend arts events than sporting events.

I'm afraid the "small minority" are sports fans.

In New York the supporting companies for sports are hot dog concessions. Maybe $10 for a hot dog and a drink. Supporting companies for the arts are restaurants at $50 a pop, minimum.

Another advantage is the fact that arts people usually keep their clothes on, don't paint stuff on their beer bellies or wave around wierd things made of endangered foam. Except for a Wagner opera, the arts don't frighten the horses and give little children nightmares after watching their parents make fools of themselves. Though I have to admit a building full of people dressed like penguins does frighten me a little.

If you're going to stop subsidies, stop them all. Since the family farmer is a goner, why does the huge farming conglomerate need government help? Why do the airlines need help from our taxes? Almost every other industry succeeds or fails based on the same markets as the airlines. If American Airlines can't make it through creative management, let it go under. Our ancestors made it across the country without airplanes. Considering the hot shot's attempts to save their own financial butts, do you think any loan we make to them will ever be paid back? If Lee Iacocca were running the Airline I'd feel much better about it succeeding and my tax dollars being returned.

Rich

But quoting only five words out of a whole song might qualify as fair use, although I know the rights holders are trying to do away with the fair use doctrine.

Clearly they would, but at the same time American 'classical music,' jazz, is mostly black, so there could one station classical and one jazz.

One thing applicable to both though--and I hope someone in NPR is listening--MUSIC SHOULD BE EXPLAINED. In Spain, for example, classical music is explained in context and it makes all the difference in the world. NO COMMERCIALS, JUST ARTS.

Tivoli makes an AM/FM radio with a very good quality FM tuner. It's the Tivoli Kloss Model 1. Costs about 100 dollars....very classy looking. I'm pleased with mine.

www.tivoliaudio.com

Alternatively you can hop down to your local Sears and pick up a GE-Superadio III for $50. Still very good radio...even though the tuning dial is sometimes a bit "off". Try before you buy.

However both radios have analogue tuners. Personally, I prefer a knob with a tuning condenser to a bunch of tiny buttons and additional noise-generating circuitry.

I recently gutted a working Gates Studioette 80 Mono console... I am putting my own power supply and stereo circuitry inside - I'm basically using only the case and part of the original shielded harness. But that's another story...

Anyway, on the main circuit board is a strange looking part, soldered near the rectifier dioides. It appears similar to a glass-tube neon pilot lamp, but I don't believe that's what it is - at least it never lit up when it was operating.

I'm venturing a guess here, but could this be a simple vacuum/gas spark arrestor by chance?

I hope that someone can help me out with this...I am trying to track down 2 radio programs that Bud Cort did:  J.D. Salinger's "The Catcher in the Rye" (a reading done during the late 1970's) and Lawrence Grobel's "Conversations with Capote" (an adaptation of his stage play, done around 1990).  Would you know if they are still being aired on public radio either nationally or for the L.A., C.A. area, or if there is a way to find a copy of them for sale?

I have been having a hard time finding out when or if one of both programs are still being broadcast, or where I can find such information, but have read, in the case of "Catcher" anyway, that it still is played on an L.A.-area public radio station.

I would greatly appreciate ANY information regarding those programs.
Please respond to this inquiry at any time.  (Or year).

FCC vote may prove to be a windfall for media giants
BY DICK POLMAN
Philadelphia Inquirer

In a historic decision that could dramatically affect what Americans see, hear, and read, a federal agency controlled by free-market Republicans is poised Monday to loosen or scrap longstanding rules that prohibit corporate media concentration.

Led by Michael Powell (son of Colin), who was named chairman in 2001 by President Bush, the Federal Communications Commission is expected to approve - on a 3-2 vote, along party lines - the most sweeping reforms affecting the American media since the heyday of free network television.

Powell and his allies plan to shelve the 28-year-old rule that bars joint ownership of a newspaper and TV station in the same city; the rule that bars any network from owning TV stations with a combined reach of more than 35 percent of the U.S. viewing audience (by raising the bar to 45 percent); and the rule which says that a company can own only two TV stations in the largest cities.

Monday's decision could trigger a financial windfall for the big media conglomerates that lobbied hardest: Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. (Fox), Viacom (CBS), Disney (ABC), AOL Time Warner, NBC, Gannett, and the Tribune Co.

And they'll apparently get their wish, despite vocal opposition from critics, ranging from Ted Turner to the leaders of the National Rifle Association, who believe that unshackled companies would be bad for democracy, imperiling the public's right to "the widest possible dissemination of information from diverse and antagonistic sources," as decreed by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black in 1945.

The media firms, in their filings to the FCC, declare: "(T)here is no longer any public interest need served by the commission's media ownership rules." They say that "market forces" would guide their corporate behavior and "ensure diversity, competition, and localism."

Powell, who says that his critics sound like "Chicken Little," says in his speeches that the FCC's rules are obsolete in the modern era, and that media companies - faced with competition from a range of new information sources, including the Internet - should have far more flexibility to buy and sell properties as they please, thereby allowing them to "adapt, respond, and survive."

Powell's detractors charge that he is essentially reducing the diversity of media voices, condoning the homogeneity of news and entertainment, and indulging the biggest firms in their desire to maximize profits with scant regard for the common good.

In essence, this is about a clash of philosophies, and opposing takes on what constitutes the "public interest." The Powell camp believes that unfettered capitalism will ultimately deliver whatever media consumers want most; the regulation camp says government should enforce rules to guarantee a broad range of media firms and a multiplicity of voices.

It's also a very public clash, unusual for an agency that normally toils in the shadows. The Democratic commissioners have been so incensed by Powell's move that they have held public hearings without him. In a speech last month, commissioner Jonathan Adelstein, declared: "We're likely to witness a tsunami of mergers. . . . We have in our hands a lit match, and we're moving close to a powder keg of public anger that may be about to explode."

Mergers may indeed occur - one consumer activist says that 140 media markets are vulnerable - but critics don't foresee any major deals in Philadelphia. Each of the city's four TV stations is already owned by one of the four networks, and the FCC won't allow one network to buy another. In addition, Knight Ridder, which owns the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Daily News, no longer owns any TV stations and has no plans to purchase any.

Nevertheless, former Fox TV senior executive Sandra Ortiz, who now directs the University of Southern California's Center for Communication Law & Policy, said the other day that: "this FCC decision is a watershed event, in terms of reshaping the media landscape. The potential consequences are so dangerous to a functioning democracy.

"Will the 'free market' encourage the media owners to behave in the public interest? We have no control over that situation, and it feels scary to me. We're at their mercy."

Actually, the deregulation of broadcasting isn't new. The FCC has been easing away from oversight since the 1980s, when Ronald Reagan appointee Mark Fowler declared that broadcasting should be treated like any other business, that TV was just "a toaster with pictures." More recently, the FCC has granted waivers allowing a single company to run a newspaper and a TV station in 23 cities (examples: Gannett in Phoenix, the Tribune Co. in Los Angeles).

But critics say that Powell's move is a virtual blank check for media consolidation. They just wish the FCC would take a hard look at what has happened to radio, as a cautionary lesson. In 1996, federal rules favoring small, local radio station owners were relaxed. The result: a mass buying spree. Today, two companies, Clear Channel and Viacom, own stations that reach 42 percent of U.S. listeners. Playlists have been homogenized, and the size of the average local radio news staff is down 47 percent since 1994.

Eleventh-hour petitions, and emails running 97 percent against media concentration, have failed to dent Powell's resolve. The critics, at this point, are resigned to defeat. Andrew Schwartzman, who runs the Media Access Project, a public interest law firm, said: "We don't have the votes. All we can do is quibble. This cake is baked."

But Powell's supporters say the critics deserve to fail. Former FCC attorney Randolph May, a communications specialist at the Progress and Freedom Foundation, a free-market think tank, said: "Their arguments have an air of unreality, a failure to acknowledge how much the world has changed. The FCC restrictions are so outdated that they're irrational."

Decades ago, he said, Americans got most of their information from three TV networks and the local paper; with so few media voices, Washington might have been justified in preventing the biggest firms from dominating too much. But with today's cacophony of voices, he said, "there's no need for government to dictate (ownership) decisions to media companies."

Besides, May said, media companies have First Amendment rights, just like citizens: "Government-dictated ownership rules run up against the constitutional right of companies to speak out, through the outlets that they choose to own."

Rob Frieden, a telecommunications lawyer and former FCC staffer, said, "Powell sorely underestimated the political fallout. For a lot of people, this decision doesn't pass the smell test. But he's a true believer in the market, and I think it's a courageous move."

Frieden isn't perturbed by the big-media dominance of radio since deregulation was enacted (no company owned more than 40 stations in 1990; today, Clear Channel owns more than 1200). He said that, with so many information options today, any smart consumer can avoid bland programming.

"I'm a world beat, ska, reggae kind of guy," he said, "and I can get all of that off the net."

The critics, however, see that argument as an excuse for monopolization. Robert McChesney, a communications expert and author of "Rich Media, Poor Democracy," said that the Republican FCC commissioners aren't really interested in true free-market competition; rather, they practice what he calls "crony capitalism."

He said: "This decision is a corporate welfare gift. These are companies that rely on government-granted monopolization privileges. This is deregulation on behalf of commercial interests with no pretense of serving the public."

But the conglomerates firms say they're serving the public well. Murdoch's company said in FCC documents that its Fox TV outlet in Philadelphia, WTXF, aired 24.5 hours of news each week in 2002 - an increase of 250 percent since the station was purchased in 1995. This controversy won't cease with the FCC vote, however. On Capitol Hill, lawmakers in both parties, who have complained that Powell has been moving too quickly, are planning to hold new hearings on media consolidation Andrew Schwartzman, the foe of big media, said, "Congress will have a lot to say. That's the next act."

But Robert Thompson, a Syracuse University expert on TV and popular culture, said that the conglomerates will be tough to beat: "They have a concise argument - 'the marketplace.' They know what they want, and they know how to get it."

Never. WNYE doesn't carry ATC or ME, and WNYC doesn't carry TOTN or Diane Rehm.

All three do have Fresh Air, but not at the same time; WNYE has Tavis Smiley, apparently live at 9 am ET, and WNYC-AM has him on in the evening (he's been at several different times).

WNYC has been simulcasting their local "news and information" programming from 10 am to 2 pm since they got their FM capability back in April 2002; before then they were (for unfathomable reasons) putting everything onto WNYE as well as WNYC-AM (I'd never known WNYE existed, so it's their own fault that I tune away to it for TOTN and sometimes even WBEZ (Chicago)'s Odyssey just before it.)

[I'm in r.m.c. and don't know why this thread is even here. The paragraph beginning "Network programming" is mine, though my attribution has disappeared.]

WNYC-AM used to rebroadcast their morning shows in the evening; in 2001 they got a bunch of pretty dull syndicated stuff and moved the repeats to the wee hours; then during the Iraq "war" they had BBC World Service practically around the clock (which is worse than CNN at repeating and repeating and repeating), but now they're back to normal, except an hour of BBC at 9 am on FM, while ATC continues on AM.

> Add to this NPR's shameful attacks on true alternative programming (e.g., LPFM), and there is little difference between their approach and commercial radio. The quality of the content is much better on NPR, but the approach is pretty much the same. NPR wants to BE a "big boy" network, not compete against them.

"Shameful attacks"?? When TOTN has done a few segments on the topic -- they don't even give a full hour to one topic any more -- the host never ever ever expresses an opinion, however idiotic the guest's position is.

Someone pointed out, during that incessant BBC deluge, that their reporters are far more aggressive than any US reporters. They're constantly asking leading questions -- the kind that are prefaced with "Isn't it true that ..." and the interviewee really does squirm.

(When Mara Tapp, formerly of WBEZ, used to do that, the answer was usually, "Well, no"; since she was not looking for information or opinion but providing her own.)

I wonder if this guy actually bothered to talk to power up front, or just used quotes from other interviews.. On the morning talk shows today, Powell pointed out that the old media ownership restrictions were tossed out by the courts.  Very roughly paraphrased, he indicated that there are effectively no regulations in place at this point in time.  They've been studying for more than 20 months, and had a requirement to act, and even with that, they are months behind the time limit that they had been given at the start of the process.

I'm not in favor of huge media buying up all the local TV stations, but this sounded rather one sided...

US to loosen media ownership reins

The head of the Federal Communications Commission says US regulators will vote to loosen rules on media ownership today.

FCC chairman Michael Powell says the moves will pass, despite a wave of criticism that the changes could wipe out independent voices.

"There is no doubt. There will be a vote tomorrow," Mr Powell told ABC America's This Week program.

The widely leaked proposals would allow a single group to own television stations with 45 per cent of the national audience, up from the current 35 per cent cap.

Limits on cross-ownership of newspapers and radio and TV stations would be lifted, as would the constraints on networks' ability to buy up local TV stations.

Opponents of the proposals say they would unleash a bout of merger mania that would sound the death knell for small, independent media groups and result in a dangerous monopoly over news dissemination.

Mr Powell defended the changes and said he believed that they would not result in massive media mergers.

"I think you'll see some restructuring," he said.

"But I happen to personally believe not nearly as much as some of the alarmist rhetoric would suggest.

"Just because somebody can buy something doesn't mean it makes strategic or financial sense to do so.

"It is not the elimination of rules, it's the modification of rules. Indeed, some of the rules won't be eliminated at all," he said.

"One of the rules is probably going to be actually tightened. And the remaining rules are going to be modified to reflect the modern media marketplace."

Congress loosened rules on ownership of broadcast stations in 1996 and ordered that the FCC review its other rules every two years.

The proposed changes come under the latest review, which is already months overdue.

Critics of the proposals, who range from rock stars to the National Rifle Association to CNN founder Ted Turner, fear that more consolidation among media companies would reduce the number of independent voices, thereby harming US democracy.

The bass player with rock band REM, Mike Mills, said: "If the FCC gives a monopoly on all news and entertainment programming to a handful of big corporations, then we also lose the diversity of ideas that makes democracy work."

Mr Turner wrote in Friday's Washington Post that the rules would "stifle debate, inhibit new ideas and shut out smaller businesses trying to compete".

"If these rules had been in place in 1970, it would have been virtually impossible for me to start Turner Broadcasting or, 10 years later, to launch CNN," he said.

Mr Turner is a major shareholder in AOL Time Warner, one of the five largest US media companies.

Senator John McCain, who heads the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation which covers telecommunications issues, says he believes the new rules could be justified despite fears of losing independent voices.

"Exactly where that line is is something that's very difficult to determine," he told US Meet the Press.

"But I do believe there is a situation of continued consolidation within the media which may, over time, deprive Americans of the news and information that they need."

What the courts have told the FCC is that they must either provide a compelling justification for the existing rules, or they need to develop rules that they can justify.

The fact that public comments on this proceeding are something like 99% opposed to any further deregulation might make a part of a compelling justification of the existing rules -- were the Powell FCC inclined to even make the attempt.

So, yeah...the issues are more complex than the article indicates -- but Chairman Powell isn't telling the full story, either.

For sale:

This is a "new" deal from the "Radio Crazy". It has never been offered before on airwaves.

Part interest in daytime AM in S. Georgia with some night power. 1 KW days, 500 watts PSA and 43 watts at night. Single tower. Consultant says it can probably go to 5,000 watts days and still remain non-directional!

Real estate IS INCLUDED in this cheapie. Building, land and tower. Studios and transmitter under one roof.

Asking price is $90,000 cash or $100,000 on terms with $25,000 down and seller financing.

Joint venture. I seek investors with at least $10,000 each. Prefer active with one or more of the following skills: Sales, programming and engineering.

All investors would be on the board with full voting rights if desired.

This station is the only AM in town and probably the only AM in that county. The FM licensed to same community has moved far away and is licensed only in name. This is the ONLY LOCAL RADIO precese in a community of close to 5,000.

The station is "dark" now for the past few mos. but the FCC license is intact. It first went on the air in 1960.

My tel. is: (478)741-1710 in Macon, GA. I am a semi-retired radio engineer and a ham since 1950. Age 68. Active and healthy.

Despite the "nasties" on this forum, the "Radio Crazy" is not only NOT a scam artist but worked for the US Dept. of Defense in a sensitive position and held a SECRET level security clearance!

The "Radio Crazy" was Chief Engineer for a NYC 5 KW fulltime AM in 2001. The "Radio Crazy" was the past President and founder of a non-commercial FM (KPOO)in San Francisco, CA. It is on the air since 1973.

The young Powell has surpassed his father in his level of incompetance.
Typical bureaucat by reverse discrimination.

> In essence, this is about a clash of philosophies, and opposing takes on what constitutes the "public interest." The Powell camp believes that unfettered capitalism will ultimately deliver whatever media consumers want most; the regulation camp says government should enforce rules to guarantee a broad range of media firms and a multiplicity of voices.
> It's also a very public clash, unusual for an agency that normally toils in the shadows. The Democratic commissioners have been so incensed by Powell's move that they have held public hearings without him. In a speech last month, commissioner Jonathan Adelstein, declared: "We're likely to witness a tsunami of mergers. . . . We have in our hands a lit match, and we're moving close to a powder keg of public anger that may be about to explode."
>
> Mergers may indeed occur - one consumer activist says that 140 media markets are vulnerable - but critics don't foresee any major deals in Philadelphia. Each of the city's four TV stations is already owned by one of the four networks, and the FCC won't allow one network to buy another. In addition, Knight Ridder, which owns the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Daily News, no longer owns any TV stations and has no plans to purchase any.
> Nevertheless, former Fox TV senior executive Sandra Ortiz, who now directs the University of Southern California's Center for Communication Law & Policy, said the other day that: "this FCC decision is a watershed event, in terms of reshaping the media landscape. The potential consequences are so dangerous to a functioning democracy.
>
> Actually, the deregulation of broadcasting isn't new. The FCC has been easing away from oversight since the 1980s, when Ronald Reagan appointee Mark Fowler declared that broadcasting should be treated like any other business, that TV was just "a toaster with pictures." More recently, the FCC has granted waivers allowing a single company to run a newspaper and a TV station in 23 cities (examples: Gannett in Phoenix, the Tribune Co. in Los Angeles).
> But critics say that Powell's move is a virtual blank check for media consolidation. They just wish the FCC would take a hard look at what has happened to radio, as a cautionary lesson. In 1996, federal rules favoring small, local radio station owners were relaxed. The result: a mass buying spree. Today, two companies, Clear Channel and Viacom, own stations that reach 42 percent of U.S. listeners. Playlists have been homogenized, and the size of the average local radio news staff is down 47 percent since 1994.

> Eleventh-hour petitions, and emails running 97 percent against media concentration, have failed to dent Powell's resolve. The critics, at this point, are resigned to defeat. Andrew Schwartzman, who runs the Media Access Project, a public interest law firm, said: "We don't have the votes. All we can do is quibble. This cake is baked."
>
> But Powell's supporters say the critics deserve to fail. Former FCC attorney Randolph May, a communications specialist at the Progress and Freedom Foundation, a free-market think tank, said: "Their arguments have an air of unreality, a failure to acknowledge how much the world has changed. The FCC restrictions are so outdated that they're irrational."
> Decades ago, he said, Americans got most of their information from three TV networks and the local paper; with so few media voices, Washington might have been justified in preventing the biggest firms from dominating too much. But with today's cacophony of voices, he said, "there's no need for government to dictate (ownership) decisions to media companies."
>
> Besides, May said, media companies have First Amendment rights, just like citizens: "Government-dictated ownership rules run up against the constitutional right of companies to speak out, through the outlets that they choose to own."
> Rob Frieden, a telecommunications lawyer and former FCC staffer, said, "Powell sorely underestimated the political fallout. For a lot of people, this decision doesn't pass the smell test. But he's a true believer in the market, and I think it's a courageous move."
> Frieden isn't perturbed by the big-media dominance of radio since deregulation was enacted (no company owned more than 40 stations in 1990; today, Clear Channel owns more than 1200). He said that, with so many information options today, any smart consumer can avoid bland programming.
>
>
> The critics, however, see that argument as an excuse for monopolization. Robert McChesney, a communications expert and author of "Rich Media, Poor Democracy," said that the Republican FCC commissioners aren't really interested in true free-market competition; rather, they practice what he calls "crony capitalism."
> He said: "This decision is a corporate welfare gift. These are companies that rely on government-granted monopolization privileges. This is deregulation on behalf of commercial interests with no pretense of serving the public."
>

How could it be 3? WNYC is privately owned. Are you saying WNYE is simulcasting WNYC's programming?

They may "take" them, but they only play the ones that were already scheduled.

I am looking for tape of three stations in Philadelphia PA from the mid to late 70's.  If you have any air tapes of wmmr, wioq, or wysp from that period please contact me and lets see if we can arrange a deal.
Thanks

They most certainly do take requests, all stations do. Whether they choose to play the song is another story. But the issue is not that, it's that you don't even have a snowball's chance in hell of even connecting to the d.j.

International Broadcasting Operations (IBO) and Broadcasting to Cuba:

The FY 2002 request of $428.2 million for International Broadcasting Operations will provide funding to continue U.S. Government non-military international broadcasting operations consolidated by the International Broadcasting Act of 1994. These operations are under the auspices of the independent Broadcasting Board of Governors and include the International Broadcasting Bureau (IBB), the Voice of America (VOA), Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty (RFE/RL), and Radio Free Asia (RFA).

The IBO request will enable IBB, RFE/RL, and RFA to continue base level operations, including salary and inflation increases. The request includes an additional $5 million to enhance VOA broadcasting to the Middle East, with a focus on diversifying both programming and transmission media.

Broadcasting to Cuba:

The FY 2002 request of $24.9 million funds base level operations for both Radio Marti and TV Marti, including salary and inflation increases. The request includes full funding to support OCB transmission requirements in FY 2002.

A bit lopsided though. There are 25 stations to two public ones... If there were more of the latter and one specialized in country music, then you would have to offer fewer commercials and/or better quality.

The left can't stand that the right is finally having a say in the news. Brokaw, Rather and Jennings are finally having competition in their slanted views.

Portrait of a Media Baron

Source: Common Cause

Act Now: Visit the FCC Action Center.

"Monopoly is a terrible thing until you have it." � Rupert Murdoch
-- The Electronic Republic by Lawrence Grossman

"A consolidation of power the likes of which this country has not seen since William Randolph Hearst." � Senator John McCain (R-AZ) reacting to News Corp's $5.3 billion acquisition of Chris-Craft Industries and its TV stations.

"[M]urdoch has created a personal media empire before which even Citizen Kane would tremble. But, his many detractors would say, Murdoch's success has resulted in the dumbing down of the media, with quality entertainment and journalism replaced by mindless vulgarity. Beyond this, they mutter darkly about his emergence as a voracious political wheeler-dealer." � BBC News, "Rupert Murdoch: Bigger Than Kane" July 31 2002

"[A] media mogul who has singlehandedly lowered the standards of journalism wherever he has gone. His New York Post and his Fox News Channel are blatantly political, hardly confining Murdoch's conservative political ideology to editorials or commentary but infusing it into the news coverage itself." � Richard Cohen, "A Media Empire's Injustices," Washington Post April 22,2003.

Fox is "for the first time in the history of television, a competitive fourth network that provides a uniquely diverse voice in American political discourse�" � FCC Chairman Michael Powell, Memorandum Opinion and Order approving Murdoch's acquisition of Chris-Craft Industries.

Perhaps no one person or company so exemplifies the dangers of media concentration as 72-year-old Keith Rupert Murdoch, an Australian by birth, now a U.S. citizen, who owns media properties in 52 nations, and is reportedly worth $7 billion.

In the United States, Murdoch's empire includes not only a TV network, but also cable outlets, a publishing company, a movie studio, a newspaper. Murdoch has aggressively sought government approval of his acquisitions, and has played hardball to get it.

What Rupert Owns in the United States:
Murdoch and his family own about 29 percent of News Corporation, which he chairs.
In the United States News Corporation owns:
Major publishing houses: HarperCollins; William Morrow; Avon
Television Network: Fox Broadcasting Company
34 Fox Television Stations
Fox Sports
Fox News Channel
TV Guide (part owner)
The Weekly Standard
New York Post
Twentieth Century Fox
TheStreet.com (part owner).
Los Angeles Dodgers

Cities Where Fox Owns Two TV Stations:

He Gets What He Wants

In 1995, the FCC was considering whether Murdoch, an Australian native who became a U.S. citizen, broke the rules and lied to the FCC by contriving to buy U.S. TV stations even though federal law restricts foreign ownership of TV and radio stations. While Murdoch was a U.S. citizen, the FCC determined that News Corp, an Australian corporation, was the true owner of the Fox U.S. stations, violating a federal law that states that foreign companies may own no more than 25 percent of a US TV or radio station. While the FCC was weighing action against Murdoch, Murdoch and his lobbyist paid a visit to then House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-GA). Weeks later, Murdoch's publishing company signed a $4.5 million book deal with Gingrich. The public outcry led Gingrich to give up his advance. There was talk in Congress about passing legislation to permit foreigners to own TV stations. The FCC, acting against the recommendations of FCC staff, and under pressure from Republicans in Congress, took no action against Murdoch, ruling that his starting a fourth TV network was in the public interest.

In 2001, the FCC approved Murdoch's $5.4 billion acquisition of Chris-Craft Industries and its ten local TV stations. The FCC approved the merger, even though it meant that News Corp would own stations that reached about 41 percent of the U.S. television audience, exceeding the current 35 percent cap on audience reach, and despite the fact that News Corp is an Australian company . Then FCC Commissioner Gloria Tristani sharply criticized the FCC ruling. "The transfer of these television station licenses violates the Communications Act and raises serious concerns regarding the ongoing concentration in the ownership of television stations and other media," she wrote, adding that the decision "further diminishes the marketplace of ideas." She added:. "This decision also shows the lengths the Commission will go to avoid standing in the way of media mergers." Powell defended the decision by praising the Fox Network's role in providing "a uniquely diverse voice in American political discourse."

In 2002, the FCC which Tristani accused of never standing in the way of media mergers had a change of heart, when EchoStar attempted to acquire DirecTV, thwarting Murdoch's bid to buy the satellite broadcasting company. For the first time in 36 years, the FCC decided against the corporate merger because of concerns about competition, refusing EchoStar time to negotiate with the Department of Justice and possibly work out some concessions. FCC Chairman Powell said that the "combination of EchoStar and DirecTV would have us replace a vibrant competitive marketplace with a regulated monopoly." The FCC's decision came after a Murdoch lobbying campaign to derail the EchoStar acquisition. According to The Wall Street Journal, Murdoch attended a conference of the National Religious Broadcasters in February 2002 in Nashville. Murdoch promised that he would give them more religious and family programs if News Corp bought DirecTV. Later, Christian activists reportedly sent a petition with several hundred thousand signatures to the Department of Justice urging officials to oppose the EchoStar acquisition. The same month that Murdoch was courting religious broadcasters, Focus on the Family, the National Association of Evangelicals, Morality in Media, the Christian Coalition, the Family Research Council and the American Asssociation of Christian Schools asked the FCC to investigate Murdoch's Fox Network for violating FCC decency regulations.

Murdoch now is lobbying Congress and the FCC to approve his $6.6 billion acquisition of DirecTV. Writing in USAToday, David Lieberman likened the merger to allowing a major food company to buy a grocery store chain. Will Murdoch give priority to Fox programs on his satellite company, will he hike DirecTV's rates? Others worry that he'll extort cable operators by threatening to pull his programs from their networks unless they pay high fees to him, and will force program suppliers to sell their material cheaply so that they can be carried by DirecTV. Nevertheless, the expectation is that the FCC won't block this merger. The Federal Trade Commission, whose bipartisan Commissioners might have given the deal greater scrutiny, will not be reviewing the deal and media observers believe that the Department of Justice is more likely to approve it. "Despite our best efforts, this administration will approve the deal," Jeff Chester, executive director of the Center for Digital Democracy, told TelevisionWeek. "Murdoch gives to the Republican Party and the Republican Party is going to give him DirecTV."

Part interest in daytime AM in S. Georgia with some night power. 1 KW days, 500 watts PSA and 43 watts at night. Single tower. Consultant says it can probably go to 5,000 watts days and still remain non-directional!

Probably.

And, can probably add night power at about 500 watts, using a pattern somewhat similar to the old WNML.

Sadly, the present Tx site is on the wrong side of town for that pattern to work, but I'd bet real estate on the west side of town is reasonably affordable.

I'd probably go with a two-site operation at first, then after I got a license to cover the night operation, I'd probably abandon the present day site (or sell it to a wireless company).

One of your most interesting "deals" to date, Meyer.

Still, at $90,000, cash, this one is not as attractive as the mid-band ND Class B I found for nearly half that price.

Hmmm... most gas regulators I've ever seen, such as the OA2, emit a reddish-blue glow when operating, and also require a filament to fire the gas. This is merely a very small bulb-looking thing, about 1/4" x 1" in size. There is (was) no glow to it at all, nor is there any silver-looking "gidder" inside it, like a vacuum tube has. It's perfectly clear, like a lamp. It has only 2 leads and inside, just a very small fixed gap. It is mounted parallel to the circuit board. with a small jumper securing the nipple end to the board.

I've seen some pretty strange looking parts in broadcast gear before, but this is a new one on me!

Dear Peter:

Thanks for the email and your sage comments. It is WNGA, Nashville, Georgia.

On the air since 1960.

Sure, with it being directional it can probably go with much higher power at not but is it really worth the expense of at least one more tower, assuming there is even enough acreage for another tower. Of course an (expensive!) self-supporting tower could be used with a much smaller "footprint".

I was once offered a chance to buy KMBL in Junction, TX for $55,000 with $7,500 down. What was interesting was that it also included the building PLUS a nice home next door! It was on 1450, 1 KW, class "C". Fulltime of course. The only station in that county.

This was in 1972. I was Chief Engineer for KRBE FM in Houston at the time. Class "C" FM. Now one of the top rated FMs in Houston!

But I got paid $9000.00 a year in Houston so could not come up with the down payment.

Tell me more about that cheap TX AM. I promise to stay out of the deal. Just curious.

If you want to invest, I will see to it that you own a larger than proportinate amount of stock for being FS (First sucker! HI!)

I live in Macon, GA about 2 hours drive away and can manager and engineer the station.

OK. I can picture it now, and you're probably right about it being a surge protector. I've seen something similar, but can't remember where or what it was used for.

Many stations do not take requests; lots of stations don't even answer the phone. Listeners who call in are perhaps 15 of the total listenership, and probably not like the passive 99%.

You seem concerned that your call was not answered. The typical studio has maybe 5, 10, even 15 lines. Even during a morning show, there are perhaps 2 or 3 persons to answer. If the people on the phone get tied up with an important call, or are busy prepping their next segment, they are not going to answer every call. Many will be dropped.

In case you were not aware of it, stations program via computer all their music in advance so that they can achieve the difficult to obtain elements of balance, artist separation, flow, tempo control, rest, etc. Most PDs are not going to let an anonymous caller whose only qualification is having a phone take over their station. Requests may be registered just as a second level confirmation of other research, but they are essentially meaningless sin an adult radio station.

Morning shows selectively harvest useful calls, whether they be to participate in the show or to win in a contest. They can not answer every call... at this station or any other one with hundreds of thousands of listeners in a major market.

Try to understand this.

You probably won't win the lottery this week, either.

NPR says Hollings and Lott, among many others, oppose the FCC ruling, and they're going to invoke a "little-known" procedure for overturning

Between 9/12/01 and April 2002, WNYE simulcast at first all, and then most of WNYC's programming. When WNYC-FM got back on the air, they went their separate ways and the only duplication I know of is Fresh Air and Tavis Smiley (though not at the same times).

BTW AFAIK "Performance Today" isn't available anywhere in NYC, and if Schickele Mix is any more (not that I was a fan), I don't know where.
And don't get me started on Whad'ya Know.

Aren't they both permanently jammed anyway, so if anyone in Cuba

Try telling that to just about every other government in the world.

And the people who enjoy the arts it funds.

You poor dumb sap. Talk radio has you convinced this is about right vs. left. It's not. It's about giant corporations vs. the rest of us.
I'm sure it will surprise you to know such notorious lefties like the NRA and the Family Research Council were opposed to the move. You know, most individually-owned media outlets are actually farther to the right than corporate media. Those voices will be silenced too. All hail Clear Channel. They've been able to do this with the willing passive assistance of drooling stooges like you.

Since the beginning of last week, 710 WOR in New York City has not been transmitting an IBOC/"HD Radio" digital signal.  In its place, they have been broadcasting a regular analog AM signal, with the audio bandwidth thankfully no longer cut in half.

Thus, although it's not in AM Stereo, we now finally get to hear "High Definition" radio from WOR -- and it's not through any kind of digital signal! Alas, here's an example of what 710 WOR now sounds like, on a good ol' GE Superadio III -- a high fidelity AM/FM radio that has been in production for over a decade and can be bought in most Sears stores for $49.99:

ftp://ftp.amstereoradio.com/uploads/710wor.mp3

This is an actual, unretouched recording of WOR received on a Superadio III, about 25 miles away from their transmitter site, as recorded on Sunday, June 1st.

Now, if all AM radios and stations sounded this good -- without any of IBOC's swishy, gritty, wishy-washy digital artifacts -- would we even be bothering about any kind of digital signals on AM?

Analog AM radio may be an 85-year-old technology, but when done right, it can still hold its own against any of today's super-hyped digital techniques.

I think though radio gets through, but TV doesn't.

Would you believe that they are actually very cultural? Could they afford to sound stupid to the Cuban people?

What a contrast with Miami's commercial radio. A cultural wasteland.

But I don't think the point is not so much to subvert Cuba, as to Americanize it.

New Rules Give Big Media Chance to Get Even Bigger

Reuters
Howard James of Eagle, Colo., protested the changes in rules for media companies like the radio giant Clear Channel Communications.
By DAVID D. KIRKPATRICK

As consumer advocates deplored yesterday's changes to media ownership rules as a blow to democracy, investors bought up shares of the biggest media companies.

Both advocates and investors agree that the latest rule changes are likely to let media leviathans like the News Corporation and Viacom fortify their positions while increasing the odds against newcomers and small fry.

The changes mainly loosen restrictions on the ownership of local television stations. But even in the one area � the radio industry � where the Federal Communications Commission tightened the rules on media consolidation, the changes will have the unintended effect of making it more difficult for smaller rivals to challenge the dominance of the industry giant, Clear Channel Communications.

To curtail the swift consolidation of radio broadcasting since its deregulation in 1996, the commission set new limits on the maximum number of stations one company can own in certain cities and towns. The new rules will impede Clear Channel's future expansion. But at the same time, the commission let Clear Channel keep its clusters of stations that exceed the new caps, preventing its smaller competitors like Cumulus Media and Citadel Broadcasting from ever catching up.

Citadel had sought rules that would force it to sell some of its approximately 200 stations, in the hopes of forcing Clear Channel to shed some of its 1,200.

"Whether you call it revolution or evolution, the big companies now have the opportunity to be even bigger and stronger," said Blair Levin, a former top official for the commission who is now an analyst at the investment bank Legg Mason.

"Everyone in the business has to wake up tomorrow and ask, Do I want to be a buyer or a seller? In a relatively condensed time frame � three or five years � there will be a pretty large turnover in the way the map looks," Mr. Levin said.

Together with recent deals like News Corporation's proposed acquisition of the satellite broadcaster DirecTV, the changes may create opportunities and pressures for more mega-mergers.

In a little-noticed shift, the commission declined to reinstate a rule that blocked cable companies from owning local television stations.

For the first time, the cable giant Comcast could now merge with the Walt Disney Company, owner of ABC and some of its owned-and-operated broadcast television stations. AOL Time Warner, owner of Time Warner Cable, could buy NBC from General Electric. Both moves have come up for discussion by analysts and investment bankers as logical responses to match the new power of News Corporation, which will now combine studios, major broadcast and cable networks, and pay television distribution. Another investment banker fantasy: Viacom, owner of Paramount, CBS and MTV, might merge with the other satellite service, Echostar.

The centerpiece of the changes effectively makes it easier for networks, newspaper publishers, radio station owners and others to buy local television stations. Broadcasters sought the new rules to help support free over-the-air stations, which face growing competition from cable and satellite services as well as higher costs for programs and digital upgrading, said Victor Miller, an analyst at Bear, Stearns.

Owning local television stations in tandem with other television or radio stations, newspapers or cable systems in the same market offers the prospect of more economies of scale in producing news or selling advertising.

The change was a victory for the major networks, raising the cap on the maximum share of the national audience one company can reach with its stations to 45 percent from 35. News Corporation's Fox television subsidiary and Viacom's CBS division already own stations reaching about 40 percent of the market.

But owning more stations gives the networks more power over their affiliates in negotiations over fees and what programs to show. It also enables the biggest companies to consolidate the advantages of size over their smaller competitors.

One side effect of the rules, for example, caps the number of stations in some markets that can enjoy the benefits of merging with a local rival. The rules preclude a company from owning more than one of the top four stations in a market, so in markets with just five or six stations one or two will inevitably be left to go it alone. The loners in the market will face a permanent disadvantage, said Tom W. Davidson, a lawyer at Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld who represents the station owner Granite Broadcasting.

In recent weeks, some in the industry, most notably the entrepreneurs Ted Turner and Barry Diller, have raised alarms that the changes will make it harder for new or independent voices to be heard in television programming.

But most analysts do not expect quick or earth-shaking reactions to yesterday's changes, or the start of a race to snap up local stations. "You could argue that not much might come of it," Mr. Miller of Bear, Stearns said. "We don't think there are a lot of natural buyers and few major potential targets."

He said the newspaper publishers McClatchy and Pulitzer and the publisher and station owner Hearst might be candidates to trade or merge with broadcasters. Gannett might buy newspapers and the Tribune Company might buy television stations.

Analysts said broadcasters were likely to swap stations to amass positions in certain markets, effectively carving up territories among themselves.

Dissatisfied companies and consumer advocates are expected to challenge the ruling in court. Yesterday, Clear Channel, the radio broadcaster, denounced the new rules because they limit its ability to expand or to sell some of its clusters of stations without breaking them up. "Radio has got a bad rap," said Andrew Levin, a spokesman for Clear Channel. He called it "an urban myth" that the industry's ownership had become concentrated.

"Everyone has something to litigate about," said Michael Russell, an analyst at Morgan Stanley, noting that recent F.C.C. decisions have often been overturned by courts. "That is going to be the hard part of all this. This was as we expected, but is this going to be what we get?"

If WNYC was off the air there couldn't have been a 3-way simulcast. It was all done as a result of 9/11 and isn't a normal occurrance.

Unlike most commercial networks, NPR and the other non-commercial nets have more than one affiliate in a market. That doesn't constitute a simulcast, particularly if the times are different.

I remember when new cars all had AM stereo.  What happened to that?   Pay radio is a drop in the bucket compared to terrestrial radio, and would have to drastically increase its rate of growth to give terrestrial radio a run for its money.

In all the developed countries but America, the arts are funded by the State. Does that tells us something?

Commercialism turns a potential medium for culture into a platform for their wares. Does that tells us something?

The following quote talks about newspapers, but it got some resemblance to radio, doesn't it?

"Their constant yelping about a free press means, with a few honorable exceptions, freedom to peddle scandal, crime, sex, sensationalism, hate, innuendo and the political and financial uses of propaganda. A newspaper is a business out to make money through advertising revenue.
That is predicated on the circulation and you know what circulation depends on."

-Raymond Chandler (1888-1959), U.S. author. Harlan Potter, in The Long Goodbye, ch. 32 (1954).

No other government in the world has the U.S. Constitution.  It is not the function of government to take money from me by force and spend it so a small minority of people can "enjoy the arts."  If enough people want to "enjoy the arts" then the free market will take care of that.

If the three you mention are biased and that's wrong why is it OK for the "other" side to to be biased? Now we'll all have to watch everything and figure out which truth is truer.

Somehow offering news slanted in the other direction doesn't seem like the correct solution to providing accuracy. I didn't notice FOX reporting on the FCC's change in policy any more than the "slanted" news media.

Of course, FOX stands to gain a lot. Wouldn't want the public to know what's going on and mess it all up.

No, Meyer has had others.

The other mid band station that Meyer, myself and two others were involved with, WLYC came good other than for the fact we did not factor in that it would take six months from putting the old girl back on-air to take her into profitability.

My group were going to run out of funds.

However, we did succeed in bringing her back to life. Ownership taken on by a local girl and investors and WLYC is slowly climbing up the charts.

I learned a lot from that experience, especially living here in England.

We are never the less waiting to try again when the right deal comes up.

The regional clear channel of 1050 in our part of Pa was real nice, even at night while all the other AM's in town struggled with atmospherics at the top end.

Do tell me more via private mail on the station you found for sale.

He fed's only allow me a 20% crack of the whip being a foreigner.

Hello,

I'm looking for the best method to file a complaint regarding KHAY(FM), if the problem I've described below is (as I'd like to think) someone's fault (and therefore could be remidied) as opposed to some _really really wierd_ natrual phenomena (which there is probably no cure for).

The stations involved:

- KFMB(FM) 100.7, owned by Midwest Television, using a "Hot AC" format, 30kw ERP; San Diego, CA. (36km from the Mexican border)

- KHAY(FM) 100.7, owned by Cumulus Licensing Corp, using a country format 39kw ERP; Ventura, CA. (According to the FCC, 288km from Mexico border)

The situation: I live in Temecula, CA, which is a tad north of the San Diego county line, and I commute to school/work in San Marcos, CA, which is a little less than 1/2 way between Temecula and the City of San Diego. I listen to KFMB to and from school, and typically it is problem free. Lately, KHAY has been "creeping into" KFMB's signal, to the point where in most areas of Temecula you hear a poor mix of the two, with KHAY being the more powerful, and it is getting worse (i.e. creeping south) on a daily basis. Throughout the drive through the I-15 cooridoor I am now being subjected to bursts of KHAY's programming at random locations.

This is a more-or-less recent event that doesn't seem to have anything to do with the weather. In addition, this has happened twice before, and (coincidentally?) within 24 hours of me sending an email to fccinfo@fcc.gov asking about complaint process the problem the problem was resolved (most recent was ~10/14/02). However, even though the autoresponder promised a response in not more than 20 days I never received a response... So I'm looking for the formal process involved here.

(I don't know much about ERP, but it seems a bit odd to me that a station at 39kw ERP ~200km away could take out a station at 30kw ERP ~30km away... Explanations?)

Thanks,

Lincoln

I believe we are confusing some statistical terms here. There is a difference between the median and the average. The median separes one half from the other in a population. If you count the number of members of a population, and divided the result in half, you would find the median. The average is a figure applying to the whole population. If you added the IQ scores of every member of a population, and divided the result by the number of members in it, you would find the "average IQ." The resulting number will not necessarily split the population in equal halves, although proponents of the "bell curve" swear it will. I find it quite improbable that the bell curve could be made to accurately represent the IQ of a population. It would mean that there are the same number of mentally retarded individuals as there are intelligent ones. If this were so, the population of the mental retardation centers would greatly surpass that of the universities, as students are transient while mentally retarded individuals remain in specialized care all their lives.

There are lies, dammed lies, and then there are statistics.

I use an old RipFlash (128mb), actually five of them, to record various Imus feeds every day, without a computer (no OS, no USB port), and then just play the audio from them into RealEncoder, which the computer does have, to save them if I want.  That works okay, better than tape.

The RipFlash devices are temperamental however; I've had 2 of the 5 back on warranty (replaced one, repaired one which apparently only needed reformatting, which you could do yourself if you had the computer they envisioned you having).

The audio jack is one weak point; the other is buggy software that doesn't like fast button pushes.  Wait until it processes one button push before trying another.

Used with great care, they're terrific.  One holds about 19h of pretty good quality voice at 16kbs.

Later models claim more hours in a different format, and may for all I know have solved the difficulties.

You can write Pogo Products! and they respond to email, if you have questions about what computer and OS.

I find them worthwhile or I wouldn't have gotten up to five of them. You have to treat them very well, is all.

Note that "Radio Assist Ministries" office address is in Twin Falls, Idaho - same city as CSN.  Now, that's not much evidence<grin> - but I have heard it suggested there is a relationship.  Interesting to note that all the Radio Assist Ministries applications around here specify secular commercial stations as the station to be relayed.  Causes me to think they don't want anybody to know who they really intend to rebroadcast.  It's easy to change the "primary" after getting a license.

Satellite feed is available to all non-commercial stations regardless of the nature of the ownership.  My understanding is that Moody Bible Institute was responsible for getting it approved (though they haven't taken much advantage of it!) and college/university stations aren't doing a whole lot of it either.

> This also could trash the LPFM service by making it next to impossible to put one in where it is badly needed, either for format diversity reasons or community needs reasons.  The large religious networks rarely provide local info if at all to listeners in the more distant areas.  A couple provide time for a local weather forecast and maybe a couple of announcements for their full-power O&O's and affiliate stations, but darn little is ever heard otherwise.

My understanding is that translators are allowed only to originate 60 seconds per hour of fundraising, everything else must be relayed verbatim from the primary.

Interesting incident a few years back.  While travelling in an unfamiliar area, a good program on 88.1 ended and I started tuning up the dial in search of something else to listen to.  A bit higher in the 88-92 band, my attention was grabbed by someone transmitting the EAS data bursts.  The bursts ended, and I heard "The National Weather Service has issued a Severe Thunderstorm Warning for Marin County in Northern California".

Problem is, I was in Meridian, Mississippi at the time!  (no, there was not a super multi-hop sporadic-E opening in progress...)  It was a translator of a San Francisco religious station.

The censor assigned to the military unit that Rivera was broadcasting from was standing right next to him.  Since he was with a unit and discussing material from the unit, military regulations required the censor.  Censors have long been used, whether or not a reporter is 'embedded.'   And nobody was harmed or put in danger as a result of the broadcast.  If you missed it that Sunday night, it really wasn't much at all.
Afterwards the anchor quipped that they didn't need a screenwriter anymore.

Attention:
Do not listen to B101 Fm-WBEB Philadelphia because...

1)They do not care at all about their listeners.
2)Their morning show team refuses to answer the phones even while a contest is in progress and they have no winner.
3)Their telephone lines, both local and toll-free, are disconnecting callers if nobody picks up within 2 minutes, which makes it impossible to get through to station. Yet they do not care to do anything about it.
4)Their morning show team misleads and deceives listeners as well as disrespects and insults their intelligence.

Why? Most universites are full of students of around average IQ..

The disadvantage is real-time transfer, ie one hour recording takes one hour again to transfer :-(

I did: Unfortunately the only answer is to buy Virtual PC, an emulator for a PC. While this works well (the Virtual PC in some respects is better than an actual PC), it costs money and I do not like the overhead (paying Microsoft dollars, that is).
And the machine needs a program, you cannot connect it like a USB memory stick and copy the files, unfortunately.

Actually, by the time Dick Orkin got around to "The Tooth Fairy," he had not been with WCFL for several years. Dick was one of the many people Ken Draper had brought in in 1965 to turn the sleepy "Voice of Labor" into a powerhouse Top 40--his title was "director of creative programming," which allowed him to go into many areas, the most famous of which was "Chickenman." He followed that up in 1967 with another serial called "Amazon Ace," which ran 26 weeks. In 1968, Draper was fired by the Chicago Federation of Labor because he supposedly spent too much money on the station with unacceptable results (as in, they weren't kicking WLS' butt, although they'd become very competitive with 'LS--Draper also did on-air editorials that were strongly anti-Vietnam, another sore point with the hawkish, Mayor Daley-supporting Federation). Although most of the DJs did stick around for a while, a lot of the behind-the-scenes people at the station either quit or got fired along with Draper, including Orkin.

He then started his famous commercial production business and eventually decided to develop "The Secret Adventures of the Tooth Fairy" for national syndication. WLS was the flagship station for the show, and it aired exclusively on Larry Lujack's morning drive show. However, Lujack supposedly got tired of the show and took it off before the series had come to its completion--at least so I've believed.

i've been sick lately, so imagine my surprise when i checked my email today and discovered that Brave New Waves emailed me yesterday to let me know they were going to play a song from my Interim EP... last night!. if i had known, i would have attempted to break out of my sickly state long enough to tune in. they said it would be in the first 15 minutes of the show. i just need to know, in case anyone was listening and remembers, or even better if someone taped it (the may 20th show), which song did they play, and what did they say about it? i've been dreaming of being played on BNW for ages, and now that it's become a reality, i missed it! any info would be appreciated, thank you.

No, it is one of the very, very, very few remaining major market locally owned independent stations in the US. And its owner is one of the most progressive, involved broadcasters in the country.

It just might be, since the station is generally #1, that they get more calls than a couple of people can possibly answer.

The Great Media Gulp

By WILLIAM SAFIRE

WASHINGTON

The future formation of American public opinion has fallen into the lap of an ambitious 36-year-old lawyer whose name you never heard. On June 2, after deliberations conducted behind closed doors, he will decide the fate of media large and small, print and broadcast. No other decision made in Washington will more directly affect how you will be informed, persuaded and entertained.

His name is Kevin Martin. He and his wife, Catherine, now Vice President Dick Cheney's public affairs adviser, are the most puissant young "power couple" in the capital. He is one of three Republican members of the five-person Federal Communications Commission, and because he recently broke ranks with his chairman, Michael Powell (Colin's son), on a telecom controversy, this engaging North Carolinian has become the swing vote on the power play that has media moguls salivating.

The F.C.C. proposal remains officially secret to avoid public comment but was forced into the open by the two commission Democrats. It would end the ban in most cities of cross-ownership of television stations and newspapers, allowing such companies as The New York Times, Washington Post and Chicago Tribune to gobble up ever more electronic outlets. It would permit Viacom, Disney and AOL Time Warner to control TV stations with nearly half the national audience. In the largest cities, it would allow owners of "only" two TV stations to buy a third.

We've already seen what happened when the F.C.C. allowed the monopolization of local radio: today three companies own half the stations in America, delivering a homogenized product that neglects local news coverage and dictates music sales.

And the F.C.C. has abdicated enforcement of the "public interest" requirement in issuing licenses. Time was, broadcasters had to regularly reapply and show public-interest programming to earn continuance; now they mail the F.C.C. a postcard every eight years that nobody reads.

Ah, but aren't viewers and readers now blessed with a whole new world of hot competition through cable and the Internet? That's the shucks-we're-no-monopolists line that Rupert Murdoch will take today in testimony before the pussycats of John McCain's Senate Commerce Committee.

The answer is no. Many artists, consumers, musicians and journalists know that such protestations of cable and Internet competition by the huge dominators of content and communication are malarkey. The overwhelming amount of news and entertainment comes via broadcast and print. Putting those outlets in fewer and bigger hands profits the few at the cost of the many.

Does that sound un-conservative? Not to me. The concentration of power - political, corporate, media, cultural - should be anathema to conservatives. The diffusion of power through local control, thereby encouraging individual participation, is the essence of federalism and the greatest expression of democracy.

Why do we have more channels but fewer real choices today? Because the ownership of our means of communication is shrinking. Moguls glory in amalgamation, but more individuals than they realize resent the loss of local control and community identity.

We opponents of megamergers and cross-ownership are afflicted with what sociologists call "pluralistic ignorance." Libertarians pop off from what we assume to be the fringes of the left and right wings, but do not yet realize that we outnumber the exponents of the new collectivist efficiency.

That's why I march uncomfortably alongside CodePink Women for Peace and the National Rifle Association, between liberal Olympia Snowe and conservative Ted Stevens under the banner of "localism, competition and diversity of views." That's why, too, we resent the conflicted refusal of most networks, stations and their putative purchasers to report fully and in prime time on their owners' power grab scheduled for June 2.

Must broadcasters of news act only on behalf of the powerful broadcast lobby? Are they not obligated, in the long-forgotten "public interest," to call to the attention of viewers and readers the arrogance of a regulatory commission that will not hold extended public hearings on the most controversial decision in its history?

So much of our lives should not be in the hands of one swing-vote commissioner. Let's debate this out in the open, take polls, get the president on the record and turn up the heat.

This statement is false.  There were no censors.  His broadcast was not stopped.  He was not censored.

Again, this statement is false.  To quote from the official DoD guidance on embedded reporters, paragraph 3 (R),  "there is no general review process for media products."  Paragraph 6 (A) states, "media products will not be subject to security review or censorship except as stated in paragraph 6 (A)(1)."  That paragraph states, "prior to allowing access" to sensitive information about troop movements and the like, the commander will "take prudent precautions to ensure the security of that information.  The primary safeguard will be to brief media in advance about what information is sensitive and what the parameters are for covering this type of information.  If media are inadvertently exposed to sensitive information they should be briefed after exposure on what information they should avoid covering."  The guidance goes on to permit commanders to allow access to sensitive information if the reporter voluntarily agrees to a security review, but then states that such a review "will not involve any editorial changes." Paragraph 6 (A)(2) states, "Media products will not be confiscated or otherwise impounded." These regulations clearly preclude censorship in the generally-understood sense of that word.

The policy used in this war was "security at the source," which in plain English means if a commander doesn't want something reported, he should not reveal the information. There was also a detailed and explicit list of guidelines to which reporters were to agree in advance, which Geraldo clearly violated. But the penalty for such violations was not censorship, it was expulsion. After Geraldo's live, uncensored broadcast, the commander ordered his expulsion. But Geraldo did not leave, instead filing yet another report the next morning.

> Censors have long been used

In previous wars, true.

> And nobody was harmed or put in danger as a result of the >broadcast.

A point I never disputed.

To counter the ready-fire-aim post above, here is a profile from Broadcasting Magazine of one of the radio industry's finest operators.

"Jerry Lee

wbeb(fm) Philadelphia

Staff Broadcasting & Cable
9/18/2000

Jerry Lee's goal in life is not merely to serve the listeners of his radio station, Philadelphia ratings leader WBEB(FM). He's intent on ridding the city of crime and poverty. And while he's at it, he just might change the rest of the world.

Lee is well known for his generosity to his community, academia and the broadcasting industry. "Jerry Lee is one of the most forward-thinking owners in radio," says Eddie Fritts, chairman of the National Association of Broadcasters. "His station combines cutting-edge technology with a strong commitment to community service, and his track record of success speaks for itself."

Indeed, Lee led the station to No. 1 among Philadelphia listeners age 12 and older this past summer, according to Arbitron. [wbeb took first place overall in the market for the first time in spring 1999, when the soft rocker finally topped arch-rival kyw(am).]

When it comes to cash, wbeb is No. 3 in Philly, with $24 million in estimated 1999 revenue, according to BIA Research. Nationally, the station ranks 66th. But Lee is fond of pointing out that Bala Cynwyd, Pa.-based wbeb is the only non-corporate-owned FM among the 66.

Lee is not shy about using his position to pursue his social goals. His philosophy is to "serve the community off the radio station." And "because I have a radio station, I'm able to pick up the phone and make things happen."

For example, while wbeb offers the typical slate of PSAs and Sunday-morning public-affairs shows, Lee takes community service further. The station has been honored for its outreach, including a "Kids for Kids Holiday Stocking Program" and Kindervision, which teaches children to protect themselves from random abduction.

Lee is "a visionary-type person. He's always way out in front of everybody else. He always sets big goals," says wbeb's founder and 51% owner Dave Kurtz. Kurtz brought Lee in as sales manager two weeks before the station went on the air in 1963. But because he couldn't afford to pay Lee his full salary, he gave him interest in the station, which amounts to 49% today.

With the proceeds of their success, Lee and Kurtz jointly fund the Jerry Lee Foundation, which provides software and teacher training to help some 10,000 Philadelphia students improve their reading skills. The foundation also helps fund "The Philly Project," which works to reduce prison recidivism.

Lee himself donated $25,000 in 1997 to create "The Jerry Lee Online Archive" of historic radio and TV photographs at the University of Maryland, according to the university's Web site. And last year, the foundation launched an annual program to award $2,500 in cash to the radio or TV station with the best news series, PSA or community program addressing local crime. The second winner is to be announced on Friday.

The Jerry Lee Foundation also funds programs at UM, where Lee chairs the advisory board of Maryland's Crime Prevention Effectiveness Program. The foundation pays for a "Jerry Lee Research Professor of Criminology" and two assistant research professors in the university's Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice. And it supports the new Washington office of the University of Pennsylvania's Fels Center of Government.

Although Lee declines to disclose specifics of his wealth, UM says it has received $100,000 to $500,000 from the foundation.

On Dec. 5, Lee plans to unveil what may be the culmination of his life's work. A foundation endowment "in the seven figures" will create the Jerry Lee Center of Criminology at a major university, which he declines to name as yet (see Airtime, page 85). Lee is one of the last of the independent broadcasters who not only take an interest in their communities but also strive to improve them.

Besides Lee, there are only three "non-group" owners in Philadelphia. Of the city's 28 radio stations, there are just 13 separate owners. Clear Channel dominates with six stations, followed by Infinity with five (including kyw) and Greater Media with four.

While the number of independent stations dwindles, Lee crows that wbeb "couldn't be No. 1 today without consolidation."

That's because, as big companies rack up huge debt to buy more stations, wbeb is debt-free. And because of that, Lee says, he can spend whatever it takes to keep the station on top. "It's suicidal to try to come up against us. I'm willing to spend now to get the payoff down the line."

Although he has had offers for wbeb�a recent one was for $250 million, he says�he refuses so vociferously that would-be buyers generally leave him alone. He did sell wbeb sister WBEB(AM) to Salem Communications in 1993, netting $4 million.

Lee opts to spend most of wbeb's money on research and promotion. "We research out every song that we play against [wbeb's] target" audience of women age 25-54. (Advertising is likewise studied for its effects on that group.) Using the results, wbeb refines its 400-song playlist. That doesn't sound like much music, but "people never get tired of hearing their favorite songs."

Lee got his first taste of broadcasting while organizing dances at Ohio's Youngstown University. After graduating in 1960 with a BA in economics, he turned to management consulting in an effort "to go straight," he jokes. But, "I hated it."

He ran into a college friend who owned a radio station near Akron, Ohio. The friend needed a sales rep for his early version of syndicated programming, a precursor of the Beautiful Music format. The problem then was, "nobody [had] ever heard of a program service," Lee says. "Nobody would buy it." He was fired after nine weeks.

He surfaced as manager of WAQE-FM (now wlif) Baltimore, one of the stations that had rejected his pitch for the service. But Kurtz, who also had declined to be Lee's customer earlier, had a hankering to start a 24-hour stereo station in Philadelphia.

Four months after going on the air, the FM, then known as wdvr and playing Beautiful Music, was ranked No. 1 in the market. One reason for the rapid success, he remembers, was that, "in those days, everyone [else] went off the air at midnight." Wbeb was Philadelphia's 24-hour FM.

Anyone hoping to launch a successful operation like wbeb today had better start in a much smaller market, Lee advises. "Single stations cannot survive in a major market with debt." Better yet, "if you really want to start a radio station, start an Internet radio station." He considers wbeb's Web site "an extension of my radio station.�The Internet is going to make me a fortune."

Thanks for info - actually I have episode 0 - 166 of Tooth Fairy, here is the problem.
Episode 166 has Tooth on his Molarcycle going to DC to meet the pres and also acquire the first tooth convention site. Episode 166 has the Molarcycle breaking down on the way to DC and a "helpful" citizen willing to help - after the Tooth Fairy exposes his financial situation (bags of coins). This is the last OTR show I can find, but I would swear I remember shows after this - but it has been a LONG time ago when I listened to these as "new" shows.

Are there episodes after 166 that at least conclude this segment? Is my memory totally wrong to think I heard episodes after this segment? Could be wishful thinking I guess and bad memory at this point.

Secret Adventures of the Tooth Fairy? What was this?

Any help appreciated.

Am not familiar with Amazon Ace - will check into it.

Story Lady was also good though :-)

Army Orders Troops to Seize TV Station in Northwest Iraq

A Major Balks at Directive
And Gets Relieved of Duty

By YOCHI J. DREAZEN
Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

MOSUL, IRAQ -- The U.S. Army issued orders for troops to seize this city's only television station, leading an officer here to raise questions about the Army's dedication to free speech in postwar Iraq, people familiar with the situation said. The officer refused the order and was relieved of duty.

The directive came from the 101st Airborne Division's commander, Maj. Gen. David Petraeus, who has ultimate authority in Mosul and the rest of northwest Iraq, the people familiar with the matter said. They said it was aimed at blocking the station from continuing to broadcast the Arabic news channel al-Jazeera.

The order has not yet been publicized in Mosul, which has no radio station or newspaper, and Army officials here said they had no plans to do so. Late Wednesday night, it wasn't clear whether soldiers who had been on the grounds of the station, which is near the city's university, had moved into the station building itself and taken control.

The incident may add fuel to suspicions in the Arab world about the Bush administration's promises to bring open elections and other Western-style freedoms to Iraq. The move also could further strain the already-tense relations between the Pentagon and al-Jazeera, a satellite channel based in Qatar that is the most popular source of news throughout the Mideast. Pentagon officials have long accused al-Jazeera of being biased against the U.S. and criticized it for broadcasting material such as bloody images of civilians killed or maimed by U.S. bombs. Al-Jazeera's Baghdad office was unintentionally shelled by the U.S. on April 8, killing one journalist.

The order to seize the station, which had been under the unofficial control of a local Iraqi militia leader, was discussed at a contentious meeting among American officials based in a former hospital here. During the two-hour meeting last night, the head of the Army public-affairs office in Mosul, Maj. Charmaine Means, said she could not agree to seizing the station and posting troops there. She argued that the presence of armed soldiers would intimidate the station's Arab employees into airing only programming produced by, or acceptable to, the American military.

Maj. Means was told to pick up a nearby telephone. On the other end, Col. Thomas Schoenback, chief of staff of the division, ordered her to go along with Gen. Petraeus's plan to take the station, according to people familiar with the matter. When she again refused, he relieved her of her duties. A short time later, she was told that she would be flown out of Mosul on an Army helicopter early Thursday morning.

Neither Gen. Petraeus nor Col. Schoenback could be reached for comment. In Washington, the Pentagon could not immediately confirm the order to seize the station.

Officers familiar with the matter said military officials were uncomfortable with the station's programming. They wanted to apply a U.S. military formula for gauging the station's accuracy, balance and trustworthiness, and if the programming fell short, the station would be shut.

As word of the decision filtered through the main American base in downtown Mosul, several officers condemned it. The officers said they were particularly incensed that the military had allowed the Iraqi militia leader, Meshaam Jabori, to broadcast political messages for weeks without interference, only to seize it Wednesday after it occasionally showed al-Jazeera programming. The station also airs programming from other Arabic news channels, as well as from NBC. Mr. Jabori couldn't be reached for comment.

Huh?  It's a function of $$$.  Each receiver costs $129 retail, or $70 for the XMPC.  Each subscription is $9.99 for the first and $6.99 for 2-4.  Each cradle is $60 and the boom box is $99.

You can move either the Sky-Fi receiver from the boom box to the cradle, or get the XMPC for home with a $60 set of speakers and you're good to go.

The Bush administration has stepped up anti-Castro propaganda with radio and TV broadcasts beamed to Cuba from an aircraft.

The island's Communist government condemned the campaign as a "vulgar provocation".

A US official says the United States broadcast on three new radio frequencies, two short wave, one medium wave and one VHF TV channel to Cuba for four-hours by using a C-130 aircraft for the first time.

"Is this another blatant and vulgar provocation against Cuba?" the ruling Communist Party daily Granma said in a front-page editorial.

Havana also accuses Washington of allowing a Miami exile group to beam television signals from a small plane flown 20 kilometres offshore in violation of international broadcasting rules.

The broadcasts were part of a stepped-up campaign by the Bush administration to bombard Cuba with information, and support dissidents seeking democratic reforms under President Fidel Castro's one-party state.

Broadcasts by Radio Marti, named after Cuba's independence hero, began in 1983 during the Reagan administration and are listened to in parts of the island.

TV Marti, also funded by US taxpayers and begun in 1990, was successfully jammed by Cuba.

On Tuesday night, Radio and TV Marti broadcast President George W Bush's message to Cubans on the anniversary of Cuba's 1902 birth as an independent nation.

Mr Bush denounced President Castro and said he hoped his 44-year rule would soon end.

Washington also initiated a three-day test by beaming TV Marti via the DirecTV digital satellite service.

US officials say there are between 10,000 and 15,000 DirecTV satellite dishes in Cuba, which are difficult to jam.

Some Cuban exiles in Miami believe that a media blitz will do more to bring about political change in Cuba than the economic sanctions Washington imposed after Castro's 1959 revolution.

Dude, that's one of those civic "courtesy" stations for drivers.  You must live right next door to that landfill where the txer is.  Write your local officials to complain, as well as FCC!

Then drive about 10 miles away and tune in 1630.  Betcha the wrinkled

Hello all. I stumbled across your group while searching for information about applying for an LPFM license for a community in rural upstate NY.

I apologize if this is an oft asked question, but could someone tell me when the next (or rumored next) filing window might be?

I'd also really appreciate pointers to helpful web resources (aside from the obvious FCC pages, which I've bookmarked) for LPFM issues.

Thanks very much in advance.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1345  - May 23, 2003

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1345 with a release date of Friday, May 23 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.  Hello and welcome to a very special Amateur Radio Newsline being recorded live  in the closing hours of Hamvention 2003.  I'm Don Wilbanks, AE5DW at the combined RAIN, Amateur Radio Newsline and WA0RCR booth in Hara Arena in Trotwood Ohio.  Trotwood is a suburb of Dayton for those of you not familiar with the area.  With me are Newsline's Producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, RAIN Producer Hap Holly --  and a host of other people -- most probably wondering what we are up to.

Its now just a bit after 10 a.m. on Sunday May 18th.  Bill has been out in the crowd with his tape recorder.  So tell me, what have you been seeing and hearing.

(This is an audio only report at http://www.arnewsline.org)

--

I guess we all agree that its been a fun weekend and we will have more on Hamvention 2003 next week.  But there lots of other news including a new ham radio allocation at 5 MHz and a proposed New Jersey law that could bring a ban on operating a two way radio -- or even changing a station on a car radio.  We will have that and more, after this.  (ARNewsline™)

RADIO RULES:  FCC SAYS PARTIAL YES AT 5 MHZ

The FCC has granted hams five discrete 2.8-kHz-wide channels in the vicinity of 5 Mhz.  This, in a Report and Order issued on Wednesday May 14th.  But, says an ARRL Bulletin, the Commission has has declined to grant amateurs any allocation at 136 kHz at this time.

In its Notice of Proposed Rule Making a year ago, the FCC appeared inclined to go along with both requests which had come from the American Radio Relay League. But opposition arose along the way with power companies fearful of interference to their operations at 136 kHz. The National Telecommunications and Information Administration filed against the 5 Mhz grant based on a possible need for the requested band by federal government users. The five channels granted the Amateur Service are seen as a compromise.

The FCC did agree to elevate the Amateur Service, but not the Amateur-Satellite Service, to primary status at 2400 to 2402 MHz. The changes to the Part 97 go into effect 30 days after publication in The Federal Register. (FCC, ARRL)

RADIO LAW: N.J. MAY BAN “EVERYTHING” WHILE DRIVING

New Jersey state lawmakers are proposing a wide ranging law that would not only ban the use of cellular telephones in motion, it might also ban just about anything else a person might do while driving a car including sipping coffee or changing a radio station.

According to the May 11th Ocean County Observer, the state Assembly Transportation Committee has released a bill to better define what is and what is not considered to be reckless driving. Proponents of the measure call it an effort to reduce motor vehicle accidents caused by driver distraction.

The proposed legislation says distracting behavior includes the use of communication technology such as cellular telephones, pagers, fax machines, locating devices, video players, two-way dispatch and citizen band radios. Also on the list is the normal AM/FM radios found in most vehicles along with compact disc and tape players.

The bill also defines a variety of things that have been labeled as distracting behavior. On this list are such activities as personal grooming, consuming food or beverages, reading and tending to unsecure pets. All would be considered as reckless driving.

State Representative John Wisniewski of Middlesex is chairman of the Transportation Committee and the primary sponsor of the bill. He says that giving the police a clear mandate to stop motorists who drive inattentively is logical way to stem the tide of roadway crashes and fatalities. And while Amateur Radio is not specifically mentioned it could easily fall under the two-way radio portion of the measure if it becomes state law. (W2CE)

RESCUE RADIO: NHC TO PERFORM 2003 HURRICANE TEST

Mark June 1st for the National Hurricane Center's Amateur Radio station WX4NHC to conduct its 2003 hurricane season on-the-air station test. According to an ARRL bulletin the station will take to the airwaves on Sunday, June 1st from 13:00 to 22:00 U-T-C.

Coordinator John McHugh, KU4GY, says the purpose of the annual test is to check out all of the WX4NHC radios, computers and antennas using as many modes and frequencies as possible. Some R-F-I monitoring also will be done.

Listen for WX4NHC on HF worldwide and VHF and UHF in South Florida. Anyone making contact is asked to provide a signal report, location and brief weather report. QSL cards are available via W4VBQ. Please be sure to include a self addressed stamped envelope with any QSL requests.

The event will mark the first time the National Hurricane Center will use its new call sign for this event. In years past it operated as W4EHW. (ARRL)

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO RESPONSIBLE FOR TORNADIO WARNING SYSTEM

An interesting side note to our coverage of this years tornado season and the role that ham radio is playing in storm spotting and relief efforts. We recently learned that one Kentucky city has ham radio to thank for its early warning system.

The ham responsible is retired ARRL president George Wilson, W4OYI. Wilson suggested the installation of the system following a twister that hit Brandenburg, Kentucky in April of 1974. Wilson learned that it had taken more than 40 minutes for severe weather alerts to reach Owensboro from the National Weather Service in Evansville Indiana, about 40 miles away. Thanks to the efforts of W4OYI, a month later local warnings were coming from a NOAA weather radio monitoring system installed in Owensboro. (ARNewslime™)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: KB2GSD BACKS AWAY FROM WJMK

Former CBS News anchor Walter Cronkite, KB2GSD, has severed his agreement with a Florida production company. This, after having signed to host for a series of corporate-sponsored videos, resembling news reports, that are broadcast on public television stations.

The New York Times reports that a production company called WJMK had recently hired Cronkite and Cable News Network anchorman Aaron Brown to replace Morley Safer of "60 Minutes" as hosts of a series called “American Medical Review.” After it was learned that pharmasutical manufacturers and other health care companies pay WJMK about $15,000 each to have their products featured in the videos the high profile hosts began to drop away. Brown backed out of his agreement with WJMK on Wednesday May 7th with Cronkite following on Thursday May 8th.

Marlene Adler who is Walter Cronkite's chief of staff, said that the retired newsman had agreed to become a host after being assured that the videos would be educational. She said he had now concluded that WJMK was using the videos, at least in part, for commercial promotion, adding that "Mr. Cronkite does not do product endorsements, and will not."

This is not the first time Cronkite has had a a problem with others using his voice or likeness. Back in January Cronkite's Attorney, Ronald S. Konecky, demanded that Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, immediately cease using a previously recorded station ID made by Cronkite several years ago. He also told Baxter to desist from the use of Cronkite's name and likeness, in any medium, and on any basis whatsoever. (ARNewsline™ and published news reports)

ON SAFARI: A DX’PEDITION WITH A NEW TWIST

A major Dxpedition is coming up but this one is rather different. Amateur Radio Nerwsline’s Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details on this rather unique operation:

IN3QBR, IN3ZNR and AA4NN are teaming up to go on the air as the "African Double Jump Dxpedition from South Africa, Lesotho and Botswana starting at the end of June. According to their Web page, the team will meet with ZS6WPX, who will become their tour guide. Between June 28th and July 1st, the team will go on a Safari. There is a possibility they may do some operating using callsigns portable Zed S, but on July 2nd, they head to Gaborone City Botswana where they plan to erect their antennas and operate from their hotel that day. Callsigns mentioned so far are A25NN and A25ZNR.

They will leave for the town of Rustenburg on July 5th, and will travel to Sun City, South Africa. There "MAY" be some activity portable Zed S and early July 7th, they will leave for Lesotho and expect to be there late afternoon. Expected callsigns will be 7P8JB and 7P8NR. Activity will last until July 11th. They depart for Johannesburg on July 12th and expect to leave for home July 13th.

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: EUROPEAN TV LOVES SMS

Unforeseen by most media analysts, European TV networks started using short message services as an interactive channel in the late 90's. Today, many of them have embraced SMS text messaging-interactivity as a revenue-generating feature in some form, whether it be chats, voting, comments, reminders, and many other things. And believe it or not, hardly an hour of the broadcast day goes by without some channel encouraging the viewer to send messages. (Media Network)

THAT FINAL ITEM: THE EVER CHANGING BRAIN

Finally this week, if you have ever taken a taxi in a major city you may have wondered how the taxi drivers know how to reach even the most obscure destination without a street map or a hint from their passengers. Well, a new study indicates cabbies are working their brains so hard that they become enlarged in the zone associated with navigation.

According to the study published in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, the drivers' brains adapted to help them store a detailed mental map of the city. This, by shrinking in one area to allow growth in another called the rear hippocampus.

In the latest study, researchers at University College, London University compared the brains of 16 male taxi drivers with those of 50 other men of a similar age. They found that among the cabbies, the back of the hippocampus, the part of the brain associated with spatial memory, was larger than it was in the comparison group.

Scientists had previously reported differences in the structure of the brain between musicians and non-musicians.  Researchers say that evidence that the brain is physically able to change according to the way it is used could be important  in understanding human development.  (Science Today)

Do you have call letters to his station?  Any slogans would be welcome.  I have been in Macon since 1966. I would advise floating it past the older stations such as WMAC (US Broadcasting).  Do these call letters ring a bell?
WNEX, WQBZ, WMAZ, WAYS, WRBN, WIZY, WDEN, WCRY, WBML, WPGA, WMRW and a few others from the past ten years when stations changed call letters like crazy.
Thanks

Yes, Sirius uses live announcers to into the music.  It's very quick and too the point.  Certainly refreshing after hearing all those car commercials here at home.  I'd suggest Sirius because they are commercial-free and the audio is truly excellent quality!

Actually I'm 40 miles away. The question also is who is the audience for this? Somebody tuned to a vacant frequency who comes up on it?

No, it has to be somebody tuned to Imus.

A ``don't litter'' loop played over and over is a bureaucrat's idea. ``Intra-system goals come first'' when you're part of a bureaucracy.

The correct arrangement of government is the reverse: microphones on the outside of the building and speakers on the inside, instructing the bureaucrats. Put a bureaucrat in charge and this is what you get.

It's a situation repeated across the country on your own favorite station, with the gravel and tar department's instructional igneous-rock-is-your-friend audio loop.

I can see the FCC not protecting stations far away, but it's not-protecting them against competing things you might want to listen to, not bureaucrat drivel.

I think you are impatient and don't understand that a station with a half million listeners may on occasion get so many calls they can not answer them all.

That was the title.  We ran that show at WEEL-AM in Fairfax, VA, and I recall the main character's name as Newton J. Snookers.

I think you are attempting to make excuses for WBEB's obvious total disregard for its listeners. I think having only 2 minutes to stay on a line to get through to the station, when in 30 minutes they can't even pick it up is inexcusable. Go back, re-read my total message about the station, all of my points are appropriate and justified.

Did not realize that was the full name of the series. Did it go more than 166 episodes?

So - does anyone know what happened to Dick Orken. He does not seem to show up in sites that generally have lists of announcers from past.

Thanks for info.

Aside from commercial free US1 the top40 on Sirius has Kid Kelly, Billy Hammond, AJ Hammer and Spyder Harrison. The music is better than anything on FM right now.

We use it and it is WAY more user friendly than Selector which we used to use. Very few unscheduled positions and you can really make it do what you want. it is very intuitive and is windows based. Even though Selector has a windows version it still is not user friendly.

Dick Orkin was a guest of Dean Richards on WGN, Chicago Sunday May 18th.
It'd be great if they'd add that segment to their audio archives.
I believe he was going to be inducted into the Illinois Broadcasters Hall of Fame.

A few months ago, FCC took its "LPFM Channel Finder" off their web site, saying "there are no LPFM filing windows in the forseeable future." I know that is not good news for you.

If you are not aware of it, try this site:
http://www.recnet.com/lpfm/

It can tell you if a station might be possible in your area.

For LPFM Discussion, you may find "The Grapevine" to be helpful at:

Thank you for the reply, Chuck. I'd found the recnet site, but will definitely take a look at the Grapevine. Appreciate the info.

Not culture, not truth, just the same music over and over and lots of strident commercials filling the airwaves up to 22 minutes an hour!

Commercial Radio Rules

Source: National Public Radio (the good radio)

Local hosts who may be hundreds of miles away, identical playlists from town to town ... critics say radio just isn't what it used to be. Join host Neal Conan for a look at changes in technology and media ownership, and what it means to your radio dial.

I don't think this has much to do with "Limbaugh haters". In my opinion, the real tragedy is the "bland"isation of the airwaves. Consolidated control means less new content, less innovative content and more "dumb" content. What this means to my radio dial is that it either stays off or tuned to the local college station. I won't vouch for the politics but the music is far more diverse and just plain better than what Clear Channel is feeding us.

Actually, the real issue is the changes in media ownership rules that Michael Powell, chair of the FCC, is trying to foist on us (links courtesy of MoveOn.org):

The first guest discussing Commericial Radio on TOTN show of 27 May 2003 proclaimed that radio today is more diverse in its programming than ever before.

I maintain this is patently false. Example: Jazz. Only nine 24-hr Jazz Stations exist in the nation today; certainly a drastic decrease over earlier times. And the treend there is towards zero.

In my opinion, unregulated uommercialism is ruining the diversity of choices of the US radio-listening public.

I am a dj at an independent radio station in Eugene, Oregon. I fully disagree with every single one of Field's remarks. There has been no contact, and no interest in of our local bands from ANY of the national radio stations. There is no interest in local events, concerts, news etc from corporate radio and there is a reason for this...Why would they care about anything other than money from advertising? One case in point, local bands here like the Courtesy Clerks, the Hunches, the Rock and Roll Soldiers, and the Pass Out Kings received coverage in Rolling Stone, and Mojo Magazine...and not a single call, play, or tip of the hat from major radio. These bands blow our local listeners away!

I would like to ask David if he has heard of bands like the Faint (Omaha, Neb.) or the High Violets (Portland, Or.). I would bet that he has not heard of these wonderful bands, because his station is only interested in promoting corporate artists that sell corporate products like Britney Spears (Pepsi). When Pepsi can promote the artist on a radio station with not only paid advertising, but by promotion of the artist itself, there is no interest in talent, promotion of local artists or anything else.

The station I work for (KWVA Eugene 88.1 FM) plays independent bands that are not played at the stations that are owned en masse. Many towns and cities quite unfortunately do not have the opportunities to listen to either local music, or other independent artists because the stations have all been bought out by these corporate giants. This is scary.

How will a small town with one radio station owned by one of these corporate giants know when a local disaster is hitting...if the radio station transmits from hundreds of miles away? The answer is...they will not. Our station has djs on the air 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. People can call us, communicate with us...and let us know what is going on. We announce this information. Corporate radio does not offer this freedom of information, organization, or promotion...unless the dollar is involved.

Clear Channel and Cumulus...among others...must be stopped from buying all of the airwaves for their advertising, and control of information!

I am going back to college for broadcasting and I hope to work at a college station because commercial radio is nothing more than a meat market. Clear Channel and other companies that own multi-stations care about the stock holders and not the mass audience. Keep up the good work NPR.

Lack of diversity in music programming is merely irritating; what's frightening is that deregulation is allowing increasingly one-sided news and political reporting, i.e. Rupert Murdoch of Fox controlling larger segments of media with "neo-Conservative" views

Mark Buckner - 03:59pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#8 of 14)

With all due respect to the difficulty of local station fundraising, what justification does NPR rely on in its decision to preclude broadcasting of Morning Edition and All Things Considered via the two feeds on Sirius Satellite radio? I understand that this is to give the local stations an "exclusive". Can't the local affiliates share in the satellite revenue?

Mark Buckner, St. Louis

In the abstract, this is nothing different than the nation wide change in bookstores from mom and pop shops to megastores all with the same books and the same feel. I didn't like that and I don't like megastations. When I get to the specific, however, I like the idea of conservative talk radio as a counter to liberal TV network news.

This, and not any degredation of the content, is what is causing all the stir. If NPR was expanding, there would be no comment at all.

Bill Chaisson - 04:21pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#10 of 14)

Am I being incorrigibly idealistic when I think that local media should provide leadership in a community? To me providing leadership means, at least in part, both reinforcing a community's identity and providing a vision of what the community should evolve into. My problem with franchised radio is that it has no interest in making a community self-conscious. On the contrary it would be much easier for them if the audiences of various communities converged on the playlists of MTV or VH-1.

Bigger cities like Seattle or Pittsburgh might be able to preserve some measure of their identity, but smaller cities like Rochester, NY, where I live, do not seem to have the critical cultural mass to survive the homogenizing influence of national franchising.

The guy talking right now is so proud that his station is getting local bands national recording contracts just doesn't get it. That station is really not helping to build the local music scene. It is widely acknowledged that big label attention and national media scrutiny usually destroys local music because as soon as the spot light is on them, they start to cater to what they perceive to be a broader taste to improve their marketability.

As a local musician, I agree completely with this paragraph. The advent of Clear Channel and other mega owners is spelling a death knell for local musicians whose music doesn't fit the narrow playlists designated by large conglomerates. Now Clear Channel and others are buying out the small and medium club venues and tours. The 6 or so record companies who control the music biz work hand-in-hand with the radio Corporations to effectively end the possibility of airplay from unknown groups by local stations and DJ's.

Now the deregulation will go further? Of course it will. The owner of Clear Channel is a Republican friend of Bush. The FCC is happily bending over backwards to help.

Queen Autumn - 05:13pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#12 of 14)

In response to: "If NPR was expanding, there would be no comment at all."

If all of the stations aired NPR, you bet I'd cause a stink.

The problem is, there are even fewer stations that broadcast other forms of news and information. Only one station in Oregon broadcasts "Democracy Now". There may also be only one or two that broadcast Pacifica or Free Speech Radio News. Do you have access to these programs in your area? How much of your radio is being catered toward demographic marketing areas...rather than you need for information.

When only a handful of corporations (dependent upon advertisers) control your every means of getting information (and we have seen that they don't just stick to radio...venues, newspapers, tv stations, magazine etc. are becoming equally controlled by fewer corporations), you become...stupid.

I don't want to be stupid. Therefore, I do not support the deregulation of radio!

Michael Altarriba - 05:19pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#13 of 14)

The owner of Clear Channel is a Republican friend of Bush. The FCC is happily bending over backwards to help.
Bending over forwards is more like it.
It is profoundly unhealthy for a Constitutional Republic like ours to have its media outlets owned by a few, centralized megacorps. Voters make their decisions based on the information they receive, and on their own beliefs and judgements... which are also a function of what they hear. I don't relish a time when we only get to hear (whether it be via radio, TV or newspapers) what Rupert Murdoch or Ted Turner deign to allow us to hear. It isn't a question of ideology - I don't want Ralph Nader owning them all, either.

There has been no contact, and no interest in of our local bands from ANY of the national radio stations. There is no interest in local events, concerts, news etc from corporate radio and there is a reason for this...Why would they care about anything other than money from advertising? One case in point, local bands here like the Courtesy Clerks, the Hunches, the Rock and Roll Soldiers, and the Pass Out Kings received coverage in Rolling Stone, and Mojo Magazine...and not a single call, play, or tip of the hat from major radio. These bands blow our local listeners away!
> As a local musician, I agree completely with this paragraph. The advent of Clear Channel and other mega owners is spelling a death knell for local musicians whose music doesn't fit the narrow playlists designated by large conglomerates. Now Clear Channel and others are buying out the small and medium club venues and tours. The 6 or so record companies who control the music biz work hand-in-hand with the radio Corporations to effectively end the possibility of airplay from unknown groups by local stations and DJ's.

ok, call it what you want, it is accurate and nails the bee down for what it is, pathetic. to reinterate:

Attention:

Do not listen to B101 - WBEB Philadelphia because...

1)They do not care at all about their listeners.

2)Their morning show team refuses to answer the phones even while a contest is in progress and they have no winner.

3)Their telephone lines, both local and toll-free are disconnecting callers if nobody picks up within 2 minutes, which makes it impossible to get through to the station. Yet they do not care to do anything about it.

4)Their morning show team misleads and decieves its listeners as well as disrespects and insults their intelligence.

Thank you.

Are you hearing Radio Landfill while in an area within WRDW's licensed coverage area?  If so, sic the FCC on 'em.   If not, try convincing one of your local stations that people in the area can no longer pick up Imus on an out of market station and that this gives them an opportunity to offer him in that market.

The current AM service will be retained providing service to those listeners unable to tune in to the FM band.

They could cut costs by leaving the FM spectrum for other broadcasting/broadcasters and go AM Stereo on their current AM frequencies.
AM Stereo would be cheaper,has great quality and older people that don't care about FM or the likes can listen on their current AM radios as of before and the coverage of AM is superior also National radio is am stereo ready.
So AM Stereo would be the way to go.

Here in Jacksonville NC earlier "today" (May 27, 2003,) while we were watching a couple of area stations reporting a tornado about one county over and headed our way, Time-Warner's auto-alert thing that's supposed to interrupt with National Weather Service bulletins went off and as usual instead of actually putting the message on the air it just "blue-screened" every channel for several minutes.   As long as TWC is around there will always be rabbit ears for sale.

It has no effect on the market for Imus; nobody would listen to a distant station to get what they can get locally unless the local offering is screwed up of course, say they can't handle the breaks.

Radio Landfill I think it probably illegal based on what they're broadcasting, but as the contact person pointed out, they have no obligation to protect WRDW.  I agree; but it's still stupid, a bureaucrat gone postal over his own importance.  The public that is driving along listening to an empty channel (he has to assume) want to hear about the importance of the Central Ohio Solid Waste Authority, that I take it is looking to protect its budget.

Here's their current loop:
http://rhhardin7.home.mindspring.com/trash2.ra

The messages: littering is illegal; recycling is good.

The latter is a political position, the other side is not given that would come from economists, namely that recycling is wasteful.
They're absolutely not allowed to broadcast advocacy.

Murder is illegal too; I don't know why they want to appear to support murder. If you see somebody murdering somebody, get his license number and call the police. I add that message of my own, and wonder why they didn't think to include it, if it's supposed to be a public service announcement.

I'm exactly 26 miles away and lose the entertainment I used to have;
that's a more than 2000 square mile urban area that they're hitting with this message promoting their budget allocation, against which a genuine audience for what was there loses their programs, on WRDW or KCJJ depending on which way you aim your radio.

WRDW is actually some other call but they ID with WRDW on 1630.

I imagine the local stations don't care or favor it, as it increases their own audience, but probably a minute effect.

Hello,

I'm looking for airchecks from south-eastern Washington state, specifically, Richland, Pasco and Kennewick, Washington, circa late 60s and 70s. If you have any, please email me at

On your 5/19/03 1322GMT post, you stated that Geraldo was not an embedded reporter so embedded rules did not apply.  Now you are making a case against Geraldo using the rules for embedded reporters.

How could Geraldo have violated anything since "if a commander doesn't want something reported, [the commander] should not reveal the information?"   If there was a security at the source policy as you stated, then it would have been impossible for Geraldo to know any unreportable information, let alone broadcast it.

He left temporarily and then went back with the 101st.  According to Geraldo.

I just traded cars and had to endure two weeks of New York area radio. (my old radio had an XM converter)

First problem: no country stations in NY or NJ (that's why I bought XM), Second problem:. 10 minutes of stupid morning DJ chatter followed by 5 minutes of commercials, then again followed by 10 more minutes of chatter. No music. Certain morning programs like Howard Stern hardly have any content other than commercials. Then news/traffic/weather. This pattern repeats every half hour. I spend 3 hours a day in my car commuting and a lot of time in NJ/NY traffic.

If I had to listen to regular radio one more week I'd be suicidal. I had switched to audio books borrowed from the local library, to kill the traffic time.

XM is a good value for the money. Few if any commercials, excellent sound quality (it makes FM sound like AM), and a large variety. The new family plan further reduces the monthly charge from $9.99 to $6.99 for each additional radio.

How many people thought that they would ever pay for TV?

OK, I don't have major arguments with most of the programming ideas you have collected. But I do have two very important questions for you to consider:

1) At what point does a free speech issue become commercial speech issue? Don't these stations have a right to broadcast generic drivel if they don't feel like taking a chance on some relatively unknown bands?

2) Should radio broadcasting LEAD or FOLLOW the society it lives in? Should our society tell them which they ought to do?

If you can form a cogent argument around these questions, I'll pay attention. If you can't, you're just ranting. My solution? I have a CD player in my truck. I use it. The radio stays off most of the time, unless I'm station surfing.

Note to advertisers: Not only do I surf right past lame programs, I also surf right past the ads too.

Perhaps I should clarify my point:  Students in universities are of above-average IQ.  Clients at mental retardation centers are of lower than average IQ.  Let us, for argument's sake, assume the average lifespan of a person to be sixty years. Students remain in college an average six years, or 10% of their lives.  The mentally retarded never "recover", thus needing care an average forty years, or 67% of their lives. If the bell curve theory held, at any given moment, colleges would have 10% of one-half, or 5% of the population, while mental retardation centers would have 67% of one-half, or 34% of the population.  I would find it hard to believe that mental retardation centers hold 6.8 times as many individuals as colleges.  Of course, this is a gross statistical look at avery complex issue.

Proponents of the bell curve theory would justify their "findings" by applying racial generalizations, such as African-Americans, Orientals and Hispanics hovering below average IQ, while Caucasians being above average IQ.  People have gone to ridiculous extremes to prove this. Chinese and Mexican immigrants in the West and Southwest were at a time administered "IQ tests" in English, thus assuring low scores. Likewise, scores of tests administered to poor rural African-American children were compared one-for-one with those of middle-to-upper class white children.  We are lucky to have left those times in the distant past.  My maternal grandfather was ruled an "idiot" (old term for a degree of mental retardation)on the basis of one such test.  Years later, he graduated Cum Laude from Columbia University.

No, you were the one who asserted that he was embedded and therefore subject to censorship.  I merely quoted chapter and verse of the regulations to prove that your assertion is false.  Even if I'm wrong and he WAS embedded (and the accounts of various publications do conflict on that point), he wasn't censored.

I'm not going to change your opinion about Geraldo, and you're not going to change mine.  But he wasn't censored, and there was in fact no censorship system in place.  He said and did what he wanted, and only after the fact were there consequences.  That was, and is, my point.

It doesn't really matter anyway.  Geraldo's stories are always, at their core, about Geraldo.  For him, everything else is set dressing.

Last week I strung out a 125 foot long wire antenna and attached it to an old Kenwood amateur transceiver I had restored.

End result. I found a couple of stations I'd be willing to listen to during the work day. All were outside the NYC contours

Well you got one thing right, he wasn't censored.  Nor was there need to.  Yeah some brass probably asked some questions afterwards until he realized that Geraldo hadn't been allowed to say anything damaging.  (Which of course Geraldo could not have even if he wanted to, due to the "security at the source" policy you pointed out.)  Once common sense resumed, Geraldo was back with the 101st Airborne.

That may or may not be the case, but that does not pertain to the subject that was being discussed.

Well I certainly can't argue with the above. The amount of commercials is WAY the hell out of hand. Stern, Imus, they are all popular so they have SHITLOADS of commercials and it's really pissing me off and I live upstate 65 miles. I used to love listening to Stern but now it's all lesbians shit and naked lady shit. I'm all for that but NON STOP? He used to be good, lots of funny skits, song parodies, etc. Also, since Jackie left the show has just sucked out loud IMHO. Jackie helped make that show AFAIC.

I'm still not ready to fork out money for regular radio, I think it's rediculous personally. I listen more to shortwave now.

> How many people thought that they would ever pay for TV?

That's pissing me off too. I have 80 some channels and only 10 are worth a shit. The rest suck. I'm paying $43 a month for it. Yeah, I need 3 freaking shopping channels, the spanish channel, 10 different sports channels, etc.,etc. Absolutely rediculous. It's a freaking rip off IMHO. I'm close to going satellite which I said I wouldn't do a few years ago. If cable goes up to what satellite costs I may make the move. But then I'll have over 200 channels that aren't worth shit instead!

America, ya gotta love it huh?

Jim V.,

I can understand your feeling that this is a tempest in a teapot, because if one doesn't live in one of the increasingly few areas that HAVE local radio programming, one doesn't have any idea of what you may be missing, and how precariously narrow is your contact with the range of views and news that a citizen needs to make informed decisions. Ironically it was an attempt to impose something very like NPR programming on the Pacifica network, that woke a number of us up to what was happening nationwide.

There is very little standing between you and the sort of complete information control that that constitutes a totalitarian state. Pacifica Radio, Democracy Now!, and a few other sources provide national news that counters the accepted mid-to-right wing range that constitutes the vast majority of air time.

When 3 companies own all the media in the nation save a few tiny outlets, you won't even know that the water is coming to a boil. Time to jump now, froggies!

Now I have something called internet radio that gives me more programming choices than I ever had, even before Clear Channel existed.

My commercial radio listening is pretty much limited to baseball broadcasts.

Up to this year the Seattle Mariners, my team, were broadcast here in Portland OR on the local sports talk radio station which goes by the oh-so-imaginative title of "The Fan". You must understand there are two main sports topics here in Oregon, by far the largest is the Portland TrailGangstas...err...Jailblazers....ah..I mean Trailblazers, followed by the Oregon Ducks football team. (The Ducks?...but I digress...) As such the local sports talk knuckleheads know Basketball really well (I guess...actually I detest basketball, know next to nothing about it, and so am hardly a competent critic on the level of knowledge) and college football. I'm much more knowledgeable about football....but hardly an expert. They knew, and this I know very well, nothing about baseball. They had no inkling, for example, as to how amazing the M's 2001, 116 game winning season was. Anyway, when it was announced that they were moving stations last year I exclaimed "Hurrah! No more sports talk geeks who don't know the difference between a "cutter" a "splitter" and a knuckleball.

Boy was I wrong.

The station which picked them up goes by the title "Hot Talk". Oh boy. I don't listen to anything else but the Mariners games on this station but during the games I am subjected to the ads for their innane programming. If this is what the American people listen to and find amusing and interesting I have vastly overestimated the intelligence of my fellow Americans all these years. The three big shows they host are Tom Liekis (sp?), Rick Emmerson and Don Imus. Each ad for them makes me cringe out of embarassment.

If anybody reading this actually listens to and enjoys any of the shows I mentioned above I have but one comment...you are stupid.

I never thought I'd say this...I wish the Mariners would move back to their old affiliate.

When I was in High School in the early 80s I deejayed a night time indie rock show on a local public radio station.

It was a hellova lot of fun. I got to play what I felt like, parts of the soundtrack from "The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly", the Minutemen, DOA, Butthole Surfers, the Arnold Schwartzeneggar Work Out Record, a Chopin prelude, you name it. (Ok I didn't stick to format, strictly) I had people of all ages (and states of inebriation) calling me requesting stuff. (unlike most places the DJ actually answered the phone....'sept the nights a friend tagged along to see the glamorous world of showbiz...heh heh heh.) It was a lot of fun.

Yeah, commerical radio does suck.

It is profoundly unhealthy for a Constitutional Republic like ours to have its media outlets owned by a few, centralized megacorps.
That's why the Internet is so healthy, and its regulation dangerous.

Harry,

I clicked on your links. Some of the stations do look interesting and most of them are not the big commerical outfits.

These are reasonable alternatives for when I am on-line and on my computer. For the rest of my time however......

JBW - 07:33pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#22 of 140)

Rick,

The only regulations I see on the internet are those which local censors are trying to impose on public library access of the internet.

Those things which are, and should be, illegal to sell "over the counter", are still illegal to sell over the net too.

What regulation are we talking about here?

JBW,

Technology and comparison shopping will let you download streams/mp3s, and take them with you at a very reasonable cost.

JBW - 08:28pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#28 of 140)

Phil has a very good point, however.

How many of us have computers?....Ok I sell all of us with our hands up. Very good. How many of us have radios? Again, most if not all of us.

Now, here is the rub, how many of the people who listen to radio have computers? Ah! Problem. Far more people listen to radio than have access to internet radio so the issue is for the majority who don't have access to the internet, what alternatives exist for them?

Think back to the DJ in NY who locked himself into a booth and played Buddy Holly and the Crickets again and again and again because he LOVED their music and knew that others would too...if only they could HEAR it. That is the role of the whacky local DJ, be he or she on commercial or public radio...to play their fave music, not the music the corprate sales reps decide will most reliably target an audiance. In the end they will do better by allowing the fans of music, such as that whacky local DJ, to pick the music other fans will probably like and will tune in for.

Stable demographics is the bugbear of broadcasting. Take a chance. It might pay off. Isn't that the spirt of the free exchange of ideas?

I'd rather listen to Phil's band between innings of the M's games I listen to. I bet a whole heckoova lot of others would too. Only nobody will ever know because nobody will take the chance.

JBW - 08:34pm May 27, 2003 EDT (#29 of 140)

Harry,

Look you must cringe when you see Brittney Spears, just like I do...and probably for much the same reasons.

She is a product of the way the music biz is done today. Creative, innovative and intelligent music/musicians don't stand a chance. Rap is sold by how many acts of violence, acts of sexual depravity and times the word "bitch" is used. Artists like Public Enemy, or BDP, will never get a chance on "Contemporary Urban" stations. Hacks like J-Lo represent "Latin" music while talented hard working bands like Los Lobos labor on in anonomyity...just making damn fine music, thank you very much. Boy bands? Yech.

What drives the music biz? Radio play. Heavy rotation radio play. Now that it is all programmed in a central contol room and beamed out over sattelite, the heavy rotation is the same nationwide. McMusic for the masses. (or really stoop low and beam out some talk radio dunderhead in lieu of ANY artistic content at all...)

Culture is bastardized and prostituted when business takes an interest in it. Even Beethoven knew that....

Hi everybody,

I'd like to know if the idea of geocasting (sending a broadcast to all the mobile devices in a particular region) is only a research idea or there are some implementations, techniques, etc., and where I could get information about this.

Any idea or hint is appreciated.

I apologize in advance if this newsgroup is not the most suitable for this question.

Thanks in advance

It's all relative. Now that ultra-conservatism dominates the media even moderates get hit as liberals. When FOX is considered unbiased you know the scale has moved.

WCBN - 30 Years of Freeing Your Mind - Listen to us online!
  =20
WCBN is the University of Michigan student-run community freeform radio station in Ann Arbor, Michigan. We broadcast at 200 watts to the University and its surrounding communities from the basement of the Student Activities Building in downtown treetown.  We have been broadcasting a genre-less overview of music, news, and public affairs for 30 years.

WCBN's musical format is freeform, with some specialty shows. Freeform involves all different kinds of music, including jazz, reggae, blues, hip-hop, country, rock, and just about everything else under the sun.
Instead of telling our DJs what to play, we allow them to select their own recordings from our vast and unique library. It is their responsibility to mix together many different kinds of music in an intelligent fashion, and show links between musical genres.

Gimme a break! NPR competes with commercial radio. How many cities can you live in at one time? I'll bet I can go from city to city and hear "All Things Considered" in every one of them. How is that different from similar playlists?

It's always fun to watch competing media "objectively" criticize their competition.

Gimme a break! I was one of the people involved in the very early experiements between WGBH and WETA that turned into NPR. I think NPR is terrific but not so pure that it can criticize its competition and be taken seriously.

Precisely.  You asserted that what Geraldo did was okay because a "military censor" was standing next to him and did nothing.  I proved to you by quoting the actual directive to commanders that there was no censor because there was no censorship, not because anybody in the military okayed what Geraldo did. So if I was wrong about him not being embedded, he couldn't have been censored, and if I was right about him not being embedded, he couldn't have been censored. Yes, indeed, either way I'm right and you're wrong about the censorship issue.

I believe I have made myself perfectly clear, and I am finished with this discussion.

You're sure about that? Can you document it or is this just a typical internet unsupported accusation?

Are you sure it's their fault? In New York an unanswered call will stop ringing after a set number of rings. The station has no control over it.

Are you sure? From your postings it would seen very hard to insult your intelligence.

Who is "The EVEL"?
I have some of their stuff and it is the hottest new rap group that I have heard.  They are signed to this label called Magnitude Records in Chicago.
One of them is straight New York, the other has a Dirty South sound.

If anybody knows anything about them, Where they're from, if they have a CD out, ANYTHING, let me know!  I've tried to reach their label for info, but it's very hush-hush, so far.

If you want any of their mp3's, email me at zupreme@zeaun.com or zupreme@hotmail.com!!  These guys are hot!

Network programming isn't "similar playlists." Other than ATC and ME, few NPR stations will be playing the same thing at the same time. (WNYC doesn't even carry TOTN, but I found it on WNYE.) Some are talk, some are classical, some are jazz, etc.

Bad example, ATC and ME use a wheel that permits local features, = news and funding credits at the discretion of each station. Maddeningly = cluttered in fact compared to the pure NPR programs. Network feeds of = the drive-time shows are presented very differently depending on where = you listen.

Traditional networks are also very open about who they are and where = their programming originates. =20

Competition implies two or more stations offering similar services to the same listenership...if one does it a bit better, they get the higher numbers.  In this sense, what on commercial radio "competes" with NPR?  AFAICT, nothing.

The paragraph above yours says "identical playlists" not "similar playlists".

Did you listen to the program? Though I'm no fan of Neal Conan in general, it was entirely balanced in this case. I have no idea after listening to it where Neal Conan stands on the issue of deregulation, and he brought intelligent guests to the program to argue both sides of the issue. I doubt one could find anything similiar on any commercial radio or television station.

Rich, if your last line was n insult I'll let it go, I'm just here to elicit a change in this station. I also am here to show others how pathetically they are conducting business and how they could care less about you or I, the public.
I am positive they had no winner for forty minute segments on a number of occasions, I sat on line for 30 minutes plus, nobody picked up. The disconnection problem is their fault because they have a say of whether the phone company institutes it on the line. And they claimed the phone company was all to blame and told me to call their phone company to resolve it, how ridiculous and negligent on WBEB's part.

The phone company told me they are responsible and if one of their execs. would just give them a call they would fix it. And furthermore the disconnection thing was something that was just implemented a month ago, before that it never happened on their toll-free line, they could at least own up to having a say with it. It didn't just magically get there. So stop supporting radio stations that don't support you. You know many people are quick to respond to stuff like what I'm posting with foolish negativity. I have good reason to expose these guys for what they are. Yet people always want to dispute and take the other side, when if you were their listener you would see they couldn't give a shit about you. Let's say you wanted to comment on the show or request a song, you'd have a better chance of getting hit by lightning then the dj's picking up a phone to talk to you.

Whilst it makes the phone ring there are some topics that are delicate.Better I think to embrace all races as australians in a multiracial country than constantly highlight and inflame the differences ?
what do you think ?

they want to ban easter buns and ham sandwiches may make good copy however giving airtime to bad behaviour by middle eastern youth reinforces their isolationist road warrior cult mentality. Better I think to blame the parents you will get no shortage of callers about how bad they are cause they are the islamic religious and community leaders and parents have to get their kids

In a chilling reminder of how Rwandans were incited to commit genocide in 1994, an ethnic militia group in the northeastern Democratic Republic of Congo began broadcasting hate messages yesterday.

Candip Radio said Hema militia will use force to dislodge civilians seeking refuge in the UN mission in the regional centre of Bunia, where fighting between Hema and Lendu ethnic groups has left hundreds dead and driven thousands from their homes.

The broadcast recalled how Hutu extremists in Rwanda used Radio Mille Collines to urge the slaughter of the country's minority Tutsis, resulting in 800,000 mainly Tutsi deaths.

They could (probably) legally broadcast a 1000-hertz sine wave all day.
(In fact one public-radio station did in the late 70's and called it "avant garde music" but I digress....)

Commercial stations (in particular) broadcast what they think will keep people listening to the station, so that they can sell ads that hopefully will be listened to as well. It's not about music appreciation education, or promoting a bunch of unknown bands....now, that's not to say that a format built around lesser known songs absolutely can't work...

> 2) Should radio broadcasting LEAD or FOLLOW the society it lives in?
> Should our society tell them which they ought to do?

"Society", such as it is, already "tells them what to do" by
a. (for commercial stations) filling out Arbitron books and sending them back
b. (for public radio stations, some religious programs, etc.) sending in contributions
c. other indirect support (word of mouth, etc)

The broad masses of people out there (who, by the way, tend not to post in online discussion forums and complain about the radio/music etc.) are pretty complacent in their listening habits anyway. They like the oldies they heard in high school and college, or perhaps some MOR in the office, some Top-40 while on the road, a little "light jazz" before retiring in the evening, etc. They're not actively seeking out radically different stuff (although I think they can have their listening habits gently "stretched" by competent programmers).

For sale:

The "Radio Crazy" is back!

Still looking for investors/partners for fulltime AM in Southern GA. 1490 KHz, 1 KW. On the air since the 50s of the last millenium, silly!

Joint venture: Active or inactive investors with at least $10,000 each are welcome. I prefer active investors with at least one of the following skills:
Sales, engineering, programming.

No individual can own over 49 percent. This rule applies to me too!

No "AM bashers" or other "negative nabobs" are welcome. I don't know what the hell a "nabob" is either! Do you?

The total asking price is $75,000 with NO repeat NO real estate. However the total rent is only $400.00 per month and the real estate would be available for about $75,000 additional. Studios and transmitter are under one roof.

My tel. is: (478)741-1710 in Macon, GA.

I am former Chief Engineer for a 5 KW fulltime AM in New York City. In 1977-78 I was an International Transmitter (radio) Field Service Engineer for Harris Corporation. So the "Radio Crazy" ain't that crazy!
HI!

73,

Meyer Gottesman, W6GIV

I am curious as to how many rec.radio.broadcast readers voiced an opinion concerning this next round of FCC Deregulation.

My station's research finds that listeners to our country format also listen to a number of other formats, including public radio, talk, rock, religious, adult contemporary, even "smooth jazz."  This is what listeners tell us.   We also know that some of our listeners do not come to us for our music at all, but prefer our news coverage to that available elsewhere.

Many people listen to more than one type of programming because they choose the station offering what meets their needs or fits their moods at the time.  Many people like several kinds of music, and will tune to a completely different format if the station to which they are listening plays a song they don't like.

I view every entertainment and information alternative from NPR to reality TV to video games as "competition."  It is competition for the attention of the audience.

That ain't commercialism, that's survival because the government doesn't have the money to fund the arts--which, of course, it's not anywhere near a priority. In Europe, on the other hand, you get pure non-commecial classical radio in every country. They must be 'communist'...

Rich I listened to the show and unlike your Reichwing Radio Network, they do allow callers to bring up the very point you have.

Many slammed NPR as "national/bland" - just as they did your commercial global fodder.

No mention of micro/pirate/free radio and only a 20-second remark on LPFM.................neglecting to mention NPR ruled against it until one of the hosts informed Neil of this ommited fact.

NPR is better than REich radio....but still sad compared to a real freemarket with local ownership and content.

I hate to jump into a thread late, esp. one crossposted to 4 groups, but in this case I'll test the waters with a toe.

It's interesting that you mention WNYC and WNYE. NYC has an AM and FM frequency. Have you noticed how often you can hear the same program -- even at the same TIME -- on 2 of these three freqs? (If not 3?)

Since I found this post in the s/w list, I'll also point out that on some of these stations, they have stopped repeating their own content late at night in order to rebroadcast the BBC, which is easily available on its own freq's.

Add to this NPR's shameful attacks on true alternative programming (e.g., LPFM), and there is little difference between their approach and commercial radio. The quality of the content is much better on NPR, but the approach is pretty much the same. NPR wants to BE a "big boy" network, not compete against them.

I'll leave now.

If you still think an A/C station like WBEB takes requests, especially from men, there is nothing more to talk about.

I don't recall who is behind it, but they supposedly have millions of dollars committed to this project and they plan to roll out a 24/7 network.
It was in the news a couple of months ago and was great fodder on many of the talk shows.

CNBC Arabiya economic channel to broadcast from Dubai
CNBC Arabiya, a regional Arabic-language satellite economic channel, will launch operations from Dubai next month, news editor Walid Kurdi has announced.

The channel, which will operate from Dubai Media City, will provide in-depth coverage of the economic and business implications of local and international affairs, he told a news conference also attended by chairman and chief executive officer Zafar Siddiqi.

CNBC Arabiya, owned and run by Middle East Business News (MEBN) under a licensing and affiliation agreement with CNBC, will be the latest addition to a growing number of regional news outlets that have chosen Dubai Media City as their base.

Dubai, one of seven emirates making up the United Arab Emirates federation and trading hub of the oil-rich Gulf, has launched a multi-billion-dollar campaign to also become the region's tourism, information and e-commerce capital.

Dubai has its own satellite business channel, which was launched in 1999.

Rick Cotton, president of CNBC Europe, told the news conference that CNBC Europe and CNBC Asia, both joint ventures between NBC and Dow Jones and Company, would "work closely with CNBC Arabiya to provide the channel with access to the network's global news resources.

The reason for this is not consolidation. It is the fact that many areas have more radio stations than the market can support. Thank the FCC for Docket 80-90 and the dropping in of a thousand or so FMs that, in the most part, were not viable. However, their introduction caused existing successful stations to have to cut back, go on satellite programming or take up voice tracking.

Before consolidation, nearly 60% of US stations were no profitable. You expect a money losing venture to be expanding its service?

Use the SEARCH link at the top and you can find all the stations on ANY AM or FM freq (or TV) in the US and Canada....OR the AMDATA Base program that uses the FCC data can also give you xmtr location, callsign, City Of License (COL) and power PLUS antenna config if directional! I can send ya the program or I THINK you can get it from the FCC web site (www.fcc.gov and then search for AM Database)

Except that the conservative radio shows present their bias right up front.  The traditional mainstream outlets pretend there is no bias.

I'd like to see some of these arguments that claim that traditional mainstream news media is right biases on whole.

For example, (because I had the quote handy to post) Time Magazine's senior writer, Richard Lacayo: "In a nation that has entertained and appalled itself for years with hot talk on the radio . . . the inflamed rhetoric of the '90s is suddenly an unindicted coconspirator in the blast."

What is the standard to 'qualify'?  Who exactly was calling for listeners to blow up buildings?

What exactly did Traditional Values do in their past actions that was related to poisoning senators with anthrax in the mail?  Please explain this.

A report that says Santa Claus is reponsible could turn out to be correct.   But you better have some evidence first.

Errors yes.  But they neither rely on taxpayer dollars nor do they pretend they do not have bias.

Many  commercial networks are owned by stockholders, of which you or I can become one.
Next, commercial networks must exist in the free market and succeed on their own. NPR is paid for with TAXPAYER dollars which is taken from every taxpayer involuntarily. If liberals or democrats want to have their own left biased network or networks, fine.  Let 'em go for it.  But why should a network collecting taxpayer dollars be biased at all, in any direction?

No.  Clinton was forced to be occasionally conservative after the 1994 elections. Remember Clinton before then?  The Clinton health care plan was as conservative as it was successful.

That's interesting...there are scores of religious stations here where I am ( a good portion of listenable AM stations actually) that have commerical licenses.

Then why not do your first week or so with dry idents and sweepers, and get v as soon as you have your MCPS licence?  They're very prompt at sending them out, and they're also very nice people.

If you can put a single antenna on the roof (TV style horiz if you can), then you can do this.....use a LOW gain preamp (like 6 to 10db of gain in the FM band) preferably with a good multistage front end tuned to the FM band (to keep intermod and overload down)... then route the amplifier to "Leaky coax" or Radiax (trademark name).. this is somewhat expensive BUT with say 1/4 or 1/2 in Radiax run down the center of the hallways, there is enough signal leakage to reach the radios in the office....OR another way (and may be cheaper depending on the number of connections) is use CATV hardline (1/2 inch or larger) and then use TAPs like CATV does to feed directly to the radio IF they have external antenna connecions...if they dont, you can have problems trying to connect to them..the TAPS have higher loss but donot load down the signal as splitters do...thus the signal in the main trunk stays the same (except for normal coax loss) and does not get cut in half or more everyplace a splitter would be used!

I have done both....also have used multiple xmtrs in closed coax systems for in house use...but there is NO cheap way to do it for multiple rcvrs...it WILL cost something no matter what..

Snipped as much as I could.

I have to back up what you say Ruud.

Last Sunday I met the engineer who worked on-board when it was broadcasting as Laser Hot Hits.

Mike confirmed what you say above about the condition of this motor vessel. The hull alone is in a sad state with many dents in the steel.

The main transmitter he looked after was an old 25Kw CSI which never ran at full power.

I hope the new owners have deep, make that very deep pockets.

I can't give you an exact date, but it was early in 1967 in overnights, replacing the famous all-night jazz show of Sid McCoy and the late Yvonne Daniels.  Uncle Lar got lots of "What is this rock & roll (expletive), baby?" at "ACtion2-1650," the station's contest/request line, that first night.

>  WLS,  Chicago August? 1967 - July 1972

It was sometime in the summer, not too long before I myself came to Chicago in September 1967.

It was the Saturday previous to when WUBT flipped from urban oldies to CHR, which was Jan. 12.  That was on a Friday, which made Lujack's last show Jan. 6, 2001.  It should also be pointed out that the people at WUBT did their damnest to cover up that Lujack was in New Mexico and not in Chicago on his shows--and he went along with the whole phony coverup.  I guess the checks always cleared.  :)

You are attempting to draw a comparison of apples and bowling pins.  Arnett was let go by his employers because he gave words of encouragement to the enemy, thereby aiding and abetting the enemy.  That was not viewed favorably by his employers, although it was viewed favorably by the Hussein sympathizers.

Rivera did not hurt anybody, and nobody was hurt by Rivera's broadcast that gave him so much flack.  First of all, there was a military censor standing next to him (off camera) just as there was for all embedded reporters.  He didn't give away any specific locations.  If he had actually began to broadcast details that were considered sensitive, he would have been removed from the air mid-sentence.   He did not give any aid nor any comfort to the enemy.  And fair and balanced has nothing to do with whether you fire an employee because some other network has decided to fire their employee for doing something  unrelated.

Commentary would be discussing whether the protests were right or wrong, or if she agreed with the protests.

Liberals don't watch Fox News?  Well they sure love to BE on Fox News.  Every night liberal guests appear in the same numbers as their conservative counterparts.

Why DID CNN bury this important story for twelve (12) years?   Nobody claimed Hussein was a nice guy, but CNN had knowledge that he was much worse than many or most people thought, yet intentionally kept silent.  CNN was keeping secrets to protect their own access to Hussein and his thugs so they could report more misinformation from them.

Clear Channel is big because people listen to their radio programming.  Good for them.  If nobody listened, the company would fail.

Problem: I DID see those kinds of stories and footage.  Perhaps the person who didn't tuned out.  A better question is why we didn't see the existing footage of the results of Hussein's poison gas on children, women, and men?  Why didn't we see the footage of the thousands of Iraqis whose ears have been lobbed off?

What story on that exact day would you have preferred to see?  In today's environment there is so much media, radio, Internet, TV, newspapers, magazines, etc. that you can be own editor.

There's what they said and what you heard them say.  I never heard anybody ask "who are [you] to question the admininstration", rather there was a chorus of people saying that it is ok and a duty to question leadership.  The problem was the bankruptcy of the protestors' arguments, or any intelligent reason at all why the same protesters didn't protest Clinton's bombing of Baghdad [1998] or Kosovo [1999].  Please tell me when you heard that being said or what guest was there, and I will attempt to pull the actual  trascript.  Also please quote with quote markings on each line, your post makes it hard to tell what you are writing and what you are quoting.

Now that you can see the translator apps on the CDBS, it seems that about half the applications were from a handful of applicants. The "satillator land grab of 2003" is well underway.

I was wondering if there might be some production people out there that might want to trade some production stuff.  I am looking for elements and swishes rewinds and other cool stuff.  Let meknow.. Also would be willing to buy some stuff from someone going out of the biz or someone who just wants to get rid of some stuff.

Thanks

Not exactly. According to the Washington Post, "The veteran correspondent, known for his provocative on-screen style, was not officially "embedded" with the 101st Airborne -- a status by which journalists accompany U.S. troops while adhering to certain ground rules designed to safeguard military security," although he had been allowed to accompany a unit for a few days, and the military apparently had expected he would follow those ground rules. There was no military censor, he was on the air live, and he did broadcast details considered sensitive and was not removed mid-sentence.

IMHO Geraldo Rivera is, and always has been, a phony and an embarrassment to all of journalism. Nevertheless, I would have to agree that what he did in Iraq caused no real damage and was far less offensive than what Peter Arnett did. Arnett hit the bottom of a downhill slide that started after Gulf War I. Now some are even beginning to question the veracity of the work in Vietnam that won him his Pulitzer.

Now, how the hell did we get here from talking about how radio did during the tornadoes? I've yet to see good answers to that question, and I'm curious to know.

I was wondering if there might be some production people out there that might want to trade some production stuff.  I am looking for elements and swishes rewinds and other cool stuff.  Let meknow.. Also would be willing to buy some stuff from someone going out of the biz or someone who just wants to get rid of some stuff.

Thanks

Well, I hope the owners know that for themselves.
We have seen more radio crazyness in the past, have not we.

<<<You are attempting to draw a comparison of apples and bowling pins.  Arnett was let go by his employers because he gave words of encouragement to the enemy, thereby aiding and abetting the enemy.  That was not viewed favorably by his employers, although it was viewed favorably by the Hussein sympathizers.

Rivera did not hurt anybody, and nobody was hurt by Rivera's broadcast that gave him so much flack.  First of all, there was a military censor standing next to him (off camera) just as there was for all embedded reporters.  He didn't give away any specific locations.   If he had actually began to broadcast details that were considered sensitive, he would have been removed from the air mid-sentence.

He did not give any aid nor any comfort to the enemy.>>>

i understand your point of view but i disagree.   arnett has no credibility in the area of discerning whether the u-s lead operation iraqi freedom was achieving its goals as planned or not. (the subject of his interview on iraqi tv)   he should have been fired,  what he did was stupid but using your measure.....was anyone hurt by his words?  as for rivera who was on air live....are you saying his minder was responsible for what he said?  why did the military make him leave if he did nothing wrong?  and trying to judge who or whether anyone was hurt is not the issue. the both broke rules...journalistic and otherwise.   2-reporters, both trying to push the edge for an advantage.   both were wrong.  both should have been fired.

<<<And fair and balanced has nothing to do with whether you fire an employee because some other network has decided to fire their employee for doing something  unrelated.>>>

i disagree.   and as to fair and balanced...name another news outfit that would have used arnet in promo's for their news product?   just one...fox.    arnet was an easy target....feed the base.

did you hear (1988) about hussien gassing his own people?   how about the killing (1991-1992) of tens if not hundreds of thousands of iraqi's who rose up after the first gulf war?  these things pre-date the story that cnn witheld about saddam torturing people.  the guy murdered 1/3 of his party to get into power in 1979.   given these 3-widely reported examples,  how did cnn's mistake..keep people from knowing saddam was to use your words...   "much worse than many or most people thought" ?

do you have inside info?  could you give me an example of cnn using this track to report misinformation on iraq?

they are big because they own more radio stations than any other company in history.   the company consolidates and creates radio farms to maximize profit, but the only question i have is whether the communities are being served.    i had to laugh that a local newspaper here recently ran an article on a CC station in the capitol was mostly voice-tracked.    of course the gm of the station in question said it was a way to bring big market talent to this medium market.   yeah right.  cost had nothing to do with it.

<<< Good for them.  If nobody listened, the company would fail.>>> are you saying that CC bought stations that were not on the air and then made them a success?   which came first...the listener or CC.  rule changes have consolidated media ownership...more changes are coming.  anyone think the my point wasn't what the guest specifically said.....its with the interviewer, the SPORTS guy, brian kilmeade's outrage.

i wonder what stand the sports guy took on those issues ;-) yes for some there is hypocracy. actors aside. here's an example of greater hypocracy and from the what #5 guy in the administration? tom delay says you can;t support the troops AND not support the prez. of course you didn;t hear much on fox on how that was his exact stance during kosovo. which is more important? delay's hypocracy or sean penns. if you watch fox....the answer is simple.

see its not about right and wrong..or even truth. its about OUR side being right.

hannity does this all the time on his radio show. (i haven't seen the t-v show in a very long time) he interviews robert kennedy jr and he says to rk,,,,you said that owning an suv was unamerican....rk said twice that he did not.....hannity says i have a tape of you saying it.....rk says i'll vote rpublican in the next election sean if i said that.....hannity plays the tape and on it you can hear rk clearly say that owning an suv was NOT GOOD for america. hannity'sesponse....SEE! i thought what a major mistake, he just lost his credibility.....i was wrong. why didn;t he? he often conducts interviews where he does not do well. he's apologized twice that i'm aware of after appearing on the sunday morning shows and i wonder what happened to the wunderkind. how does he keep his show? (my point finally arriving)....because its not about right or wrong....its about OUR side being right.

<<<Please tell me when you heard that being said or what guest was there, and I will attempt to pull the actual trascript. Also please quote with quote markings on each line, your post makes it hard to tell what you are writing and what you are quoting.>>> just watch.....count the eyes rolling...the sarcasm....read the main borders above the running scroll.

hey you want to do a search? try one for monday 5/19. cspan just read from an article (didn;t catch which paper or magazine) on fox news. an inside look. i won;t argue with you about quotes. in a nutshell.... i don't like bias period. but i have a problem with the way fox markets the news.

thanks for the intersting exchange.

I believe you are right about Docket 80-90 introducing more stations to markets that were already saturated (with a few under-radioed exceptions). But once those drop-in stations were allocated and built, the only way they could become profitable was by consolidation.

Owning 1300 stations nationally may not be in the best interest of radio, but a market with 20 stations controlled by 3 owners is probably the only way anyone can make money these days.  Sharing facilities & staff, along with voicetracking and syndication and other benefits from group ownership is the only thing that can keep so many stations (and choices) viable.
 Consolidation within the market is not such a bad idea considering the benefits of keeping many stations from going dark, allowing more niche programming, but this could have been achieved without allowing one company to dominate the entire industry.

What is this version of "The Super Station"?

Who are Dave Miller & Janie Ash?

5 minutes, not 15. Listening for 5 minutes in any quarter hour gives credit for the quarter hour.
> As a result, a radio show can say "We have Ten Zillion listeners!", even Advertising is sold not on reach but on pairs of ears. So cume is not the driving number, it is "Average Quarter Hour Persons" or the average number of people listening at any one time in a particular part of the day or week.

When we see rankings of stations published on the web or in local papers, the "share" figures are based on AQH persons, not cume. Share is "Percentage of persons listening to the radio at that time who were listening to a particular station."

Cume is less used, mostly to calculate reach and frequency.

At one time, I built a 9-station cluster in a market of about 700,000 that had about 40 full coverage fulltime stations. All my acquisitions were facilities that had gone broke or silent; in a cluster, every one was profitable.

I.Q Tests are a measure of  how well you cna read the questions... and how good you are at taking I.Q. Tests... They don't work. My I.Q.  is 148 according to the tests. Which shows I am good at taking them, rather than I am very above average, there are people who would score very low in one of these tests but would be much more intelligent than you would give them credit for if you are going purely by numbers. I have been in conversations with people who are desperate to let you know what there I.Q. is... but, have they achieved anything? That is all they have to tell you... the number. Intelligence is more than a number on a test sheet.

Does anyone know if there are plans to include some sort of sports package on XM radio? For example an MLB or NFL package where you pay a fixed rate to get all the games like on satellite TV?

Thanks!

Chuck.

I agree the RX-320 is a good receiver for the money. I would invite you to read our review of the unit posted on the Radio Netherlands' Media Network pages and the Receiver Shopping List:
http://www.rnw.nl/realradio/rx_index.html

It makes no difference if shortwave is your only interest with the RX-320, but there is a significant roll-off in reception below 2 or 3 MHz and the radio is (in my opinion) useless in the LW spectrum. Rather than use bandpass filters, less expensive high-pass filters protect the receiver from being overloaded by strong MW signals. Even with a 300-ft inverted-L antenna at 90-feet, I could not hear three airport beacons within 30 air miles of my location. MW reception was limited to the strongest local stations in the Philadelphia market.

I can also comment on the JRC NRD-525 versus the -535. Perhaps not a surprise to some (it was to me), I found the -525 is a better performing receiver on LW than the -535. The newer receiver generated more digital hash and noise on the LW spectrum, probably due to the more complex digital readout and circuitry.

C-band Sats are a dime a dozen these days especially after the pizza dish came out. And who are you kidding. At one time there were tons of free sports on a c-band. Today your lucky to find an odd game every evening. Good luck finding someone to take it off your hands, at no charge even. Well...maybe if you uprooted it and delivered it.

Amateur Radio Newsline=E2=84=A2 Report 1344 =E2=80=93 May 16, 2003

t number 1344 will follow.

Ladies and gentlemen, Amateur Radio Newsline=E2=80=99s support fund admin= istrator,
Andy Jarema, N6TCQ.

--

I want to begin by saying thank-you to all of those who have contributed = so far to keeping these Amateur Radio Newsline reports coming your way. As I sa= id a few weeks ago, to continue bringing you the news and to continue to honor=
 the accomplishments of youthful radio amateurs with the Young Ham of the Year Award, we have to raise about $1000 a month. I am happy to tell you that thanks to your generosity, we are now about 20% of the way to that goal.=20
That=E2=80=99s the good news. The bad is that we still have 80% of the w= ay to go and the bills keep coming in. =20

I know that I have said this before but I have to again. The bottom line= is that you, and only you keep all of this going. Its your tax deductible contributions that pay the cost of producing and distributing Amateur Rad= io Newsline bulletins. Its your generosity that makes possible the honor be= stowed
on a young ham operator every August. =20

Without any doubt, you are the most important part of the Amateur Radio Newsline family because it is you who tell us through your contributions = that you want us to continue. And for that we are eternally grateful.

Remember, Amateur Radio Newsline is a federal 501 c 3, not for profit corporation, and, as I said earlier, your contributions are tax deductibl=
e.=20

Our address is the Amateur Radio Newsline Support Fund, Post Office Box 6= 60937,
Arcadia California, 91066. =20

Thank you for taking  the time to listen.  Newscast number 1344 follows immediately. =20

Thank you Andy.  Now, Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1344 with a re= lease
date of Thursday, May 15th 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.  =20 =20
The following is a Q-S-T.   The tornadoes of May continue as ham radio le= nds a hand and the doors open at Hamvention 2003.  Find out the details on Amat= eur
Radio Newsline report number 1344  coming your way right now.

RESCUE RADIO:  THE TORNADOES OF MAY CONTINUE

According to statics, May 4th through the 10th, 2003 was the most active = week of tornadoes on record.  This, as scores of twisters ripped across the na= tion's
midsection, reducing hundreds of homes and businesses to splinters.  We h= ave
more on the storms and the part ham radio played in the aftermath in this report.

It was a busy week for ARES and RACES volunteers across the nations mid-section. Nearly 300 tornadoes have been reported since the beginning = of
May. That=E2=80=99s nearly 100 more than the most recent comparable outbr= eak in 1999.
And so far, May 4th to the 10th has been the most volatile time of all.

Tornadoes have been everywhere from Oklahoma and Kansas to the West and t= o
Alabama and Tennessee here on the south. And ham radio operators have bee= n on the job as severe weather spotters looking for approaching storms. They h= ave
also been part of the clean-up effort after they have hit.

Among the groups using ham radio is the Salvation Army. Its website says =

that nine emergency disaster vehicles were set up in Kansas and Western Missou= ri
following twisters that hit there. Its communications arm -- the Salvatio= n Army
Team Emergency Radio Network was dispatched to each location to assist us= ing
Amateur Radio channels.

One twister that struck the Oklahoma City area late Friday the 9th approa= ched
the metropolitan area from the southwest, then skipped through the city. = This
storm snapped utility poles, flipped a light airplane parked at a local a= irport
and ripped apart an elementary school. It also knocked out a lot of telep= hone communications bringing out emergency trained ham radio operators to fill= in.

Not long after this tornado hit, the Federal Communications Commission de= clared
a general communications emergency for the Oklahoma area. United States Amateurs were told that they could not use 3 point 900 MHz, plus or minus= 3 kHz, unless they were handling emergency traffic. The FCC said the declar= ation was in support of ham radio communications by the Salvation Army's tornad= o
relief efforts. The ban was in force for about 24 hours, terminating at 2= 2:30
on Saturday May 10th.=20

And on Saturday, May 10th, the weather service posted more tornado warnin= gs for parts of Indiana, Missouri and Illinois. And the Storm Prediction Center = said severe thunderstorms were likely from eastern Oklahoma to western Ohio. I= n northeastern Kentucky, at least 17 people were treated at hospitals and m= ore than two dozen homes were damaged Saturday night after a tornado hit in L= ewis and Mason counties near Maysville. This put already weary ham radio communicators back on alert once again. Adding to the misery, torrential downpours flooded streets and fields in Indiana put hams there on call as= well.

But it was not over yet. Storms with wind speeds of up to 150 mph hit par= ts of Central Kentucky early Sunday the 11th. Homes were damaged in Hardin, Har= t and
Mercer counties. Retired ARRL President George Wilson, W4OYI, who lives i=

n
Owensboro Kentucky says that there were two siren alerts indicating sever= e weather was on its way. He says that local hams involved in storm spottin= g duties geared up under the leadership of Emergency Coordinator Jake Jenni= ngs, KG4EMO. Thankfully, no twisters actually hit but one was spotted around midnight causing one of the alarms.=20

Severe weather alert systems and ham radio operators involved in ARES and= RACES
may be in for quite a work out in the days to come. This is because meteoreologists say that the 2003 tornado season is really just beginning.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Don Wilbanks, AE5DW, in New Orleans.

President Bush has cleared the way for federal aid by issuing a disaster declaration for ravaged areas of Tennessee, Kansas, and Missouri Oklahoma=
.  The
tornadoes combined with straight-line wind, lightning and floods to cause= d 44
deaths from Kansas to Georgia.  (ARNewsline=E2=84=A2)

HAMVENTION 2003=C2=AE: HAMVENTION WANTS TO STAY AT HARA!

The 2003 Dayton Hamvention is on and the big news is that it wants to sta= y
where it is.  Amateur Radio Newsline=E2=80=99s producer Bill Pasternak, W= A6ITF, has that story:

--

The Hamvention wants to stay at the Hara Arena.  So says the Dayton Daily= News which reports that Hamvention organizers are in negotiations for a two-ye= ar contract to comtinue using the Trotwood Ohio facility.  My colleague Henr= y
Feinberg, K2SSQ, has that part of the story:

--

The Dayton Daily News article Bill refereed to quotes Hamvention producti= on manager Garry Matthews, KB8GOL.  He says that organizers are pleased with= Hara

Arena and want to keep the show in the area.  Also, that no other local v= enue can comfortably hold Hamvention at its current size.  This says Matthews,= makes a move unlikely.=20

A story in the May 2nd ARRL Letter said exhibitors would prefer the show = to be held in Columbus if Hara wasn't available.  Indianapolis and Cincinnati w= ere also listed as possible sites. =20

When asked by the Dayton Daily News, Matthews said that the article doesn=
't mean Hamvention organizers are looking for another site.  But says KB8GOL= organizers do have contingency plans that would move the convention elsew= here
if Hara couldn't host it.

Will Hamvention 2004 be at the HARA Arena?  We should know more by Sunday=
 the
18th when Hamvention 2003 comes to an end. =20

I=E2=80=99m Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ.  Bill.

Thanks Henry. =20

HAMVENTION 2003=C2=AE:  SOCIAL HOUR WILL HONOR AWARD WINNERS

Now turning to the social side of Hamvention 2003 -- and after all -- the Hamvention is a major social event -- there is some very good news.  Seem= ingly
taking a cue from the highly successful ham radio cocktail hour at the Na= tional Association of Broadcasters convention, the Hamvention will host a simila= r gathering this year.  As Hamvention General Chairman Pat Neff, N8IGS, tol= d
RAIN=E2=80=99s Hap Holly, KC9RP, this gathering is to honor the Hamventio= ns award winners:

--

Neff:  =E2=80=9CTheres going to a an award winners reception at HARA on S= aturday.=20
Its going to start at I believe 6=E2=80=99 o=E2=80=99clock and it will be= within two of the largest forum rooms that will be converted.  But its only going to have a capacity of about 450 people.=E2=80=9D

In addition to drinks and horderves what else can those buying tickets to= this gathering expect?

--

The award winners will be giving acceptance speaches there and, like I sa= y, its going to be an informal to-do that will allow the average attendee to be = able to possibly get to talk with the award winners as well.

--

Neff says that the decision to hold the reception at the Hara Arena  came= as the result of feedback from past Hamvention attendees.  Many said it was = hard to spend the day at the show and then travel across town for a banquet.  =
With
the banquet now history and an informal reception at the Hara taking its = place,
those wanting to attend need only buy a ticket and hang around.  We will.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF. =20

Amateur Radio Newsline has a team of reporters in Dayton and will provide= full covering of Hamvention 2003.  (ARNewsline=E2=84=A2)

HAMVENTION 2003=C2=AE:  BIG HAPPENINGS IN DX

Still with Hamvention news, this years D-X forum should be one of the bet=ter ones in recent histoey.  So says moderator Jay Slough, K4ZLE, who adds th=at the scheduled speakers are a really impressive line up.  For instasnce, Daily= D-X Editor Bernie McClenny, W3UR, will be talking on the recent AH3D operatio=n.=20 And Al Hernandez, K3VN  on hand with the ZL7C story.  The ARRL=E2=80=99s = Wayne Mills, N7NG with a DXCC update, and if thats not enough, Tedd Mirgliotta, KB8NW,=  will be on hand to present the Northern Ohio DX Association Award for the 2002 DXpedition of the Year.  It looks like there will be something for everyo=ne at Hamvention 2003.  (OPDX)

RADIO LAW:  HR-1478 GETS SUPPORT FROM CQ MAGAZINE

CQ Magazine has joined the ARRL in asking hams to support House Bill HR-1=478.=20 This is the measure re-introduced by New York Congressman Steve Israel to expand the limited protections of "PRB-1" to homeowners' associations and restrictive covenants.=20

According to the ARRL, the 2002 version of the bill died without action. = The new bill initially had 13 co-sponsors from both parties including the onl=y two known hams in Congress.  They are identified as Representative Greg Walde=n, WB7OCE, of Oregon and Representative Mike Ross, WD5DVR, of Arkansas. =20

The ARRL and CQ are both now encouraging amateurs to contact their representatives in Congress to request that they support and even co-spon=sor the bill.  (CQ)

ENFORCEMENT:  PIRATE BROADCASTER SENTENCED TO JAIL

A Florida pirate broadcaster will spend the next nine months in a federal prison.  This is the sentence handed down by United States Magistrate Dav=id A. Baker against Rayon Sherwin =E2=80=9CJunior=E2=80=9D Payne.=20

Payne=E2=80=99s conviction is the result of an investigation that began i=n February of 1999.  About that time the Commission=E2=80=99s Tampa Office began rec= eiving complaints from residents and broadcasters in Orlando of interference to =

the reception of licensed broadcast stations.  The investigation lead them to Payne=E2=80=99s unlicensed station after which he was charged with multip= le counts of operating an unlicensed FM radio facility. =20

Payne pleaded guilty to two of the counts before Magistrate Baker who als= o
sentenced him to one year supervised release in addition to the jail time=
.=20
Once he is released Payne must perform 50 hours of community service and = must not violate any Federal, State or Local laws of the Communications Act of=
=20

The FCC announced the sentence on Monday May 12th.  The case was prosecut= ed by the United States Attorney=E2=80=99s Office for the Middle District of Fl= orida.=20

ENFORCEMENT:  AN EXPENSIVE LESSON FOR MICHIGAN HAM

The FCC has told a ham to pay a $12,000 fine for willful and repeated interference, broadcasting of music and failing to identify with his call= sign.
 Being ordered to pay is Scott E. Kamm, N0UGN, currently of Souix City Io= wa but who had his statiion licensed to the town of Waterbury Nebraska when he w= as first cited.

As previously reported, last December the FCC T-hunted down a strong sign= al on the input to a local repeater to Kamm=E2=80=99s Waterbury Nebraska reside= nce.  Agents
then performed a station inspection where they found a two meter transcie= ver set to the repeaters frequecy pair.  But Kamm denied any knowledge of the jamming, telling the inspectors that he never transmitted on the system a= nd
that the radio gear was used for monitoring purposes only.

But  the FCC refused to buy Kamm=E2=80=99s story.  On January 24th of thi= s year the regulatory agency issued Kamm a Notice of Aparenlt Liability in the amoun= t of $12,000.  Kamm never responded to it.  And so a few days ago on May 7th t= he FCC affirmed its earlier order and gave Kamm 30 days tio pay up.  (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT:  $2400 FINE FOR UNREGISTERED TOWER

The FCC has also issued a $2400 a monetary forfeiture to Morris Communica= tions,
Inc. of Greenville, South Carolina for failing to register an antenna structure. The FCC calls this one a willful violation of Section 17.4(a) = of the Commission's Rules.

On July 8, 2002, the Atlanta Office issued Morris a $3,000 forfeiture not= ice for failing to register its antenna structure in willful violation.  In i= ts response, Morris admits that its tower was not registered, but argued tha= t the forfeiture should be rescinded because it did not =E2=80=9Cwillfully=E2=80=

rules. =20

Morris claims that it made two good faith attempts to register the struct= ure in 1999, but the Commission first rejected its application on erroneous grou= nds
and later returned it without explanation.

But says the FCC, the Rules provides that, effective July 1, 1996, the ow= ner of any proposed or existing antenna structure that requires notification to =
the Federal Aviation Administration must register the structure with the Commission.  Abother section of the Rules provides that the owner of an a= ntenna structure that had been assigned painting or lighting requirements prior =
to
July 1, 1996 must have registered the structure prior to July 1, 1998. =20

Morris admits that its Adrian tower was not registered at the time of the inspection on May 7, 2002.  Accordingly, the FCC says that that Morris vi= the Rules and has ordered it to pay the fine.  The entire fionding is on-=

RADIO RULES:  FCC RESOLVES COMMERCIAL BROADCAST SPECTRUM ISSUE

The FCC has released new procedures to allocate and license the commercia= l F-M broadcast band.  This, where conflicting commercial and noncommercial use= s are proposed.  Since most new F-M and T-V channels can be used for commercial purposes and would be affected by non-commercial proposals, the CGC Communicator says that this decision may have widespread implications.  (=

RADIO RULES:  FAA TO SEND CLEARANCE DATA TO FCC ELECTRONICALLY

According to a Primedia trade publication, the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Aviation Administration  have announced that t= electronically to the FCC.  This will enable the Commission to process an=

NAMES IN THE NEWS:  W9GIG TO DEPART THE IRA

ARRL Central Division Director Dick Isely, W9GIG, says that he will not s= tand
for re-election to an official position within the Illinois Repeater Association.  Isley has been a guising force within the repeater council = for

It was Isley=E2=80=99s guidence that helped to create the National Freque= ncy
Coordinators Committee several years ago.  He has also served with ther Illinois Repeater Associuation for many years and has become a main stay = in the repeater coordination community.

According to his departure announcement, the decision to stand-down has n= othing directly to do with his position within the ARRL but he says that does wa= nt to put more of his time toward League matters.  Isley says that he has thoro= ughly enjoyed working for the Illinois Repeater Association but feels that it i= s time that new people step up to leadership positions.  He also wished the grou= p
continued success in its work of providing efficient and fair Amateur Rad=

THAT FINAL ITEM:  ITS T-HUNT TIME

And finally this wee, do you like hidden transmitter hunting?  If you do = then this one is for you.  Here=E2=80=99s Joe Moell, K0OV, has the latest info= rmation on the World Amateur Radio Direction Finding Championship games that are com= ing
up.

--

Who are the best transmitter hunters in the country?  That's what we'll f= ind out when the Third USA ARDF Championships get under way near Cincinnati, = Ohio
on July 30.  The sponsors, OH-KY-IN ARC and the Cincinnati Orienteering C= lub, promise two challenging radio-orienteering courses.  One will be on two m= eters, and the other on 80 meters.  This is a test of individuals, and it's all =
on foot.  You'll have five transmitters to find each day, negotiating your w= ay through the forest with your map, compass and direction-finding gear.  If= you can walk or jog a 10 km racecourse, you have the stamina to complete an A= RDF event.  If you're a senior citizen, don't worry about being trounced by teenagers, because there are a total of nine age categories, five for men= and boys, four for women and girls.

This year, the USA Championships are an international event, combined wit= h the International Amateur Radio Union (IARU) Region 2 ARDF Championships.  If= past events are any indication, there will be plenty of international experts = in the sport on hand, so you'll have a chance to learn foxtailing tips and techn= iques from the very best.  Positions on ARDF Team USA to next year's World Championships in the Czech Republic are open, so perhaps you can earn a s= pot for yourself.  We're looking for good candidates in all age/gender catego= ries,
so encourage your kids and grandkids to give it a try.

For the most intense experience, stay in the dorms at Miami University of= Ohio,
in close contact with the other competitors.  But space is limited, so no= w is the time to make plans.  You can stay elsewhere nearby if you like.  In e= ither case, time is getting short, so get registered at the Championships Web s= ite:=20

www.ardfusa.com  That's ardfusa.com

For lots more on foxhunting, including equipment ideas and techniques, go=
 to www.homingin.com.  Read about past USA Championships and get a link to th= is

You got it to work outside so the reciever is good. If your not near a repeater, you may have a problem in the apartment. Make sure your SAT and TER plugs are hooked up properly. Take a look around at other houses and take notice of which way their DirecTV and/or Dish Network antennas are pointed. Your XM anttenna should face the same general direction plus it's designed for use with a reflective ground plane (the metal roof of your car). Get tin foil or any 2ft x 2ft piece of metal behind the antenna and point it at the satellite arc and it will kick in. Good Luck!

I'm sure some of you noticed this last week, more will be coming up about this for sure, but here goes....

It looks like there are some 13,000 applications for translators, all of which were filed between March 10th and 17th of this year during a filing window for  an auction of frequency space for FM translators.

I mentioned that here in Utah, Brigham Young University is asking for them in five cities, and found they applied for multiple frequencies so they could get one if they had any that did not prove to be mutually exclusive for any reason.

KBYU, a 24-hour classical music station, was one of the small ones in this.  The vast majority of these apps were filed by and large by religious networks.  The three largest that I can tell were Educational Media Foundation (K-Love/Air1), CSN Internationsl, and a new one known as 'Radio Assist Ministries'.  There were some more regionalized ones, and some others that while they did not blanket the place they still loaded up on applications all the same.

The religious ones use satellites to feed the translators, and that I thought was supposed to only help colleges, universities, and other community organizations get a good signal out a good distance in some areas (like Utah, for example) to their translators, thus saving on costs, etc., in serving their areas.  This because of problems in getting public radio service to hard-to-reach communities otherwise, because of mountains, etc.  Commercial stations do not have this, so they don't usually go out much farther than maybe a couple hundred miles in utilizing translator services to extend their reach and service.

This also could trash the LPFM service by making it next to impossible to put one in where it is badly needed, either for format diversity reasons or community needs reasons.  The large religious networks rarely provide local info if at all to listeners in the more distant areas.  A couple provide time for a local weather forecast and maybe a couple of announcements for their full-power O&O's and affiliate stations, but darn little is ever heard otherwise.

So what do you all think regarding the translator land rush of 2003?

No. The NBA has an exclusive deal with Sirius for several games a night during the regular season, but neither MLB or the NFL (or the NHL, for that matter) is doing any business with XM. Baseball coverage on satellite radio is limited to ESPN Radio's Sunday night games, playoffs and World Series.

Has anyone used a Pogo Ripflash Trio with a Macintosh (preferrably running OSX)?
It could be a useful device for recording discussions, using an external mic, and then downloading the encoded Mp3 files to my Mac via USB.
(http://www.pogoproducts.com/ripflash_trio.htm )

At least until the Marantz PMD-670 solid state recorder becomes available.

Wating for MP3-recording to arrive :-)

Richard Branson's Radio Radio company operated as the super station broadcasting overnight on ILR stations across the UK.  Can't remember how long ago this was but in the last year or two it was based at Piccadilly Key 103 until EMAP took over everything in the North of England!

Of course half the population is below average! The other half is above average. He did NOT say that MORE than half are below average. However, for the statement to be true of the numbers, no-one must be exactly on the average, so the IQ scores must be stated exactly, to however many places of decimals are necessary to achieve this. IQ scores do not justify this degree of accuracy, and as they are usually given in whole numbers, a very large number of people will be right ON the  average. In fact the scores are adjusted to achieve this.

But geopelia did NOT say that half the population have an IQ of below average. He said that half the population "is of less than average intelligence". And since he is even older than I am, he has been around long enough to have learnt to say what he means. You have yet to learn to read what people say, but I am sure you are young enough to improve with age. Aren't we all?     8^)

This very morning we had a tornado sighting up the street. 3 TV stations from a nearby large market were doing full coverage. The two big "news" radio stations were doing some canned talk show. What happens when people lose their cable and/or power and have only a battery powered radio for info?? Radio news is non-existent when needed most.

Thats good to hear - I love these shows. A lost artform sadly.

Because I hate Clear Channel and I'm biased against them and the corporatization (word?) of radio in general.

I know radio used to offer more diversity prior to Hellicom Act of 96, so anytime I see a post preasing a corporate entity i feel compelled to get on my soap box.

I can't help it. It is a compulsion..........It is good to see that XM offers something more than what terrestrial radio has become, but I long to see Clear Channel and elk broken up so radio can improve in the programing they offer.

As I said, it set my mind working and I may well be wrong... I was taking that as a more literal statement than I needed to, I have just developed an interest in Statistics (due to the OU course I am doing I don't have much choice but to have an interest in them...) I just was wondering aloud...
It wasn't meant as criticism, merely as me wondering.

yeah...tell him to watch and see fox and friends hosts (for example) roll their eyes at stories concerning "liberals".   they don;t have to agree but the sarcasm is just show-biz right?

<<The "disenfranchised right segment" is one of the funniest phrases
I've heard in a long time.>>

i tried to be entertaining ;-)  still that's the general audience they are trying to attract. cnn does a great job of reporting.  it would take years for a new cable news network (like fox) to grab market share just through better reporting.  lets take advantage of the perception of a liberal media and infer that we are the fair and balanced place to be.  most who would have that view would also believe what?  use that info too.   it worked.  give them what they want to hear.....that sounds good if your selling lots of things but i don;t know if news is one of them.

<<They got where they are by being show biz.Glitzy. Lots of puff. Chatty. It's as though they hired every TV consultant in the business. >> well...i respect your opinion and i agree with some of what you have said but i see things on fox (and i don't watch often) which make me cringe.

<<It's even beginning to rub off on the broadcast media. WNBC-TV just changed their news set and graphics. It looks like LSD is as popular as ever.>> and that is just one of the reasons why.

enjoy,

It's beginning to look like something may be happening in International Waters in the not too distant future.
Manchester's Super Station has acquired the Communicator (Former Laser 558 ship).

>From http://www.mvcommunicator.com/4693.html

On 27 March 2003, The Super Station acquired the radio ship MV Communicator for use as a radio station. Unfortunately, any thoughts of broadcasting have been severely delayed due to vandals entering the ship and smashing up much of the equipment, leaving us with massive repair bills.

Our main priority at the moment is to bring the MV Communicator back from Pampushaven in the Netherlands to Essex, UK so we can carry out repairs and restore her to her former glory as a working radio ship.

We will be launching "The Communicator Club" very soon. Membership of the club will provide you with an exclusive newsletter, trips to see the ship once she returns to the UK, and progress reports as we continue work on her. Discounts on merchandise will also become available. Funds from the membership will help to finance the extensive repairs we need to carry out.

Once repairs to the ship are complete, our aim is to launch a live twenty four hour radio station, broadcasting a mixture of hot A.C. and soft rock.

Very soon we will be publishing recently taken photographs of the ship. This will enable you to witness the scale of the damage, and give you an idea of the extent of repairs needed in order to make the dream of bringing this ship back to life a reality.

In May 2002, Dave Miller called Janie Ash, the former Managing Director of a radio station in Belfast where they both worked, for a chat about a mad idea of saving a radio ship from the scrap yard.

To his amazement she thought the idea of preserving a piece of radio history, while at the same time creating a brand new vibrant radio station was a thrilling prospect.

Through the lengthy process of purchasing the ship, both Dave and Janie remained committed and hopeful that Clear Channel Communications (the previous owner of The Communicator) would finally sell to them for an affordable price and not scrap her.

On 27 March 2003, Dave and Janie flew to Amsterdam to meet Rob Van Der Vegt from Clear Channel to take another look at the vessel and take ownership of her.  It was a huge achievement after months of complex negotiations.  As they both stepped on board the smiles dissapeared as they looked around to see that vandals had been on board and wrecked the ship. A deal was struck and the ship was transferred over so that work could commence with immediate effect.

In May 1984 Laser 558 appeared from the radio ship MV Communicator anchored in the North Sea. Its All American DJ's soon attracted a cult audience of 10 million loyal listeners. Independent Local radio stations were not only losing listeners but advertising revenue as well.

Laser 558 always disputed the "pirate" tag and in a press release from the New York Office Roy Lindau President of MMI,the Worldwide Sales Group for the station stated "that unlike other pirate stations of the past Laser 558 is a legal station, since the ship is registered outside of Europe, transmits from International Waters, is owned by a Panamanian company and staffed and supplied by citizens of The United States Of America.

Big American Personalities became household names all over Europe. Jessie Brandon, Rick Harris, David Lee Stone, Steve Masters, Holly Michaels, Craig Novak, Chris Carson,Tommy Rivers and of course Charlie Wolf.

Having gotten absolutely fed up with the crap on FM radio, I decided to give XM a try, so bought the Delphi SkiFi receiver and the 'Boombox' player. Got it home, plugged it in, and all I got is a message that said 'No signal' So I spent about 3 hours trying to 'aim' the antenna every which way (and them some), trying it in ever room in my apartment and every window - not even a trace of a signal on the 'antenna aiming' screen.

So, I put 6 D batteries in it, walked out to the parking lot, and it worked great. However, as soon as I got anywhere near the covered walkway of my apartment, the signal died instantly :-(

I have windows on two sides of my apartment, but I guess they are the 'wrong sides' .. I'm really not sure which side is south here. I live on the 1st of a 3 floor apartment.

What I want to know is, am I just S.O.L. here, or might I have better luck with a better antena, or possible a different XM receiver? Having previewed some of the channels outside, I really want this to work!!

PS - I apologize in advance if this is the wrong group for this.

Hey Doug!

howssit?

How has Avid support been. We're looking at a huge upgrade, and while the product looks great, their past service practices scares the hell out of me.

Did some research on whatever happen to the SuperJock and posted it in Wikipedia, which currently resides here:

http://www.wikipedia.org/wiki/Larry_Lujack

If you know, please verify his tenure at various radio stations, especially in the mid-1960s.  Though he did two stints EACH at WCFL and WLS (see below) the first two durations are poorly documented on the 'net.

Larry Lujack
>From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia.

Larry Lujack was a pioneer in the shock jock field and is famous for his Toothfairy tales and "Animal Stories."

He was born June 6, 1940 in Iowa as Larry Blankenburg, attended College of Idaho in Caldwell, Washington State University and was a radio disc jockey starting in the early 1960s at KCID in Caldwell. He subsequently worked at several other radio stations but is best known for his antics on Chicago AM radio stations WLS and WCFL.

Though he retired in 1987, shortly after his son from his first marriage died in a traffic accident, Larry began working again in May 2000 as a remote disc jockey for WUBT. In 1997 he moved from Palatine to the outskirts of Santa Fe, where hs plays golf and landscapes. He was inducted into the Illinois Broadcaster Association's Hall of Fame in June 2002.

> >Being #1 in cable ratings is "narrow-casting"?>

<<I think FOX is #1 in cable news networks. I believe the #1 overall cable channel is either Lifetime or USA..>>

<<<I meant #1 in cable news.  Sorry...operational error.>>> relative to cable news, yes i think so.  most news operations wouldn;t be as bold as to use such marketing (for want of a better word) to sell their product.  the traditional way would be to hire big names.....cover all the stories...get the big scoops get new hi-tech graphics but just being better at reporting would take too long and would be way too expensive....its better to find the "disenfranchised" segment and give THEM what they want.

gotta fill 500-channels somehow and the future may be "news to your views".

in the area where i live there is a local t-v station that has the highest share of news viewers than any other station in the us.   (not a major metropolitan area) some of the stations competitors actually do a better job of reporting (for example they win lots of news awards and spot reporting awards.....the number-1 just won 2-state awards for p-s-a and childrens show.) but viewers don;t leave the #1 for their competitors.    how can the #1 station be beat?  better reporting (relative to the #1 which has the revenue and the resources to cover things pretty well) is not going to help you win.   i've jokingly suggested that the competition follow fox's lead.

enjoy,

RESCUE RADIO: TORNADOES SWEEP THE NATIONS MID-REGION

Ham radio has again come to the aid of America. This time as a series of killer tornadoes rip across the Central and South-Eastern states. We have the details in this report:

Blackouts, water shortages and desperate searches for the missing. This is the situation confronting tornado battered residents of the central United States as the death toll rises to 40 from the most violent weather in four years.

Beginning on Sunday the 4th and continuing through most of the week, swarms of violent thunderstorms and tornadoes crashed through the United States midsection. They caused devastation in three states and are spawning problems in several others.

Kansas, Missouri and Tennessee suffered the worst damage in the initial Sunday onslaught. Kansas listed seven people killed, Missouri had seventeen fatalities and Tennessee sixteen. The storms also disrupted electrical power and telephone service with debris from fallen structures blocking roads in some areas.

One of the hardest hit areas was Madison County, Tennessee where ten people were killed. There, power blackouts were widespread and it was not known when telephone service can be restored. Several of the regions A-R-E-S groups were reported activated as was the Missouri Traffic Net operating near 3 point 960 MHz in the 75 meter band.

In Missouri, ARRL Section Emergency Coordinator, Don Moore, K-M-Zero-R, reports that amateur operators are continuing damage assessment duties. An ARRL bulletin says that the Amateur Radio Emergency Service, Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service and SKYWARN groups were active across the affected area. Hams are also assisting the American Red Cross and Salvation Army relief operations.

A bit to the West, in Kansas, Section Manager Ron Cowan, K-B-Zero-D-T-I, says that one tornado touched down in Leavenworth County. It remained on the ground before crossing the border into Missouri. There the storm brought havoc to Platte and Clay counties before falling apart just North-East of Kansas City. But during its trek, Wyandotte and Leavenworth Counties sustained severe damage. Cowan says that homes were destroyed and utilities knocked out along the twisters path.

The tornadoes were believed to be a part of a huge weather system that rolled across the Midwest and parts of the South. It also spawned twisters in Arkansas, South Dakota and Nebraska. Storms on Tuesday and Wednesday accounted for funnel cloud sightings in Alabama, Illinois and here in Louisiana. In all, nine states are affected and the National Weather Service credited ham radio operators with dozens of storm related reports over the weekend and they are continuing into the week.

As we go to air, hundreds of people are still being housed in temporary shelters where Amateur Radio volunteers have become an important ingredient in relief efforts.

This is obviously an ongoing story and we will have an update in next week’s Amateur Radio Newsline report.

>From New Orleans, Louisiana, I’m Don Wilbanks, AE5DW.

Jim.

Thanks Don.  (ARNewsline™ from various sources including ARRL bulletins)

RESCUE RADIO:  TORNADO DESTROYS K0ETC BEACON

There is an ironic side to this story directly affecting ham radio. The K0ETC beacon North of Joplin Missouri in grid square EM27 was aparently destroyed when one of the twisters blew down the building housing it.  An Internet posting by the beacons owner Jay Rupar, K0ETC, shortly after the incident said that there were no injuries at the former beacon site but two people were killed by the same storm about 30 miles away. Rupar says that the present location of the beacon itself is unknown but that it will be replaced. (KC6WFS/7)

HAM RADIO HEROES: NOAA HONORS “ALERT” VOLUNTEERS

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has selected ALERT -- the Alabama Emergency Response Team to receive one of this years NOAA Environmental Hero Awards. This award recognizes ALERT for its outstanding efforts in support of the NOAA National Weather Service Forecast Office in Birmingham.

NOAA says that under the leadership of ALERT president Chuck Arthur, KF4SSX, team members have spent hundreds of hours using ham radio to coordinate storm reports throughout the Birminham office’s warning area. The agency goes on to say that over the years they have proven to be an invaluable resource during such major events as an F 4 tornado that struck Tuscaloolsa County on December 16th of 2000 and the tornado outbreak of November 24th 2001.

NOAA took special note of ALERT’s work following last years Veterans Day severe weather outbreak that included to F 3 catagory tornados that killed 12 people. NOAA says that the ALERT volunteers stayed with their Amateur Radio stations relaying critical storm reports to meteorologists and relaying storm information to Emergency Manasers across the central and northern tiers of the state. NOAA says thart the steady flow of reports were crucial to the issuance of new warnings and the office’s ability to quickly get the word out to the publiic.

Presented in in conjunction with Earth Day celebrations, the award honors NOAA volunteers for their tireless efforts to preserve and protect our nation’s environment. It was presentede to ALERT on Satyrday, May 3rd. More on ALERT is on the web at www.alert-alabama.org. (NOAA)

THE VEC SYSTYEM: A PROBABLE E-FILING LICENSING RECORD SET

Before a ham can respond to an emergency, he or she first has to become licensed. And a Wisconsin college may have set a new Amateur Radio record in that area. Would you believe 81 new hams in less than 24 hours? Well its true and Amateur Radio Newsline’s Roy Neal, K6DUE, is here with the rest of the story:

It happened in Wisconsin. Picture this. 81 students sat for and passed their amateur radio tech class license exams in one day. What’s more, they received their license grants within 24 hours! This became the largest test session ever to employ the new technique of on-line submission of test results and applicant data to the FCC. They are the students of Dr. John Weiss, WD8KLO of U W Stouts’ College of Technology, Engineering and Management

Weiss gave his students the option of earning their radio licenses in partial fulfillment of class requirements. The examination team was coordinated by John Burningham, WB8PUF, of UW-Stout’s communication, Education and Training Department. It included Weiss; Jon Fuller, W9JHF, Student Life Services; and UW-Stout students Andy Wagner, KB9TAC and Scott Littfin, N0EDV.

The University of Wisconsin-Stout has a reputation for firsts. In 2001, the college, which is located in Menomonie, became the first to receive the prestigious Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award. It was presented by none other than President George W. Bush.

The rapid license grants were made possible by using newly available VE-to-VEC-to-FCC electronic submission technology developed by the W5YI Volunteer Examination Coordinator. Using password-protected electronic forms posted to the W5YI VEC website, John Burningham, WB8PUF began keying in the test results right after the exam session.

All 81 applications were waiting at the VEC Office when it opened the following morning. After routine screening, the applications were electronically retransmitted to the FCC. Within an hour, the FCC issued the licenses and call signs. These were immediately forwarded over the Internet to Burningham who informed the waiting students of the new calls while at the same time probably setting a new electronic licensing record for ham radio in the United States. 81 new hams in one day at one licensing location.

Go Wisconsin Stout!

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Roy Neal, K6DUE.

Weiss is an Associate Professor at UW-Stout specializing in advanced telecommunications technology.  Additional information on the school’s telecommunication systems program is available on the web at http://tcs.uwstout.edu.  (W5YI)

HAMVENTION 2003®:  FCC TO BE A NO-SHOW

Don't look for any major ham radio regulatory announcements at next weeks Dayton Hamvention.  That's because the agency will not be there.  David Black, KB4KCH, reports from Amateur Radio Newsline’s South-East Bureau on the what and the why:

Hamvention producer Garry Matthews, K-B-8-G-O-L says conflicting commitments will keep regular FCC presenters Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, and Bill Cross, W3TN from attending. Matthews says the Hamvention tried to find suitable replacements, but none were available.

Speculation suggested that FCC officials might use the Hamvention's Forum to release news of a so-called omnibus Amateur Radio Notice of Proposed Rule Making expected out in May. The notice would consist primarily of outstanding rules change requests and pending petitions for reconsideration. With the Dayton FCC forum canceled, what venue, if any, the Commission might use for its release is not clear.

And what about the two hours on Saturday morning May 17th the FCC was supposed to fill? Matthews says it's being offered to other session leaders who might not like their current time slots and want to change. He says the FCC hould be back in 2004 with Hollingsworth, Cross and perhaps others representing the Commission.

From the South-East Bureau in Birmingham Alabama, I'm David Black, KB4KCH.

We will have more Hamvention 2003® happenings later on in this weeks Amateur Radio Newsline report. (ARNewsline™)

RADIO RULES: FCC TAKING COMMENTS ON PLC NOI

And speaking about the FCC, e have a follow up on last weeks story about the agency releasing its Notice of Inquiry on the deployment of ''Broadband over Power Line'' or B-P-L technology. Now comes word that the complete Notice of Inquirey which was released on April 28th is available on the FCC Web site. Also that the FCC now is accepting electronically filed comments via its Electronic Comment Filing System ECFS Express page.

But what about the actual affect of B-P-L on ham radio. An ARRL Bulletin, explains that ''Broadband over Power Line'' is really a form of carrier-current communication better known around the world as power line carrier or P-L-C.

B-P-L would couple high-frequency RF to parts of the power grid and use existing power lines as the transmission medium to deliver broadband and Internet access. This is the same technology refused for use in Japan becuse tests showed signifigant interference to consumer electronic products including Amateur Radio on the high frequency bands. And in the Notice of Inquirey the FCC does acknowledge the signifigant interference risk from B-P-L.

ARRL Lab Manager and RFI-guru Ed Hare, W1RFI, also has concerns. A noted expert in the field, Hare cautions that deployment of B-P-L could affect every amateur in communities where it's employed. This, by causing a significant increase in noise levels. Obviously, this is one isssue that a lot of hams will be filing comments on with the FCC. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: UNAUTHORIZED OPERATION BRINGS $5000 FINE

The FCC has issued a $5000 fine to Blue Ridge Erectors, Inc. of Bangor Pennsylvania. This, for operating radio transmitting equipment on 467.250 MHz without Commission authorization.

According to the FCC, back on August 27, 2002, the agency’s New York Field Office issued the forfeiture notice to Blue Ridge but the company has not filed a response to the N-A-L. After waiting almost three-quarters of a year the FCC has affirmed the fine and has ordered Blue Ridge Erectors to pay the $5000 within 30 days of the release of its Order.

For more information on this one take your web browser over to the FCC website at http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DA-03-1366A1 (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC ALLEGES MICHIGAN HAM ENGAGED IN DELIBERATE INTERFERENCE, THREATS

The FCC claims that a ham has engaged in deliberate interference, broadcasting and that he threatened other amateurs. And now the agency is sending Michael Guernsey Sr, ND8V, of Parchment Michigan a tape recording to back up those assertions. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Blair Alper, KA9SEQ, has the details:

According to the ARRL Letter, since late 1998, Michael Guernsey, Sr., N-D-8-V, has been the recipient of seven letters from FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth. This includes two warning notices. And in 2000, the FCC threatened to designate Guernsey's license for a revocation and suspension hearing. Guernsey subsequently agreed to a nine-month suspension of his High Frequency operating privileges in 2001.

But on April 7th of this year Hollingsworth again wrote to Guernsey. This time Hollingsworth said that the operation of Guernsey’s station over the last several years raises questions about the Michigan hams’ qualifications to remain a Commission licensee.

According to Hollingsworth, this time there is audio to support the claims. The recorded transmissions were made this past March 26th, and are said to back up complaints from other amateurs of deliberate interference on 20 meters. In his letter, Hollingsworth noted that some of the interference apparently sprang from on-the-air personal disputes or from what Guernsey perceived as deliberate interference to his transmissions. Even so, Hollingsworth said, Guernsey has apparently ignored the Commission's written and verbal warnings to not retaliate with similar behavior.

Hollingsworth advised Guernsey that the alleged deliberate retaliatory threats and transmissions on top of other QSOs are contrary to FCC rules. He also stated this indicates that the numerous warnings issued to date have little, if any, effect in regarding to bringing Guernsey's operation into compliance with Commission rules, indicating that other, harsher enforcement action may be needed.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Blair Alper, KA9SEQ, reporting.

Hollingsworth told Guernsey review the tape recording and respond in writing and in detail within 20 days of reciept of its reciept. He said the FCC will use the information Guernsey submits to decide whether to designate ND8V's license for a suspension and revocation proceeding or to lift voice privileges from Guernsey's license for the remainder of his license term, which ends in 2012. ## HAMVENTION 2003®: MEET THE MAN BEHIND QRZ.COM

Want to meet the man who makes possible the famed QRZ.COM website? If you're going to the Dayton Hamvention this year, be sure and make it a point to stop by the W5YI booth in the main building and say hello to Fred Lloyd, AA7BQ, the founder of QRZ.COM. Fred says that he will be there throughout the show and will have some nice QRZ.COM name badge souvineers to hand out to everyone who stops by along with the latest QRZ Ham Radio CD-ROM at a special show price. (QRZ.COM)

HAMVENTION 2003®: THE DX HOSPITALITY SUITE

The Northern Ohio DX Association and WVNO Radio will once again sponsor a Hospitality Suite at this year's Dayton Hamvention. The suite will be open on Friday and Saturday evenings in Suite 1011 of the Crowne Plaza Hotel. The Crown Plaza is the old Stouffers located in downtown Dayton.

And in a tribute to one of the areas best known hams, the association is dedicating this year's Hospitality Suite to "Silent Key" Jim Hire, W8ZET, who was a Northern Ohio DX Association Honorary Life Member.

Hire's wife, Janeen, KC8BRS, has decided to keep the tradition going. She will be providing some special memorabilia of Jim at the Hospitality Suite. (NODXA)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD:  ED JUGE, W5EJ, - S.K.

Some sad news to report.  Word thar well-known amateur Ed Juge, W5EJ, has passed away.

Aaccording to longtime friend and colleague Bob Miller, K2RM, Juge, the former W5TOO, was an executive at RadioShack for many years and one of the people who kept ham radio on the company's radar.  Outside the world of ham radio, W5EJ was a well-known and well-respected figure in the computer industry.

Ed Juge also had served on the ARRL No-Code committee in the late 1980s, chaired the ARRL Digital Committee in 1992 and was particularly active in QRP. He is survived by his wife, Jo, KA5ABC, by two children and three grandchildren.  (CQ)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY:  COGNITIVE RADIO - IT LIVES

Believe it or not there a movement underway at the FCC to increase spectrum efficiency through the use of a new technology being called cognitive radio.

What is cognative radio you ask?  This is radio gear and  antenna systems that could adapt to their operating environments by automatically identifying vacant spectrum, switching to that spectrum and carrying out a specific communications mission.

Cognitive radio will also be the subject of an upcoming workshop at FCC headquarters.  More information is at the http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DOC-233615A1.doc  (CGC)

SPECIAL EVENT:  AMATEUR CROSS BAND COMMUNICATIONS TEST

Iin celebration of the 54th anniversary of Armed Forces Day, the United States Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard are co-sponsoring the annual Military and Amateur Radio Communication Test for 2003.  These tests provide hams and short wave listeners an opportunity to demonstrate their individual technical skills while receiving recognition from the Secretary of Defense along with the appropriate military radio stations.

According to an Internet post by N6DDF, although the actual armed Forces Day is celebrated on Saturday, May 17th the crossband communications test was to be conducted one week earlier on May 10th.  This,  so that it would not conflict with the Dayton Hamvention

QSL cards will be provided to those stations who made contact with the military stations.  Also, a special commemorative certificate will be awarded to anyone who receives and copies the digital message from the Secretary of Defense. (Via Internet)

DX

In D-X, members of the Clube Radioamadores do Entroncamento will use the special callsign, CS7AL, and will be active May 31st from Castel Alcanede for the Portuguese Castles Award. Operation will be on 40 and 20 meter SSB. Castel Alcanede is located in the Province of Ribatejo. QSL via CT1BXE, direct or via the bureau.  (OPDX)

Also look for W2AZK and KF2HC from the North Jersey DX Association portable on St.Croix from June 12th to the 19th.  Operation will be SSB and CW on 160 through 10 meters.  QSL direct or via the bureau to the call worked.  Confirmed QSOs are good towards the North Jersey D-X Association award.  See www.njdxa.org for details.  (OPDX)

THAT FINAL ITEM:  ROYAL HONORS

And finally this week, a radio amateur has received royal honors in the Netherlands. Hans van de Groenendaal, ZS6AKV, of the SARL news service has the story of Lou van de Nadort PA0LOU:

Lou van de Nadort PA0LOU, retired Chairman of the International Amateur Radio Union Region 1 was recognised by Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands for his outstanding contribution to Amateur Radio.  He was decorated with Member of the “Order of Oranje Nassau”.

Lou was one of the 3594  people who were recognised this year  by the queen when the Royal Recognition awards were announced on April 30, in Holland known as “Koningine dag”, the queens birthday .

Lou van de Nadort retired from the IARU Region 1 Executive in October last year after having been almost 28 years at the helm of the organisation.  In his farewell editorial in Region 1 News he called it retirement from active duty and wrote “I will always have IARU and its work at heart and will continue to support the cause"

The medal was presented to Lou at his home in Zundert in Holland when the Major and a delegation of civics and members of the VERON Council arrived there on April 30. Lou said it took my totally by surprise, I never expected it.

Hans van de Groenendaal ZS6AKV

ZS6AKV adds that the award is an acknowledgement for PA0LOU’s outstanding contribution to the community.  (SARL News Service)

WiggleFm is broadcasting from 12-24 May from South Leicestershire College in the UK Midlands on 95.1FM.  It also goes out via Media Player over the internet.
It is run by our media students and they would get a great kick out of some feedback, just knowing that people have listened would be brilliant, especially if you could e-mail have a sound report  back.  They'll even play a record for you or a loved one.

www.slcollege.ac.uk/wiggle

This year there is a web cam set up and an exclusive Beatles competition prize to be won.

Many thanks,
Wiggle

If this is true, why are people listening to commercial broadcasting? With your premise, we'd have to assume that CD and tape sales would be way, way up. But RIAA keeps crying the blues that they are down.

Really? So tell me how did Limbaugh's audience compare with the total audience of ABC,NBC,CBS,CNN,PBS, and NPR?  Or the readership of such print outlets as Los Angeles Times, Washington Post, or especially  the NY Times, since other media outlets across the country rely on the NY Times for their editorial guidance.

Yeah, right.  :) Fox News has gotten to the successful place where they are by departing from the traditional slants of the major broadcast media outlets and by hosting guests who take opposite sides of each issue and let the best arguments and logic win.

Having gotten absolutely fed up with the crap on FM radio, I decided to give XM a try, so bought the Delphi SkiFi receiver and the 'Boombox' player. Got it home, plugged it in, and all I got is a message that said 'No signal' So I spent about 3 hours trying to 'aim' the antenna every which way (and them some), trying it in ever room in my apartment and every window - not even a trace of a signal on the 'antenna aiming' screen.
So, I put 6 D batteries in it, walked out to the parking lot, and it worked great. However, as soon as I got anywhere near the covered walkway of my apartment, the signal died instantly :-(
I have windows on two sides of my apartment, but I guess they are the 'wrong sides' .. I'm really not sure which side is south here. I live on the 1st of a 3 floor apartment.
What I want to know is, am I just S.O.L. here, or might I have better luck with a better antena, or possible a different XM receiver? Having previewed some of the channels outside, I really want this to work!!

PS - I apologize in advance if this is the wrong group for this.

PPS - Sending this for a second time - don't think the first message ever made it!

High School and College Broadcasting stations here is 1927 LaneTech High School - Chicago

http://www.smecc.org/lane_technical_high_school_-.htm
here is tonight's work extracted from the 1927 lane tech - Chicago yearbook. would have loved high school there!

We need more personal write-ups and past stories to add to the museum's web site here.
Please respond off list ok? check your old yearbooks the family has laying around.... see if one of those old high schools or colleges had a station! let's document it! Our address is below...

need old year books! need lane tech before 1927, as this 1927 article is when they just rebuilt the station.... we want to see what it looked like earlier than that!

The FM30 is a high quality stand alone transmitter that is extremely reliable.
This particular radio was never used except as a backup, it is mechanically and cosmetically in excellent condition. It has a manual that is very descriptive and helpful.New these go for about $4000..I don't expect that, but please don't waste my time with ridiculous offers.

I do not visit this newsgroup so call if you are serious about this unit.

Consider the original post at the top of the thread included a rant that singled out a single broadcaster, CC.  Since you felt CC (but no other co.) was an important component of a discussion involving radio and the tornado disasters , which CC stations did not perform well regarding the tornado coverag?  Also, how did stations with different owners perform better than these CC stations?

hi, has anyone got this, we are setting up a radio station for a wired hospital system and are still in the early stages, we are experimenting with different presenting techniques and basically making jingles etc, we would like to have v - the production library but are unable to receive until we have a valid MCPS licence, but we are unable to get this until the station is fully up and running. Would it be possible for anyone who has this to do us a copy, it will not be broadcasted, it will be used purely for practise, I would be willing to pay all costs for cd's postage etc, when the station is up and running properly we will use the licensed copy's etc.

TIA

I'll jump in here (Hi Ed...long time...)

Pay for radio. just don't get that one.

I burn my own CD's, and monitor AM MW and SW. Just bought a Sony Xplod am/fm/sw for the car. Maybe Gene Scott will be more interesting than radio today. Here up the highway in Awstin it is VERY bad, with what is very little CC involvement. Actually I have not listened to any of theirs here in the two years I've been back. When I left Awstin in 1991 they had one flea bit FM class A. And a 50Kw flame thrower on AM in SA. My how the world has changed.

But pay for radio? I don't get it. That ain't radio.

We are radio's BEST friend. What we offer is called BiteMan The Prep-Sheet with at least 15 pages or more of all the information that is worth sharing with your listeners. It is a daily sheet M thru F. Why search the internet for showprep when BiteMan The Prep-Sheet has done it for you. We have scoured the internet for the BEST showprep in the world. It is $36 for 3mo.'s or $72 for 6mo.'s  http://www.biteman.net

MANSON BRINGS ON "THE GOLDEN AGE"

MARILYN MANSON's "The Golden Age of Grotesque" arrives in record stores today, three years after his last album, "Holy Wood." Manson celebrated the album's release with his Grotesk Burlesk party at the Key Club in Los Angeles last night. Manson performed a seven-song set featuring five new songs. "I love Manson, that's why I'm here," former GUNS N' ROSES drummer MATT SORUM told Rolling Stone. "He takes it to the extreme. It's a real show, you always know it's going to be an amazing visual performance."

NOEL REDDING DIES

NOEL REDDING, the English bassist best known for playing in the JIMI HENDRIX EXPERIENCE between 1966 and 1969, died Monday of unknown causes; he was fifty-seven. Redding played on Hendrix's three most popular recordings -- "Are You Experienced?" (1967), "Axis: Bold as Love" (1968) and "Electric Ladyland" (1968) -- before departing to start his own bands, FAT MATTRESS and the NOEL REDDING BAND. As a member of the Jimi Hendrix Experience, Redding was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1992.

JACKSON SUES MOTOWN

MICHAEL JACKSON is suing his former label Motown Records and its parent company Universal for unpaid royalties and ownership of his early recordings. Jackson claims that Motown breached a contract dated January 1980 that required the label to pay him royalties for pre-1976 recordings he made as a solo artist and with the JACKSON 5. "Neither Motown nor its successors have provided accounting or paid Jackson a single dollar in royalties," reads the suit. "He seeks a complete and accurate accounting and full payment of all royalties due."

YORN RAINS ON FARRELLYS

PETE YORN will cover the ALBERT HAMMOND hit "It Never Rains in Southern California" for the upcoming Farrelly brothers comedy "Stuck on You." Yorn, who is touring behind his new album, "Day I Forgot," will record the song on the road. "My band brought all this recording equipment, like old four-tracks and stuff," Yorn told Rolling Stone. "We might just do it in a hotel room." The Farrellys provided Yorn with his first break, using two of his songs in their 2000 film, "Me, Myself and Irene," before the release of his 2001 debut.

Fox News did commence Fox News Live with Alan Colmes, a daily three hour

There used to be a one-man radio station up here - WVCA-FM in Gloucester, which played public domain classical music.
He wasn't much different than this guy.

Here in the Boston area,  we still have several non-commercial radio stations that are run by college students for college students (that haven't been turned into revenue generators)  and you will still find young ladies on the air making their first on-air announcements.   It's a bit unpolished but it is pleasant to listen to.

Maybe it's strange,  but some would rather listen to content than polish.

In radio as in TV, the programming is not the product.  You are not the customer.  YOU are the product.  The advertiser is the customer.

Some people would rather just pay money outright rather than allowing themselves to be packaged with other members of their demographic and sold to the highest bidder.  Cash on the barrelhead seems more straightforward and efficient, not to mention less annoying.  At least the person consuming the programming is now the person the broadcaster has to please, which should in theory lead to a better service.  (In practice... well, look at cable/satellite TV.  Still lots of crap.  But then, 90% of everything is crap.)

Well it costs money to broadcast the signals, so you either pay with your time, by not getting what you want, or pay with your wallet and get what you want.

The right hand downward slope of the bell curve being the highest intelligence?... I would say a good way down that right hand curve... am I right?
You see, I could have said something mean... but I am a nice person. I make RMC a happier place to be. It is my vocation in life :o)

Since you felt CC (but no other co.) was an important component of a discussion involving radio and the tornado disasters , which CC stations did not perform well regarding the tornado coverag?

I think CC is widely accepted as being the "icon" of radio consolidation since they own so many stations that are unattended turnkey operations. It really doesn't matter if it's CC, Cume-U-Less, Joe Blow Broadcasting or the Infidel Radio Network... the point is, which stations decided that a severe weather outbreak of this magnitude wasn't worth going live for.

> Also, how did stations with different owners perform better than these CC stations?

So far, CC actually had some instances where they provided live coverage during the storms, and others where they didn't. There were also instances where stations owned by "other companies" did no more than "sit on the bird".

If your nearest live station is 70 miles away, you're going to have a pretty hard time hearing it through all the lightning interference.
It's kind of stupid telling people to have a battery-operated radio at hand for emergencies if all they'll be able to pick up locally is canned programming, isn't it?

What equipment?

The transmitter had been removed by its owner Nozema,, and was not part of the deal.
The old TX, used by Laser, was only a cabinet and a few parts, overboard.
The generators are not in working order, the TX was fed by hired outboard generators.
There was only a simple studio; worth maybe 2000  Pounds.

leaving us with massive repair bills.

Also after it was sold the new owners themselves, to my surprise, did do nothing to prevent vandalism.

The ship MUST be removed since all the permits for anchoring are in the hands of Nozema.
The new holder of frequency 1224 kHz (to be made known at the end of the month) might want to get on the air ASAP , Nozema needs to built a platform or whatever right there for the transmitter.
1224 kHz is assigned to that site.

Do they realize that it is in a bad condition, apart from the recent vandalism? Not seaworthy.

Well whenever they will have it in the condition I was last on board,

Where you are?  Somewhere south-east of Australia is my guess.

Yes, I can now name some of the larger applicants:

Educational Media Foundation (K-Love/Air1)
Radio Assist Ministries
CSN International (and affiliated churches).

These three and assorted smaller religious broadcasters account for the lions share of the applications, I've discovered.  In the states near the Mexican border, there are alot of spanish-language religious translators, LPFMs, etc., trying to make their mark also.

There have also been some legitimate NCE-FM translator/LPFM applicants in local areas as well.  In Utah it's KBYU, and they are a 24-hour classical music station, and in Arizona there's KNAU (Board of Regents for and in behalf of Northern Arizona University) that have alot.
Both of these will provide very much needed services to the communities they will serve in their states, being that classical music and fine arts educational programming is rare to begin with.  In the case of the Utah stations for KBYU, this will replace the classical music programming dumped when KUER went all news-talk two years back.

Right idea but it doesn't work.  90% (or more) is crap, so I'd rather not pay for it.  Show me a service that consistently gives me the quality of signal and content that I get sporadically from WQXR and BBC3 and I'll be happy to pay.

I know that the Arbitron ratings are very complex and probably well over my head.  That said, I thought I'd managed to grasp how it works generally for stations, time slots, markets, etc.

Just when I thought I had that all noodled out, I recently heard that broadcasters can make a blanket statement regarding listenership based on the following formula:

If a person listens to at least 15 Minutes of a show per week, that show may claim them as a listener for statistical and advertising purposes.

As a result, a radio show can say "We have Ten Zillion listeners!", even though many of those souls may not have their crystal sets tuned into the show for any significant portion of the time.

Right?  Wrong?  Way off base?

So what you guys are saying is that the public can not depend on radio broadcasts on the AM and FM broadcast bands to deliver a local public service alerts or messages (in this case tornado warnings and results).

So instead the gov uses your tax dollars to expand the NWS network. A local county in my area put up their own network of translators on 14xxkhz AM to cover public alerts because the main AM station only broadcasts in Polish.

My own local AM station only broadcasts in Spanish.

And most of the listening public probably is listening to FM anyhow.

Radio Shack 12-249.  Strangely enough, looking for it on the RS website all I can find are PDF manuals - I have a horrible feeling they've been stupid enough to discontinue it.

Oh, I think they have a definite audience in mind.  There are plenty of people listening.  There are also plenty of people who fall outside their target audience.

> That's always been the case pretty much. Public stations have pretty much Depends on where you are.  Wisconsin Public Radio is very effective locally, but few other states do that well.

> It can be aruged that EAS will automatically break in, corporate can switch > to local TV audio, etc., but that assumes everything is working correctly. A human can always improvise around malfuntions and such, but a relay clicks the same whether there's a source feeding it or not.

Stations are only required to relay RMT (Required Monthly Test), EAN (we're about to get nuked), and EAT. (OK, we're not going to get nuked) RWT (Required Weekly Test) must be logged. Anything else can be legally ignored - up to and including TOR. (Tornado Warning)

I know at least one station around here does relay the EAS transmissions for severe weather, but I wouldn't be surprised if it's only one station.

Now that said, none of the major TV stations relay EAS for weather either. They all handle weather with their own systems and people, and do far better than a mere relay of the weather wire could.

> I'm starting to really understand the pirate radio movement more than ever. It's a waste that most LPFM's are only going to be adding more religion to the dial, which has plenty now. Most who wanted LPFM licenses have an actual desire to serve their communities, but were turned down in favor of church groups.

Many (though by no means all) of the religious LPFM permittees are local churches. Now whether that means they'll program locally remains to be seen. I would not at all rule out local churches being able to produce quality local programming of interest to all people, not just their members.

There are more than a few that I'm rather suspicious of though.

Really, religious groups simply filed far more LPFM applications. (and secular groups were more likely to file in larger cities, where they tended to get clobbered by the Oxley anti-LPFM bill) The more you file, the more you get...

> TV has been the winner over radio for decades IMO. But you'll still find a few stations that are just as useless as unattended radio.

Oh, there are plenty of TV stations that are just as unattended as radio. Here in Nashville I'd only count on the ABC/CBS/NBC affiliates for emergency info. Fox/UPN/WB do crawl weather alerts, and run a credible 9pm newscast on the Fox channel.

Cable is required to pass EAS, and in Nashville passes the weather alerts. Not much but better than nothing...

There's a difference between respectful disagreement (as, for example, you might see when representatives of the two parties appear on "Face The Nation" or similar programs) and offensive one-sided propagandizing.
(such as Rush's - or worse, G. Gordon's - shows)

I'm not suggesting these programs shouldn't be on the air.  What I'm saying is that I don't like them, and I'm not going to listen to them.

I don't like country music either, so I don't listen to WSM.  Doesn't mean I think WSM should lose its license.  It does mean I'm not going to get my news from AM 650.

You apparently accept the suggestion of left-wing bias in the major media as fact. I don't.  Most people to the left of my positions believe ABC/CBS/CNN/NBC are controlled by their rich owners Disney/Viacom/TW/GE and are biased in favor of the right.

It's hard to admit one's wrong on an issue, or one's favorite politician is wrong, or even to admit that one disagrees with a significant proportion of the population.  It's a lot easier to believe the media is reporting it inaccurately.

And sometimes you'd be right.  As a business, the media must appeal to an audience.  They must broadcast what they think their audience wants to hear/see.  Research shows Americans want to believe marijuana is dangerous, so you see lots of stories about pot seizures and few about those who argue it's safe for adults.  Among plenty of other examples.

> CNN finally admits that it

This was certainly a serious lapse in judgement.  When you've been praised to high heaven for your reporting from Baghdad in Gulf War I, you tend to be very careful to ensure your ability to repeat your work in case of Gulf War II.  In this case it led to a mistake.  A big one.

> NPR, now there's a true place to find non one-sided politics, lol.  All things > considered, except conservative.

Again, I don't buy this.  I hear plenty of representatives of the right on NPR.  Just because they're the only place that gives any voice to the left doesn't make them one-sided.

As long as commercial stations only present one side, someone has to present the other.  Actually, I believe we should indeed eliminate the subsidy to NPR from the general fund.

It should, instead, be financed by a tax on commercial broadcasters.

If you have me stereotyped as a journalist or related position (editor/photographer/producer) you'd be wrong.  I'm in engineering.

I'm amused that the myth of a liberal media bias still has legs.  In the age where right wing parrots have a near total lock on AM bandwidth (thanks to Premier/Clear Channel - did anyone notice that CC gives tons of payola to Republicans?)  - conservatives still whine that their point of view can't be heard over the noise of a supposed liberal media.  The signal to noise ratio is decidedly conservative in this country. Since the original poster was talking about his lack of unbiased options on the radio, I think you performed some really fancy footwork by refocusing the thread to your perceived bias on television.  This isn't a television newsgroup...but I'll take a bite out of the flame bait.

<gets out asbestos napkins>

Television news coverage is demonstrably conservative in presentation.  The Faux News Channel is the giant elephant in the room that you failed to mention when you listed supposed liberal news organizations.  The Conservative Soundbite Nooz Network is currently kicking CNN's ass in the numbers game and the Murdoch open bias is the rule of law in O'Reilly/Hannity/Snow land. And no, Alan Colmes doesn't even begin to approach "fair and balanced".

NBC has leaned conservative ever since the 2000 election - thanks to the right-handed control of one Mr. Jack Welch.  Tim Russert certainly loves to tear into liberals every Sunday morning on Meet The Press - and he throws softballs to every conservative that graces his set.  Chris Matthew's Hardball on MSNBC only seems to apply when liberals show.

Over at CNN, most of the real journalist have jumped ship (or been pushed) to make room for those who will to try to "out-bias" Fox.  Lou Dobbs and Wolf Blitzer as liberal hacks?  Only to the most delusional.  The last ray of hope at CNN is their Crossfire program - where Paul Begala and Tucker Carlson duke it out daily.  Both hosts get equal time, and the shouting matches are kept to a minimum. Larry King just needs to retire.

CNN and Fox are both guilty of omitting the horrifying images coming out of Iraq post-conflict.  The devastation and humanitarian catastrophe are simply not being reported; by default placing a pro-war/conservative spin on the news.  Only CBS News has had the guts to report on the cholera outbreaks in Iraq due to inadequate clean water and medical services for the "liberated".  War is ugly - but the American people only see the victory - thanks to the dominant conservative spin of our news organizations. When the news networks only report about a victorious president, and fail to report on the devastation caused by his decisions, the myth of a liberal media begins to look frighteningly thin.

Sorry Steve (Mr. Excellent Moderator) for providing so much flame fodder. That's certainly not what I had originally intended.  In the interest of "balance", whatever that means these days,  the lone liberal in the group (am I?) felt the need to point out the bullshit when he smelled it. Now, I've probably stepped in it too. <grin>

Now - let's get back to talking about radio.

Best,

Jeremy Powell

I suppose a lot depends on where you were.

I'm only aware of one Nashville-area station that's been off the air during the severe weather. (so far... as my NOAA radio just went off again for a tornado watch...) Actually it lost its STL.

Two stations in Jackson reportedly lost their tower. Pretty good excuse for being off the air awhile! (I've seen that tower, it's pretty stout. On the other hand, it's also only about a mile from downtown, where you probably saw all that devastation on TV.)

One upside for consolidation... if severe weather wipes "NewsTalk 1710" off the air, they could far more quickly get their information programming back on the air on co-owned "Kiss 97.6" than on someone else's CHR outlet. Backup transmitter/tower/antenna sites can be shared among a group cluster.

Alerts, no. Messages, yes.

Once they become aware of some danger they'll tune in. If they're not listening, an alert won't do much good.

Actually, at any point in time most of the public isn't listening to anything. In a small town, the best alert system is warning sirens and police cars equipped with PA systems.

In a city like New York I can't imagine a way we could alert the entire population other than the police and fire departments going from building to building. By the time they've completed that task it's probably too late.

This is all backwards.  The assumption is that the authorities know something and it has to be relayed to eager and fit consuming public.

The truth is the other way.  I _often_ have things to relay to the authorities, they _never_ have anything to relay to me.  The speakers ought to be inside administrative offices, and there ought to be a microphone outside.  That's the correct public service model.

Orwell went into this current complete inversion and how it gets started.

We don't want to hear from the authorities.  Thanks anyway, stuff it.

They do have that formula of discontinuing the good products, don't they?

I know around here all the local programming is gone and all that remains TWC has an irritating "alarm clock" beep tone when they pass EAS stuff.

It's about 30dB over the program level and could wake a dead man.

I'm not a fascist but I find fascist viewpoints quite offensive. If you're not a fascist, I guess you would find concentration camps to be merely "amusing".

| NPR, now there's a true place to find non one-sided politics, lol.  All things

Oh, great, another sock puppet in the "if it isn't broadcasting what I want to hear, it's one-sided liberal bias" chorus.

The networks have their problems but, if anything, they tend to be biased toward whomever is in power at the moment.

There is no such thing as a liberal news channel or network, but conservatives have plenty of electronic outlets these days: Faux "News", Christian Broadcasting Network, numerous radio talk shows, and so forth. Liberal voices have been drowned out and moderate voices are in danger of same. It's beginning to resemble the latter days of the Weimar Republic.

That's what I'm trying to determine - has the consolidation of radio (both AM & FM) created a situation where it is no longer worth bothering with in an emergency. Does not every "preparedness" agency ask you have a battery-powered radio and batteries handy in emergencies such as a tornado? If the only thing coming in on that radio is canned programming, why bother? Put a battery powered VHF scanner in there instead.

Also, I see the LPFM and microbroadcasting stations as possibly being more of an asset in a local emergency. We're considering doing just that here, using small part 15 transmitters to cover the two neighboring apartment complexes.

FM can be "canned" just as easily as AM though.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1342 - May 2, 2003

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1342 with a release date of Friday, May 2 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. An all ham crew takes over the International Space Station, another new record on 136 Kilohertz and the FCC asks the Amateur Auxiliary to help clean up the 10 meter band. Find out more on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1342 coming your way right now.

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: TWO-MAN EXPEDITION 7 HAM RADIO CREW ARRIVES AT ISS

A two ham Expedition 7 crew arrived at the International Space Station on April 28th to replace the crew currently on board. Amateur Radio Newsline's Roy Neal, K6DUE, has the rest of the story:

There are five men in the crew aboard the International Space Station. Those numbers ARE different. Now that U S Space Shuttles are temporarily out of commission, the Russian Soyuz has been pressed into service as a ferry. Much of its space is filled with food and supplies and the crew size has been cut from 3 down to 2 for the time being.

Two men...cosmonaut Yuri Malenchenko, RK3DUP and astronaut Ed Lu, KC5WKJ, have arrived....the first teamever to get to the I S S aboard a Russian spacecraft. They will replace 3 men...Commander Ken Bowersox, KD5JBP, Don Pettit, KD5MDT, and Nikolai Budarin, RV3FB. That team is scheduled to fly back to earth on the third of May, using a Soyuz that has been docked in orbit since the Columbia shuttle disintegrated killing all seven people on board.

A NASA investigation apppears to be centering on a piece of foam insulation as the cause of disaster...foam that broke loose during liftoff, hitting the Shuttle's left wing.

A final report on the accident may be several more months in coming. Until then Russia's Soyuz is the only crew transport to and from the i s s and the International Space Program has slowed to a mere trickle of its former self. Space officials of the 9 countries directly concerned with building and flying the shuttle are optimistic, saying the delay gives them time better to prepare for the very complex missions of the next ten years.

Roy Neal, K6DUE

The two man Expedition 7 crew will spend the next six months on-orbit conducting scientific experiments. Because of the reduced workload they may also have more time for additional ham radio operations and especially school contacts from space. (ARNewsline™ from published reports)

ENFORCEMENT: AMATEUR AUXILIARY ASKED TO ASSIST FCC IN 10 METER CLEAN-UP

Back on Mother Earth, the FCC has asked the assistance of the ARRL' s Amateur Auxiliary as part of a clean-up of illegal users of the 10 meter band. In a memorandum issued on April 28th, FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, asks the Auxiliary's help for the next 6 months in identifying any unlicensed operation using the 10 meter Amateur spectrum.

>From May through October Auxiliary members will be tasked with monitoring the band to determine whether interlopers are domestic business entities. This includes trucking companies, truckers or other individuals who are not licensed to be in the band or simply not licensed at all.

The FCC is not requesting that Auxiliary members provide direction finding. Hollingsworth does ask that where possible that Auxiliary members provide the names and cities of the operators, and license plate numbers and state if the interfering signal is coming from a vehicle.

The project has been assigned case number 2003-583 and Hollingsworth does ask Auxiliary members to use their best judgment as to whether to include tape recordings of what they monitor.  Authority to use the ham radio volunteers in this investigation comes under the terms of long standing agreement between the FCC's Field Operations Bureau and the American Radio Relay League.  (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT:  11 METER OPERATION BRINGS FCC WRATH TO IDAHO HAMS

Meantime, the FCC has let a trio of Idaho amateurs know that unlicensed operation outside Amateur Radio frequencies could lead to revocation of their ham tickets.  Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has more:

The ARRL Letter reports that FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, recently wrote three Boise amateurs, citing allegations that they had transmitted without a license on several frequencies near the 11 meter Blass D CB band.

Letters went out March 17 to Dave Every, KD7QAS; John F. Hail, KD7QAW; and Tom M. Sjoberg, KD7RCS.  Every holds a General ticket, while Hail and Sjoberg are Technician licensees.

According to Hollingsworth, the Commission has information indicating that the three hams transmitted without a license on 26.350, 27.420 and 27.700 MHz using SSB and SSTV.  These three frequencies involved are above and below the 11 meter Citizens Radio Band.

Hollingsworth letter pointed out that in addition to the possibility of license revocation proceedings being undertaken, fines for unlicensed operation could also be imposed.  These normally range from $7500 to $10,000.

For the Amateur Radio Newslione, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting.

Hollingsworth says he understands that the unlicensed operations have ceased.  (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT:  KANSAS STATION OWNER FINED

The FCC has fined Maria L. Salazar, licensee of Station KTCM - FM in Kingman, Kansas, and owner of an antenna structure near Spivey, Kansas, thirty-nine thousand dollars.  This, for what the Commission says are willful and repeated violations of the Communications Act and of the Commission's Rules.  Amateur Radio Newsline's Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has the details:

Specifically, the regulatory agency says that Maria L. Salazar operated a radio station from an unauthorized location and that she failed to maintain prescribed obstruction lighting on an  antenna structure.  But thats not all.  Te FCC says that she also failed to install and maintain Emergency Alert System equipment at the station, failed to maintain a main studio at an authorized location and failed to maintain a public inspection file.

By way of background, on July 18, 2002, the Commission issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture -- better known as a fine -- in the amount of $39,000 to Salazar.  Although she received a copy of the N-A-L, she never filed a response.  So the FCC has now affirmed the fine and ordered Salizar to -- pay up.

The FCC has instructed its Enforcement Bureau to do a follow-up investigation to determine whether Salazar has come into compliance.  If not, further enforcement action will be taken.  That could include the possibility of a license revocation proceeding.   (FCC)

FCC BEGINS INQUIRY REGARDING BROADBAND OVER POWER LINES

The FCC has also launched an inquiry into the use of existing power lines to send and receive broadband data by carrier current as some old timers might call it.

According to Bob  Gonsett's CGC Communicator, two different Broadband over Power Line or B-P-L techniques are being considered.  "Access B-P-L" uses 1,000 to 40,000 volt power lines to bring Internet and other broadband data to homes and offices.  "In-House B-P-L" uses existing electric utility wiring to network computers and printers - as well as smart appliances - within a building.

CGC notes  that today's chip sets for this application are capable of generating RF out to at least 80 MHz using advanced modulation techniques and high data rates. The question of radio frequency interference to authorized spectrum users including Amateur Radio will be an important consideration as these systems are looked at by the FCC.

RADIO RULES: FCC REFUSES TO EXPAND THE NCE FM BAND

The FCC has declined to expand the Non-Commercial Educational FM or NCE broadcast. This, band beyond its current limits of 88.1 to 91.9 MHz.

Specifically, the FCC says that television Channel 6 which runs from from 82 to 88 MHz will not be used for NCE radio. Nor will the upper end of the current NCE band be expanded to 93.9 Mhz.

That said, the agency has indicated the expansion issue could be revisited in another FCC proceeding. (CGC Communicator)

HAM RADIO IN CYBERSPACE: MIZUHO WEBSITE BACK UP

KU4QD says over the VHF Reflector that the unofficial English language Mizuho website is back up. This site is dedicated to Mizuho built ham radio gear and contains a wealth of reference material that's hard to find anywhere else.

For those of you who don't know about Mizuho, it is a family run business started by a former Trio engineer over 30 years ago. The company is best known for its HF and VHF SSB and CW monoband handhelds. These were manufactured from 1981 until 2002. The company also made some VHF base and portable SSB/CW rigs.

KU4QD says that some of the manuals and schematics haven't been uploaded yet, but everything else is there, including more new pictures and specs for various Mizuho gear. And , oh yes. You will find the website at www.mizuhoradio.com (VHF Reflector)

HAPPENING AT HAMVENTION 2003r - THE ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

And Amateur Radio Newsline is again teaming up with the Hamvention to bring you another in its ongoing series of Ham Radio Town Meetings.  Ken Lock, N8PJN, has the details:

--

This years topic is how to make Amateur Radio more friendly for kids so that they will stay in the hobby.  Our  keynote speaker is Mr. Audio himself -- Bob Heil, K9EID.  Bob has been a ham since he was a youngster and has some definite ideas on this subject.

Other presenters include New York Educator Carole Perry, WB2MGP, Philadelphia KYW Radio personality Mark Abrams, NT3V and his son - 2002 Young Ham of the Year award recipient Josh Abramowicz,  KB3GWY.  Josh will cover scouting and its relationship to ham radio youth.

>From Florida Richard Paczkowski, Jr., KF4BIA, will be joining us.  Richard was our 1998 Young Ham of the Year award winner.  He will talk about ways the Internet can be used to interest kids in the hobby.

Others on the speakers roster are Gary Pearce, KN4AQ, of the ARRL's  Public Relations Committee and Keith Glispie, WA6TFD, of Suite Sixteen Post in Burbank California.  Glispie is a true Amateur  Radio success story that took him from a teenage ham to the co-owner of one of televisions most sought after editing facilities.

Also joining us will be John Creel, WB3GXW, who is the outgoing Chairman of the NCVEC and 2003 Radio Amateur of the Year Larry "Tree" Tyree, N6TR, talking about the ham radio children's holiday he created called Kids Day.

And as always there will be door prizes.  This year the goodies  include an 2 meter HT courtesy of Alinco and a mini-bom-box AM, FM, Cassette radio from Jensen.

So, please join us at Hamvention 2003 for this special session dedicated to making ham radio a friendlier world for the younger set.  Rember, kids are the future of the hobby.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Ken Locke, N8PJN.

HAM RADIO MOVIES:  FIELD DAY `71 - REDUX

Two weeks ago we told you that the famed Palisades Amateur Radio Club movie "Field Day 1971" had surfaced after almost two decades in hiding.  Now, Southern California hams can get to see it again on Wednesday evening, May 14th.  This, in a special screening hosted by the Santa Clarita Amateur Radio Club and Amateur Radio Newsline.

"Field Day 1971" was produced by George Hively, W6GRH, -- then WA6YEA -- over thirty years ago.  His half-hour movie is a tongue-in-cheek look at the way one of the regions most famous radio clubs of the 20th century held forth annually to conquer the vagaries of the Ionesphere while having a jolly old time.  Or, was it just having a jolly old time with some radios thrown in as an excuse for a hilltop party?  Only this movie knows for sure!

The venue chosen for the screening is the City Council Chambers in the City of Santa Clarita California at 7 p.m. Pacific Daylight time.  Talk in will be on the 146.79 W6JW repeater.  The repeater uses an access tone is 123.0 Hz.

There is only room for about 190 people, so seating will be first-come, first served, with one expeption.  If you are a former Palisades Amateur Radio Club member and want to reserve a seat please e-mail wa6itf@arnewsline.org. ## RADIO RECORDS:  FIRST GM TO YU ON 136 KHX

Another new record has been set on 136 Kilohertz.  This,  as a ham in Scotland contacts his counterpart in Yugoslavia.  Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, has more:

Simon Lewis, GM4PLM, completed the first Scotland to Yugoslavia LF contact on the 20th of April.  At 2228 UTC on Sunday, Simon had a two-way contact with Teo, YU7AR, on 137.7kHz.

Simon was using equipment left behind by David Bowman, G0MRF, when the UK 73kHz record was broken, as reported on GB2RS two weeks ago.

GM4PLM is currently the only known GM active on the 136kHz band and at present is using a 125-metre long wire antenna. He plans to improve the antenna system over the summer in preparation for trans-Atlantic tests next winter.

THAT FINAL ITEM: TALKING TO A NOT SO SILENT S.K.

And finally this week, have you ever talked with a Silent Key? Believe it or not we have. His name is Ray Ortgiesen, WF1B, and last week he was named as an honored Silent Key by the planners of this years Dayton Hamvention. But as you will hrear, Ray is very much alive, well and and delighting the honor:

Ortgiesen: "I'm enjoying it so far. Its been quite a gas to get phone calls and e-mail's from so many people concerned about my health."

Why is the not so Silent Key recieving all these health and welfare inquiries? Well, heres the story in a nut-shell.

Back in the 1980's, in the Neanderthal days of home computing, Ray wrote RTTY. This program soon became the leading contest software for computerized radio teletype. And last week the Dayton Hamvention decided to honor him by nameing him as one of a group of Silent Key Award recipients. But Ray as we already know, Ray is still very much among the living and his first chore was letting everyone know he was still here.

Ortgeisen: "Its been fun. I did send out some e-mails as soon as I found out that it was publicized. I sent out e-mails on the of the major reflectors grearting them from the other side and leetting them know that I was fine, and obviously there was a mistake made."

--

Mistake or not, Ray is now an official walking, talking and breathing Silent Key. So we asked him if he had any special wish for the future of the hobby:

--

Ortgeisen: "I hope with the coming of digital and especially computerization that we can keep people interested in radio."

--

And as to the award itself? WF1B, had these -- er -- parting words:

--

Ortgeisen: "Its nice to know that folks considered me for this award, and I am happier to know it being alive, than not ever having known this fact had I indeed been a Silent Key."

How the mistake nameing Ortgiesen as a Silent Key Award winner is not clear. But no matter. Ray says that he' kind of enjoying the honor of being this years Dayton Hamvention -- not so silent -- "Silent Key." (ARNewsline™)

I certainly did not say that.  The best place for radio weather warnings though would be NOAA weather radio, or if that is not available, a local news radio station.  If neither of those are available any station should be broadcasting emergency messages, if there is indeed an emergency. However tornadoes are extremely difficult to predict where they will occur. When they do occur, they are very local and can happen very, very quickly.  To get a real time warning of where a tornado is, you need real time information from a person observing the funnel, or real time information from somebody actively watching Doppler weather radar.

True, the Fox News Channel is by far the #1 cable news network, in part because it is noticeably more conservative than its rivals. But its audience is only about one-third the size of the third-ranked evening news on a broadcast network.

>Now - let's get back to talking about radio.

In my market, five talk stations have a smaller combined audience than one music station that employs me. In fact, even the #2 music station in the market beats all talk radio put together. Lumped all together, talk radio here is, on average, heard by less than 8% of listeners,. This is a right wing lock?

That is correct.  This wasn't always the case, but sadly, often today it is.

This is a worthy discussion.  Nowhere above did I allege "liberal media bias", real or myth.  However segments of the media certainly ARE biased.  As I pointed out, conservative talk radio makes not attempt to hide its bias.  Many mainstream "pure" news outlets certainly do.

> In the age where right wing parrots have a near total lock on AM bandwidth

CC gives money to Democrats too.  So what?  The right to contribute to campaigns and have your voice heard is protected by the First Amendment in the US. It seems that Clear Channel is the new employer du jour to detest.

> - conservatives still whine that their point of view can't be

I certainly wasn't whining about it.  The difference today is that conservative voices ARE being heard, albeit not on the CBS Evening News with Dan Rather. Hence the surprise and silly personal attacks by politicians such as Tom Daschle (D-SD) on conservative voices in radio.

Introducing the television aspect was important in a discussion of radio, because radio is finally providing an opportunity for voices to be heard that do not tow the traditional liberal line.

Of course I didn't list FOX News as a liberal news organization--because it isn't one.  Sure FOX might seem conservative when compared to other mainstream news outlets today, in much the same way that live steam might seem cold compared to hot lava.  What news stories has FOX News broadcasted that you consider to be Faux?  Remember, FOX does hard news during the day and during its 7pm hour (eastern), then commentary at night instead of hard news.  I don't recall FOX  keeping the lid on stories such as Iraq thugs torturing their own reporters over a twelve year period.

In fact the only major non-taxpayer funded syndicated liberal radio host is syndicated by FOX News.

Murdoch's bias....this must be the reason why he published ultra liberal and conservative hater Michael Moore's book, no?  O'Reilly, both Radio and TV, is an independent and has views and opinions all over the place.  Just this week he has been having a tuffle with a conservative radio host.  Hannity of course is conservative and is presented as such, on his radio program and on TV (with the catchy word "conservative" printed right on the screen next to him at the beginning of each show.  Interesting that conservatives call O'Reilly liberal and liberals call O'Reilly conservative.

> And no, Alan Colmes doesn't even begin to

No of course not. He is liberal and is presented as such. The word 'liberal' even appears on the screen next to him at the beginning of his TV show. Before that, he was a well known liberal host for many years on WEVD 1050, New York. However, FOX News invites liberal guests in the same numbers as conservative guests on their programs.

> NBC has leaned conservative ever since the 2000 election - thanks to the

Now wait a second. Jack Welch became GE's chairman and CEO in 1981, not in 2000. GE purchased NBC in 1986. By the way, have you noticed Brokaw giving news reports on the "new" NBC Radio news?

Tim Russert tears into liberals,conservatives,foreigners,whoever is part of a big story every Sunday morning.

Chris Matthews is a liberal guy who tries to present himself as nonliberal. Heck, he was Tip O'Neil's personal speechwriter.

Begala and Tucker are an example of a balance, but CNN even put a Democrat Party Strategist James Carville as a host of the show.
Now CNN is showing signs of change. Woodruff is an example of a CNN anchor who certainly tilts to the left still.

Interesting since I first heard about that cholera outbreak via ABC.

There was plenty of coverage of devastation. What was remarkably missing in most mainstream news outlets, however, was the devastation and human travesties caused by Hussein. The decade of torture, electrodes, rape rooms, ears cut off by the thousands, etc. was avoided by mainstream news stations. Finally CNN's Jordan even actually admits this in his NY Times op-ed.

Fare enough, but unlike many mainstream media outlets, conservative radio shows make no attempt to hide their inherent bias.

Well I don't like country music, but I don't find it offensive that there are radio stations broadcasting country music all day and night.

You are assuming that if somebody is "rich" that they are "right."  Was Ted Turner
"right" when he started CNN?  But more importantly you are assuming that if somebody "rich" owns something in the media, that this media will also be conservative.
Certainly the New York Times has rich owners but it is a  very liberal mainstream newspaper.  Nothing wrong with that, except when they editoralize on page 1.

Now these big, allegedly "right" corporations have tried left wing radio hosts, such as  former NY governor Mario Cuomo, Harvard law professor Alan Dershowitz, former CT governor Lowell Weicker, former California Gov. Jerry Brown, former Senator. Gary Hart, and former Virginia governor Doug Wilder.  But all couldn't attract an audience to sustain them.

Remember when Rush Limbaugh was accused  as the reason for the Oklahoma City bombing?
Or when NPR reported that a conservative Christian group was responsible for sending Anthrax laced letters to two Democrat senators?   Yes, it is VERY easy to believe that
the media is inaccurate.

Yet often, reporters such as Dan Rather attempt to put their own spin on the news.
He
even chastized Bernie Goldberg for writing a column in "conservative" Wall Street Journal in a column Rather himself wrote in "middle of the road" NY Times.  :)
Rather once claimed that Diane Sawyer had "no credibility" due to her "conservative"
views.

Well, let's see. NPR had a president, Mankiewwicz, who was a George McGovern campaigner.  Then the next NPR president, a Carter administration member named Bennet left NPR to join the Clinton administration.  Then the next president, Lewis, was chief fund raiser for Mayor Marion Barry of Washington DC.  See any patterns developing here? These aren't presidents of parent companies.

NPR broadcasters couldn't contain their bewilderment about the "surprise best seller" book Unlimited Access.  Bob Edwards is fond of talking about "Christian Conservatives" controlling voters.  A voice on NPR talked about how the "religious right" was a very vocal minority doing most of the unconstitutional stuff out there. Of course, according to NPR, the "religious right" is a force singlehandedly and forcefully controlled by one person named Pat Robertson.

> As long as commercial stations only present one side, someone has to Commercial radio stations have TRIED to make liberal hosts successful.  I mentioned some names above.  But since they failed in the marketplace, the taxpayers should subsidize their viewpoint and voice?  I don't think so.  Should the government fund a conservative broadcast television network to counterbalance ABC,CBS, and NBC?

Why not just let it be financed by the market? If people want it, that's fine. They can support it. And let NPR compete for its licenses as other broadcasters must do.

Well actually I'd be even more shocked if a producer type was hanging around here. ;)

No need for 'multiple flea-power transmitters'.

I reckon that you could put up a simple DIY 'on-channel repeater' which covers the whole FM band. This would consist of an external FM antenna which receives all the FM signals which are available outside, coax feeder into the building, and amplification using a normal DIY store wideband RF amplifier. The output of the amplifier goes to a second FM antenna which radiates in the office area. The only precaution is to ensure that the amplifier gain is less than the loss between the transmit antenna and the receive antenna, otherwise you will get feedback, ie you will have built an oscillator. A minimum margin of at least 10dB would be required. Also, the amplifier should really only cover the FM band (could be wideband with bandpass filter), or you may find the system oscillating at some unknown frequency.

You could even try this without the amplifier (ie a totally passive repeater). There will still be worthwhile re-radiation of the FM signals inside the building, but certainly be no risk of oscillation!

Cheers,
Ian.

Truth be told the conservative shows have the exact same bias as the mainstream outlets.  Both have done research and learned what kinds of programming sells airtime.  You give your audience what you think they want to see/hear.

I'm not assuming anything.

My point is that while you (and many others) believe the major media are left-biased, there are also many people who believe they're right-biased.

Chances are, when both sides hate you you're doing something correct<grin>!

IMHO running one or two left-of-center programs on a mostly right-of-center station is never going to work.

As I mentioned at the beginning of this thread, I'm simply not in the habit of listening to talk stations.  Not even for completely unbiasable programming like severe weather reports.  I suspect my habits are shared by many others.

If the station only promotes their left-of-center programs on their own air, those of us who might enjoy the program will probably never learn it exists.

> Remember when Rush Limbaugh was accused  as the reason for the Oklahoma City bombing?

No...  Where did anyone in the mainstream accuse Limbaugh of any direct involvement in McVeigh's actions?

As far as creating a climate of hatred of government that may (or may not) have led to this crime..  I think you have to go a fair way to the right of Limbaugh to find that, but some of the crap being spewed on radio certainly qualifies.

> Or when NPR reported that a conservative Christian group was responsible for sending > Anthrax laced letters to two Democrat senators?   Yes, it is VERY easy to believe that > the media is inaccurate.

Occasionally, yes.  We all make honest mistakes.  Given past actions it's not unreasonable to believe a conservative Christian group was responsible.  Since we don't yet know who did this, such a report could yet turn out to be correct.

If NPR had evidence it would be by no means unreasonable to run the story.  (and if they didn't have it, they made a mistake.)

Surely you don't believe conservative shows have never made an honest factual error?

> Well, let's see. NPR had a president, Mankiewwicz, who was a George McGovern

Ownership & control of commercial networks by rich people doesn't necessarily make them right-biased, but control of NPR by Democrats makes it left-biased?

(Carter was hardly a liberal.  Clinton was outright conservative, unless you're talking about his personal (im)morals which really offended a lot of us on the left too.)

> And let NPR compete for its licenses as other broadcasters must do.

It does.  At least as other non-commercial broadcasters must do.

I suppose you could eliminate the distinction between commercial and non-commercial stations altogether.  And then watch hundreds of religious stations - and thousands of translators - vanish.  Either taken over by commercial operations, or outbid by for-profit operations.

U.S. Radio Stations Tallied
http://www.rwonline.com/dailynews/one.php?id=3084

Just how many radio stations are there in the United States?

The FCC is out with the latest answer to that frequent question...

As of March, there were just over 4,800 AMs, 6,000 commercial FMs and 2,400 noncom FMs, for a total of 13,200. There were about 3,800 FM translators and boosters.

Radio New Zealand gets dosh for FM http://www.nbr.co.nz/print/print.asp?id=5835&cid=1&cname=Media

Radio New Zealand is to receive new funding worth $14.58 million over four years to set up a nationwide FM service and meet the rising costs of its core services, Broadcasting Minister Steve Maharey announced on Tuesday.

National Radio will receive an additional $3.396 million over four years to progressively establish FM services across the country and $2.646 million annually to maintain its programming.

Around 93 per cent of the population will be able to receive the FM service by 2006, the same penetration currently achieved by Concert FM. The current AM service will be retained providing service to those listeners unable to tune in to the FM band.

At present National Radio is only heard on FM in central Auckland, Taupo and Greymouth. It is aimed to have the four main centres on FM by the end of next year.

Mr Maharey said the package, part of Budget 2003, would enable the nation's public radio network to make a larger contribution to the development and maintenance of national and cultural identity.

The FM service will be progressively rolled out over the next three years.

The government has said it is examining the possibility of implementing a digital FM network, but this proposed funding round does not appear to contain any movement in that direction.

An extra $150,000 a year over four years will go to Radio New Zealand International, which broadcasts in shortwave to the Pacific, to provide increased original programming and current affairs aimed at Island listeners. The hours it produces will rise from four hours a day to 10.

US] DJs Suspended for Playing Dixie Chicks

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - Country station KKCS has suspended two disc jockeys for playing the Dixie Chicks, violating a ban imposed after the group criticized President Bush.

Lead singer Natalie Maines told a British newspaper she was "ashamed that the president of the United States is from Texas."

"We pulled their music two months ago, and it's been a difficult decision because how can you ignore the hottest group in country music," station manager Jerry Grant said.

He said there has been discussion about whether to reinstate the music, but the DJs, Dave Moore and Jeff Singer, became impatient.

"They made it very clear that they support wholeheartedly the president of the United States. They support wholeheartedly the troops, the military. But they also support the right of free speech," Grant said.

The station has received a couple of hundred calls and 75 percent favored playing the music.

Grand said Moore and Singer will be out for a couple of days.

"I gave them an alternative: stop it now and they'll be on suspension, or they can continue playing them and when they come out of the studio they won't have a job."

The station plans to play the group's music again eventually. "Most stations are starting to play them again anyhow a song here, a song there. I just have a problem with the way this was done. We would have put them in anyhow. But we'd like to do it on our terms," he said.

Hello
I wonder if anyone has had luck finding home made aircheck tapes (taped off radio) at garage sales or flea markets among the scads of reel to reels?

And if you think you MAY have even a few minutes of a Georgia radio station that someone taped a few years ago please submit it to an aircheck trader for this is a valuable part of history.

Thanks
Ken

I'm in New Zealand. I don't notice any difference in FM and AM stations, except that FM is louder.  Commercials are louder on all stations, and even worse on TV.

Born in 1929, I still marvel at technology that can bounce live events around the world on satellites, and even from the moon. Shame such a lot of TV is such rubbish! But then, half the population is of less than average intelligence (believe it or not) and their taxes pay for TV too.

Hello
Are there any radio stations, particularly musical, via satellite where there is actually a live announcer accompanying the music ( like Top 40 stations before Clear Channel et al?)
I think the need is VERY great and will help sell a few XM/Sirius units.
Thanks
Ken

One was recently announced with great fanfare.  Whether or not there is enough demand for it to obtain advertisers and affiliates will be

In my county, the weakest NWS broadcast signal is provided from the NWS office that covers my zone. The strongest NOAA weather radio signal is from two transmitters that do not officialy cover our county. Plain english. Orange County, NY is covered by New York City NWS office located in Upton, NY (Brookhaven Labs, Long Island). The signal from an Albany, NY transmitter on Illinois Mtn covers all of the county but Albany is not assigned Orange County. There is also a NWS transmitter getting into western Orange County from a NJ location run by Mount Holly. A good strong solid signal in Middletown, NY required to reliably trigger my ratshack SAME code radio requires a roof mounted external antenna.There is a gentlemans agreement between the NWS forcast offices to send Orange County warnings over the other two tranmitters but for unknown reasons it doesn't always happen all the time.

>or if that is not available, a local news radio..

Local what ?... WTBQ in Warwick, a daytimer with limited reach. WALL in Middletown? remote fed from Poughkeepsie, lights out Spanish only, A Newburgh (WGNY ?)  AM station on a temporary tower with a signal that barely gets past the property line ? Maybe CATV between the bamboo steamer and rhinestone cufflink ads ?

> station.  If neither of those are available any station should be broadcasting > emergency messages, if there is indeed an emergency.

Luckily we don't get many tornadoes in my neck of the woods.  But it is frustrating to impress upon the uniformed like school officials who think that tuning their Weather radios to the strongest signal will get them the local weather, or tuning into a local radio station will get them the latest local news, or reading about it in a regional newspaper will fill in the spaces.

Commercial broadcasting is a murky tarpit of generic muck, serving no one but the advertisers and the station owners.

God bless the few local independents left on the planet.

Good news, and about the most sensible thing in the govt's recent funding announcements.

Trimmed rec.music.classical and rec.music.opera, as I don't think those guys would be even slightly interested.

Some of the things they play from the above list include, Gunsmoke, Suspense, Great Gildersleeve, Our miss brooks, and at least one of "X-Minus One" or "Dimension-X", I get the two confused.  There may be others from your list, but the above are ones I can remember hearing for sure.

What makes you say "didn't think so...", when you clearly don't know what you are taking about?

Interesting.. How can half the population be less than average? If half of them are below average, what makes up average? If the average is the mean score from the population, I would not have thought it possible more than half the people to be below it? Sounds like a sampling error?  Hmmm, I am going to go and play with my Statisics program now and run a couple of tests... I am sure there is someone who can correct me if I am wrong (which I may well be) ... in the meantime, SPSS here I come.

oh what the hell.....here goes...(some editing)

<<Of course I didn't list FOX News as a liberal news organization--because it isn't one.  Sure FOX might seem conservative when compared to other mainstreamnews outlets today, in much the same way that live steam might seem cold compared to hot lava.  What news stories has FOX News broadcasted that you consider to be Faux?  Remember, FOX does hard news during the day and during its7pm hour (eastern), then commentary at night instead of hard news.  I don'trecall FOX  keeping the lid on stories such as Iraq thugs torturing their own reporters over a twelve year period.>

fox needed a gimmick to break into the cable news market....they chose to get the conservative segment of the audience.
its narrow-casting plain and simple.   they don;t have to be the best...they just have to lock up the disenfranchised right segement.   someone made the point that they maybe #1 on cable but they still don;t get more than 1/3 of any network news nightly broadcast.

they don;t report faux stories but they are not even handed either.   here are 2-recent examples:   the mix-up with rivera and arnett.   arnett's interview on iraqi t-v during the war was a big mistake.  he was fired and i don;t have a problem with that.  but rivera broke the most important rule for being an embedded journalist....giving away location.   was he fired?  no.  arnet was vilified.....but why not rivera?   because its not about what is right or wrong its who is right or wrong.   if rivera had been on another network and done that....do you think fox would have used him in their news promos as they did with arnett?  that's not fair and balanced.

how about when a fox reporter on the scene of demonstrations does her job and tells what happened....but she then goes on to say that the crowd is apparently oblivious to the irony of protesting to the very forces that gave them their freedom.   i was taught that reporters should report....leave the commentary to others.   its not like the residents of baghdad asked the soldiers to free them and if they have complaints who's to say they can;t use their ability to express themselves.  the city has a population of millions and a few thousand protested...what's the big deal.  that's not fair and balanced reporting,  its pandering to the conservative audience to give them what they want to hear.

finally as to cnn worker who was tortured and they didn't talk about for years.....who on earth thought hussien was a nice guy? the reporter involved said he thought the guy would be KILLED if he said more.   is the claim that we didn;t know how bad saddam was because they didn;t say some things in this instance?
you can hardly claim that cnn was keeping saddam's killing a secret to protect one man.   (more below)

<<Murdoch's bias....this must be the reason why he published ultra liberal and conservative hater Michael Moore's book, no?  O'Reilly, both Radio and TV, is an independent and has views and opinions all over the place.  Just this week he has been having a tuffle with a conservative radio host.  Hannity of course is conservative and is presented as such, on his radio program and on TV (with the catchy word "conservative" printed right on the screen next to him at the beginning of each show.  Interesting that conservatives call O'Reilly liberal and liberals call O'Reilly conservative.>> its about the money.   clear channel isn;t big because they truly care about the quality of their broadcasts.  fox has a niche but i dont know if its ideological or not but....moores book would make money (as frankens and other similar books)  the decision was easy.

> CNN and Fox are both guilty of omitting the horrifying images coming out of > Iraq post-conflict.  The devastation and humanitarian catastrophe are > simply not being reported; by default placing a pro-war/conservative spin on > the news.

<<Huh?

here's what i think the poster was referring to.   you don;t see those kinds of stories and footage because t-v execs. know viewers here don;t want to see that.  it'll cause them to question and more importantly to them perhaps the ratings will drop....we might have to think more deeply about what has happened and the future....so lets switch to laci peterson.   i heard an ap radio newscast on the day gerogos was chosen to represent peterson....it was the lead story in the newscast.  that is sad.

> War is ugly - but the American people only see the victory - > thanks to the dominant conservative spin of our news organizations. When the > news networks only report about a victorious president, and fail to report > on the devastation caused by his decisions, the myth of a liberal media > begins to look frighteningly thin.

There was plenty of coverage of devastation.  What was remarkably missing  in most mainstream news outlets, however, was the devastation and human travesties caused by Hussein. The decade of torture, electrodes, rape rooms, ears cut off by the thousands, etc. was avoided by mainstream news stations.  Finally CNN's Jordan even actually admits this in his NY Times op-ed.>> again....the fact that hussien was a brutal dictator was clearly evident in 1991...(actually before that but he was our guy back then.)  cnn's "revelation" was a non-story....except for those that see rivera's mistake as fair and balanced.

another fox example ..  a fox anchor was taking a (liberal) guest to task for supporting some actor or actress that had spoken out against the war.....this guy said who were THEY (actors!!!)  to question the administration.......i had to laugh...the guy with the outrage was brian kilmeade....the sports guy on foxand friends.   the weather guy must have been on break ;-) peace,

mark

Since they put on ``The Swede'' and Perfect Paul and followons, there's hardly any point to listening to NWS.  I used to listen for hours just to hear the really entertaining announcers.   One fellow for years and years gave the farm report saying ``foilage'' instead of ``foliage'' and of course that repeated every three minutes for those years.  It was great.

I have only a few sad remnants saved on disk.  I could have really used RealEncoder in the 80s.
These are from the late 90s, last of a breed.

There was a real market for this and NOAA was wrong to eliminate live announcers instead of selling advertising

Can it really be an A/B comparison when you can't listen to the same program service on both Sirius and XM?  Or maybe you did?  You don't say.

Being #1 in cable ratings is "narrow-casting"?

Finally???? Rush Limbaugh has been ridiculing the "liberal" line for more than a decade, followed close behind (in time) by dozens of Rush wannabes.

Bob Grant in New York is going on, I believe, his 23rd year of not-very-liberal talk. I believe Joe Pyne in the 60's wasn't liberal.

I guess time is relative. Compared to the creation of the earth, conservative radio is new.

Don't ever say that in front of Roger Ailes - the boss. He insists they're NOT conservative. They're unbiased. He gets very angry when FOX is portrayed as conservative.

The "disenfranchised right segment" is one of the funniest phrases I've heard in a long time. They got where they are by being show biz. Glitzy. Lots of puff. Chatty. It's as though they hired every TV consultant in the business.

It's even beginning to rub off on the broadcast media. WNBC-TV just changed their news set and graphics. It looks like LSD is as popular as ever.

Your right!
It would be unlikely that anyone could have the exact same song on both units..... I can however switch back and fourth quickly but the songs are not the same.....

But randomly sampling at different times of day or night with different songs on each one each time we compare, I would think that once in a while it would be lopsided.... But I cant tell any noticable difference either way, anytime....

What I mean is lets say if XM was better fidelity than SIRIUS and if Traffic was better fidelity than the Beatles

So if the worse fidelity song was on the better fidelity service when we might interperate that to SOUND THE SAME.....

However, since both services play Traffic and both plays the Beatles (in other words the songs are random on both services) then it would be likely that some times one service would sound better than the other...

I dont hear any significant sound quality differences on them at all.
Typicly they are both very very good... No complaints at all on the sound quality of either one....

There are folks out there that might say one sounds better than the other, I imagine that most of these folks that say that are under the influence of someones advertising propaganda and not an actual comparison....

Does anyone out there have any information on Ken Williams who was a DJ in the years 1975-78 in Johnstown, Pa?  He started at WCRO and moved to WGLU in Johnstown, PA.  There is a group of us looking for old Johnstown, PA DJ'S for a possible reunion.  Also looking for Sister Lori Love, DJ Dana (Mary Ann Verovstik) I think she may be in

Atlanta, GA, Jim DiAngelilo (Rev. Jim). We know where Jack Micheals, DJ Kelly, and few others are. Any help with this would be great.
Would love to set up a spin night reunion.

Thanks

Becky

Agreed

I like my TX9500 and my DX-398 but SW is getting a little to religious for me LOL
$10 a month is what i pay to stay in several CD borrowing libraries, a better value in my opinion.
I just spent $5 at my goodwill to get a box of 100 Lp's mostly trash i agree, but better waste of time and money than subscription radio.

By the way, I have spent some time in San Antonio, nice place to be, I want to retire to Texas someday and get a big 'ol cattle ranch, with no cows!

Fun

He probably assumed that you (1) had an RF modulator to connect your XM receiver to a car FM radio -- those often have their output at 89.1 MHz -- and (2) were still tuned to a local FM station, not the RF modulator signal.

Depends on where you live. If CC controls radio in your city, as it does in so many areas, crap is what you get. Of course, most of the content on XM is on AM/FM somewhere.

Why you'd want to support CC by signing up with their XM product (admittedly, they don't own ALL of XM, but still) doesn't make sense to me. I try to avoid everything CC. Their hourly commercial count and other business practices are very anti-consumer.

XM needs better programming (I don't need more channels; but considering AM/FM has at least 40-50 in most areas; maybe that too) to get my $10, and they REALLY need to stop taping/voicetracking stuff as does AM/FM. It sounds BORING. My opinion.

I may have a list of some of us buried in a carton in a closet. You might want to root around the Penn State website to find alumni veterans of WHR and WDFM who went on to stations elsewhere, as many stepped through stations in the area -- especially Altoona and also through Cary Simpson's Allegheny Mountain network (WGMR, WTRN, WBLF, WKBI, WEND, WNBT etc). Cary is still active in broadcasting -- you might contact him through the WTRN website. I think he knows everyone who worked in broadcasting in the entire commonwealth from the early 1950s on <g>.

I've read the reviews, too; the comments printed are bought and paid for.

The minority opinion is that of the defensive XM subscribers, still trying to justify the waste of money. Anyone with any sense doesn't bother with pay radio! Who wants to listen to consultant-selected music in "near CD quality" (with all the compression artifacts) when they can play any music they want and have true CD quality?

OTOH, Margaret should lose the html for posting on UseNet, and this has nothing to do with shortwave radio.

Does anyone know how much Associate Producer and Assistant Producer jobs get at the top market NPR affiliates? The application asks for salary requirements and i don't want to overshoot their expectations...
thanks!

According to http://www.xmradio.com/skyfi/ , this is a possible mode of operation.

I wonder what mode of operation is actually being used.

Interesting.  I'd certainly like to know what it is specifically that you like about XM as compared to AM/FM.  Based on what I've read about direct satellite broadcasting, it would not seem to offer much to me to justify its expense.  What am I missing?

BTW, is the data stream a proprietary digital protocol, or is it mp3?

No, you won't find a lot of what XM plays on your local FM airwaves. There's 100 channels, over 40 of which are 100% commercial Free. The idea is laughable! I've been exposed to more new music in the last year with my XM systems than I have in the last 10 years listening to FM. In particular, I love the World Music channel, the decades channels, and all the good rock channels. Plus radio theater, detective stories from Imagination Theater in Seattle (Harry nile and Sherlock Holmes) and uncesored comedy.

Clear Channel is an investor, yes. But GM is the majority shareholder, not Clear Channel. Furthermore, Clear Channel's main involvement in XM (just like Inifinity is involved in Sirius) is to provide content. THe Bill Handle Show, John and Ken Show, Phil Hendrie, Bruce Williams, Coast to Coast AM etc...all Clear Channel content.

The McDonald's argument. It may be pap, but you get the same pap all over the US, whether there are local radio stations or not. There are lots of places in the Midwest and great lakes region where reception options get thin.

(1) The benefits of satellite transmission. If you live in cities like San Diego, mobile terrestrial audio reception is for crap because there is no such thing as line-of-sight or anything vaguely like it that works all over San Diego county. This is violently different than what happens in say, Wayne county MI where terrestrial line-of-sight is reasonably universal. OTOH as far south as San Diego, you have line-of-sight to equatorial satellites at a fairly steep incline all over the place. Again, it's the opposite of what it is as far north as Detroit. Pacific Northwest? Could be iffy.

(2) The benefits of diversity transmission and reception. XM satellite transmission can be augmented with multiple terrestrial transmitters. Whether or not XM is satellite or terrestrial where you live is transparent to you. It just works.

http://www.codingtechnologies.com/news/assets/20020418_XMradio_eng.pdf

"XM is able to deliver its superior sound quality coast-to-coast by using two of the most powerful commercial satellites ever built, augmented by a nationwide network of more than 800 repeaters in 70 cities,the most extensive SDARS repeater network available."

> BTW, is the data stream a proprietary digital protocol, or is it mp3?

It's very proprietary and enciphered, but somewhat based on AAC. All 100 or so stereo programs appear to be more-or-less interleaved in the data stream. More detail in the reference, above.

No, you won't find a lot of what XM plays on your local FM airwaves. There's 100 channels, over 40 of which are 100% commercial Free. The idea is laughable! I've been exposed to more new music in the last year with my XM systems than I have in the last 10 years listening to FM. In particular, I love the World Music channel, the decades channels, and all the good rock channels. Plus radio theater, detective stories from Imagination Theater in Seattle (Harry nile and Sherlock Holmes) and uncesored comedy.

Clear Channel is an investor, yes. But GM is the majority shareholder, not Clear Channel. Furthermore, Clear Channel's main involvement in XM (just like Inifinity is involved in Sirius) is to provide content. THe Bill Handle Show, John and Ken Show, Phil Hendrie, Bruce Williams, Coast to Coast AM etc...all Clear Channel content.

Why would XM provide crappy service and content when the customer's alternative is free FM? The answer? They don't. You were confused when he told you to tune to 89.1. I deal with idiot computer users like you all the time who don't know what question to ask and how to ask it, hell, most of the time, they can't even define the problem.

BUT SARGE, you said all the guys that answered "can't answer what a decibel is."

I say THEY DID!
THEY WERE RIGHT!!!

If you had payed a bit of attention back in elementary school you might have noticed that when your teacher showed you the DICTIONARY that many words have SEVERAL DEFINITIONS!!

And just cause it was not the answer YOU WANTED does not make them wrong!

You must be new here if you think I have thin skin.
http://www.teamrocs.com/crap/newbie.htm
Are you new here???

I been here pissin folks off with facts since 1994 or so...ha ha ha

Keep em comin, I dont even have a killfile!

For a long time I did laboratory instrumentation consulting and building special instruments.  In a large percentage of cases my job was trying to define the problem.  Once their problem was defined, many people could solve it themselves.  My customers were lab-type PhD physicists and chemists, but that didn't mean they could define an instrumentation problem.

Got the Jensen SR2000 hooked up to a FM modulator and cover all the FM radios in my house and most of my neighborhood with any channel I select. Most of young people enjoy Sirius channel 66 The beat. Hooking it up was simple. Just be sure to place the Sirius antenna on at least a 2ft x 2ft sheet of metal (which acts as a ground plane) and mount it facing the southern sky.

Why should a Sirius antenna "face the southern sky"?  One of the satellites is over northern Hudson's Bay when the other active sat is either over the southern Caribbean or off the SW coast of Mexico.

Four hours later both active Sirius satellites are colocated over the Dakotas. The third is over southern South America at that time [and turned off].

I'd say there is __NO__ preferred direction to point a Sirius antenna.

Any opinions on this puppy? How it might compare to the ol' R-390A, JRD-525 or YB 400PE.
I apologize in advance if this question doen't fit here.

How so?  The above-referenced comments are subjective opinions, not fact as the original poster claims.  What is it that you think I should be looking

There is probably a shortwave group that will give you a better answer. Try Groups.Google.com .

Remember that the DSP is done at 12 kHz.  This means that the RX-320 doesn't excel at its widest IF/audio bandwidth. Of course it doesn't have FM.

That said, I think it's an amazing radio. Ten-Tec believes in being open about their products, so you can get various 3rd-party control programs in to addition the one Ten-Tec supplies.

You can now send your old RX-320 to Ten-Tec and they will bring out the 12 kHz IF.  Feed this into a sound card and run s/w now available and you have a DRM receiver.  IIRC, they charge $50 for this mod.

None of the other radios you mention will do DRM.

If you don't need portability, I'd guess the RX-320 is far better than the YB-400.

The R-390 is large and a bit clunky.  The commercial Collins radios of that period weren't wonderful in respect to spurious responses.  And you can spend a Big Bundle on IF filters for the 390.  The 390 may be more sensitive than the TenTec above 20 or so MHz.

I don't know anything concrete about the 525.

FOR THE MONEY, the RX-320 is outstanding.  They also sell a radio which is essentially a 320 with a front panel.

Wake up Paul,

IT IS A FACT THAT I CANNOT TELL THE DIFFERENCE BY LISTENING!
(in an A/B test)

It may also be my opinion they sound the same,  but that doesnt change the FACT that I CANT TELL THE DIFFERENCE BY LISTENING!

Geez,
get the dictionary out man!!!
Words MEAN something,  and for your proper understanding of what the words could mean it is important that you pay attention to them and realize that even in a dictionary there could be several meanings....   FACTS and OPINIONS both have wonderfull meanings,  and just because I used one does not mean I did not use another!   A sentence or paragraph CAN HAVE my opinion and ALSO state some FACTS!

I would rather argue the techical aspects of the SIRIUS vs XM as this thread is titled, than the elementary school crap that some of you guys scrape off the bottom of the barrel cause thats ALL YA GOT!!!

I'm curious to hear how local radio stations did in their coverage of this devastating outbreak. It came to mind last night, "how the heck are these people getting critical information on life threatening weather situations if CC, etc., has no staffs at these stations"?

I think if there are enough failures, (such as CC stations sitting in normal programming) we may be able to bombard the FCC and demand that they limit corporate ownership or mandate local programming guidelines.

I think if CC, etc. can own all these stations, they should at least SERVE and INFORM their communities during times such as this. Sitting on the bird while a tornado rips the county apart is inexcusable and that should be grounds for revocation of the license, IMO.

While you and I may be near a coast, not everyone has an "opposite" coast.

The southeastern Caribbean is _east_ of much of the US east coast, thus you wouldn't want to aim west.  The eastern Caribbean islands are directly south of Nova Scotia and Bermuda. That is where each active Sirius sat is located once in its orbit.

Since the elevation angle of the active Sirius sats is always above 45 deg, _up_ still seems to be the best way to aim for them.

Find a radio ham who is interested in the ham satellites and who has a copy of the NOVA software.  Plug in the Sirius orbital elements.  It's quite revealing.

As has been posted before on this newsgroup, to the point where it's really getting old, the FCC is not the culprit.  Ownership limits are set by Congress.  As for programming, there's that pesky little thing known as the First Amendment that would get in the way.

>Sitting on the bird while a tornado rips the county apart is inexcusable and that should be grounds for revocation of the license, IMO.<

Yes, it's inexcusable...but if it's true, NO FCC rules have been violated. If you want to stop this, petition the FCC to get its rules changed...which will happen, in this particular case, when pigs fly.

EAS was designed from the get-go to be implemented at unattended stations, and if the stations so desired, and were actually on the air during the tornados, they could have automatically rebroadcast tornado warnings without any human intervention.  Doing so is not rocket science.

Amazing how much time is taken up here by people getting angry about something that may not have taken place.  But, then, we expect nothing less from the hate-Clear-Channel-at-all-costs crowd.

I imagine in that trail of destruction that the power grid took one hell of a beating just from the storm gusts and lightning alone, not to mention the damage by tornadoes. I'd think there are many, many miles of lines down. All of the videos I've seen show really bad damage, and a hell of a lot of it.

That's a good point for generators. It used to be that even many smaller stations had generators, but I don't know if that's true or not. At least most medium to large stations I worked at did and a couple small ones did as well.

In that kind of scenario, there are a lot of reasons to want local coverage in your community:

-Informing the community of the extent of damage
-Inform then of dangerous conditions, such as gas leaks
-Spread the word of where people's help might be needed
-Keep the community abreast of any additional weather threats

I would also think that if the town's radio station is down, being able to throw a 1 watt FM on the air simply to maintain communication with the public without fear of imprisonment would be a nice thought as well.

I have to say that a portable scanner is far better than a regular radio for keeping ahead of the storm and abreast of the situation. Its a pity that everyone doesn't own one though.

That doesn't mean others couldn't tell the difference.  It is your opinion.
Someone else could listen to the same thing and hear something different.
Your hearing is not the the standard of measurement for all of humanity.  I Generally tornado tragedies, in addition to being great entertainment, produce documentary evidence for another increase in NOAA's budget.

And of course bright-eyed and bushy-tailed radio types are out with the herd thinking how important they are, if only people would notice.

It makes you long for the good old days, when the weekly paper headlined the situation ``That Was a Good One!'' when it came out again.

That was back when news was news.

How true...
However, I have been in the audio biz for nearly 30 years and have had my share of setting up A/B tests...
I woud bet that most of the folks out there would not be able to tell if I cant tell... ;-)

Of course I would encourage you to try! ya never know....

In fact, the whole point of my getting involved in this thread in the first place was to encourage folks to LISTEN and form thier own judgements on which system is better for them! And not believe the idiots that say (with no A/B comparisons) that one sounds better than the other!

Too many folks buy an XM and blindly clain it sounds better!
Too many folks buy a SIRIUS and blindly claim it sounds better!
Too few folks have the opportunity to compare both!

> It is your opinion.

No, its FACT that I cannot tell the sound quality difference by listening in my own vehicle or our store display while switching back and fourth from Sirius to XM.... It is FACT that other folks have experienced the same thing on my system and our store display as well.

IT IS MY OPINION, that most folks that have not already listened to my vehicle or the store systems would not be able to point out a significant difference either.... You welcome to come take a listen though! ;-)

Could be, Maybe! nothings impossible ya know! ;-)
But would you wanna bet???

No, but it is the standard for ME.... Just as yours is the reference for yourself.

I work for 6 CC stations, and that is the rule. After 6PM all are "empty morgues"! Totally pitiful situation too. The bottom line is ALL they care about.  We had dead air many times, because snow on the sat dish! They may say they care, but they don't. The monthly billing is ALL they care about.

I'm looking for airchecks from any stations that carried the Z-Rock satellite feed, esp. from 1992-1996, scoped or unscoped. Bonus points for any from 102.7 WDZR FM in Detroit, Michigan.

Personally, I have no idea.  I used TV.  And the automatic NWS weather radio.  Everyone should have one of the new SAME radios, the ones that key on the EAS data bursts and go off only for those counties you program.

I'm not in the habit of using radio for local information.  I find the one-sided politics of the commercial talk stations offensive, and can't stand to listen for more than a few seconds.  It's not at all impossible that they actually did a very good job on the weather.  (it's also not at all impossible they did a very bad job..)

The NPR station doesn't have much local news presence.  I do listen to music stations but they're pretty much useless for severe weather info.

Disclaimer: I work for a TV station.

I did my comparison in what is probably the worst place in the world to judge audio: a Wal Mart store. Even there, I could tell a difference. Both receivers were connected to identical Pioneer receivers, and they used the same speakers. I checked to make sure the EQ settings were the same on both receivers. My conclusion was the Sirius sounded a bit better, but it had a terrible user interface. The Sirius unit I listened to had a hand held device that looked like a CB radio mic. It was very slow to respond to changes. The XM Delphi receiver was very nice to use with a good user interface. It would be much easier todeal with at 70 mph.

The XM unit sounded OK, but I preferred the sound of the Sirius receiver. Of course there was no way to do a direct A-B comparison with the same music playing on both units, so my observation, like all other ones is subjective.

I admit that Sirius had more programming that interested me than XM which seemed to be more in line with programming I can already get for free off the air. I guess my musical tastes are not entirely mainstream.

Regardless of sound quality, I really haven't had the urge to buy either one.

Hi. I get 1 FM radio station where I work. The building I work in a very large even though it is only 1 story high. Many of us have radios at our desks, but we only pull in 1 FM radio station. We really don't care about the AM stations, but would rather have more of a selection of FM stations, there are many out there if you are in the car.

Since we don't get any other stations, my question is, are there any options out there to rebroadcast the FM radio signals from outside to smaller transmitters inside the building. I don't think the company would go for large antennas on everyone's desk, so I am looking for a small "gadget" that would work for everyone. Anyone have any ideas?

Thanks,
Chris

I'll have to look into that... do you have any urls???

Some stations I've heard really make me wonder just who is allegedly the target listening audience. I sure wouldn't listen to it, and can't think of many who would. Now that's messed up.

> The NPR station doesn't have much local news presence.  I do listen to music stations but they're pretty much useless for severe weather info.

That's always been the case pretty much. Public stations have pretty much always been notoriously dependant on network programming.

In our area, we have WWJ, which is great for breaking news and weather, but most of the local radio stations are behind by ten minutes. The AM's are all on birds and 1/2 the FM's are VT'ed. Fortunately, we still have a few live stations with coverage relevant to the area. But I know, in the heartland especially, this is not the case. Most local stations there have been scarfed up by large corporations and are now running unattended.

It can be aruged that EAS will automatically break in, corporate can switch to local TV audio, etc., but that assumes everything is working correctly. A human can always improvise around malfuntions and such, but a relay clicks the same whether there's a source feeding it or not.

I'm starting to really understand the pirate radio movement more than ever. It's a waste that most LPFM's are only going to be adding more religion to the dial, which has plenty now. Most who wanted LPFM licenses have an actual desire to serve their communities, but were turned down in favor of church groups.

> Disclaimer: I work for a TV station.

TV has been the winner over radio for decades IMO. But you'll still find a few stations that are just as useless as unattended radio.

This is a very complex and expensive task to do.

This would be the cheapest and best possibility.
Think about to install a community antenna on the top of this building.

In stuctures built of concrete and steel, the windows are the principal sources of radio signals from the outside. You need to put your radio (or its antenna) closer to a window.

The best solution would be a single roof-mounted antenna with a splitter feeding all the radios. But I've never seen that done anywhere except at a broadcasting company. Most employers don't value radio reception at their workplaces highly enough to install such things.

I don't suppose the boss is one of the folks interested in better reception?

I'm amused that you find viewpoints other than those of your own "offensive." But do you find the one-sided politics of ABC News, CBS News, CNN, and NBC News offensive as well?   Radio talk shows are generally commentary shows and present themselves as such up front.  They make no attempt to hide their bias.  These major networks on the other hand, present themselves as "hard news" and objective reporting.  Yet such icons as Dan Rather and Peter Jennings frequently inject their own strong bias to their "news".  CNN finally admits that it omitted horrifying stories on Iraq for 12 years (even involving its own employees) so that they could stay close to Baghdad to parrot the Hussein regime.

> The NPR station doesn't have much local news presence.

NPR, now there's a true place to find non one-sided politics, lol. All things considered, except conservative. And government funded to broadcast their one-sided politics to boot.

If someone in your company is technically inclined, you may be able to use a small low-powered transmitter to rebroadcast the signals from the outside world within the building. The drawback is that it would only work with one station at a time, but I suppose you could run multiple flea-powered transmitters, each one tuned to a local station unrecievable inside the building.

I remember hearing Rush Limbaugh reading a letter from a listener who said they had done that so everybody in a building could hear his program.  They called it the "Rush Repeater".  Of course he thought it was cool.
Of course there's always streaming audio from the internet, but I'm guessing company policy forbids that, with bandwidth issues and all that...

I've been looking online for a few weeks and have found nothing. I've found schematics for a lot of other gear, but these evade me. Can someone please upload one to the schematics binary group???

Try a better radio?  I've experimented and found an old Casio boombox that was better than the others. It beat out a GE Superradio and a Sony table top.

I had some luck with inductively coupling the radio to the phone cord by wrapping the radio antenna with the phone cord (the Superadio).

What is it,
as in what does decibel mean, or what does one decibel equate to?

the word decibel means one 10th of a BEL (named from Alexander Graham Bell)

One Decibel is usually the amount of sound change that is just perceptable by a human with good hearing under ideal circumstances.. Like a hearing test....

Is this what your looking for?

Playing music is not original product.  Music can be purchased in stores or downloaded for free from Kazaa.  People buy cable or satellite television because they get product that is unique and not available elsewhere.  You can't buy CNN, FOX News or the Weather Channel at Wal-Mart.

Maybe after paying $120 - $300 a year for internet service, $240 - $720 a year for cable, $240 - $600 a year for cellular, etc., maybe $127.75 a year for a radio service that is primarily not unique is just one bill too much for many people.

Psychoacoustic codecs want to see something that resembles natural sound. The more processing one applies, the more the sound will diverge from what the codec's designers envisioned, and the more mistakes it will make.

The rule I have always followed is to process no more than is necessary.

And you are going to take Drudge's spin on them?  How about analyzing those numbers...instead of taking them off of a web site of someone with an ax to grind.

Well, I'm sick of talking to you, but just to clear the air, I don't work for Sirius.  I am an IT admin and an engineer in the Northwest.  I got on this kick after deciding I really only wanted one of the two satellite services in my car, so I decided to look on Google to see if anyone had the goods on which was better.  I found next to nothing as far as a review went, so I set about making one myself.  Yes, a friend and I did get those meters out to test what I could to see where the difference was coming from, and yes, you are a dick for insinuating otherwise.  I appreciated the challenge at fist, but now you're just being stupid.  Ask some real questions so this thread doesn't go to pot - it was getting pretty cool, and it would be great to hear even more opinions, don't you think?

So, your now telling us that you and a buddy got out the decibel meters and set up your car so that XM and SIRIUS were exactly the same level.???

What did you use for a reference signal?

If I were to do level match something in my lab I would choose something like a 1k tone and with that it would be fairly easy to adjust both sources to be equal...

But I was not aware that SIRIUS or XM had any reference tones that could be accessed by an end user such as yourself.. I would imagine it would even be hard to have XM and SIRIUS to play the same song !  So how on earth did you accuratly set up a decibel meter in your car to make sure the output level of

XM and SIRIUS were the same???    Playing music the dB meter would be jumping all over the place and not of much value....!!!

So I would find a decibel meter nearly useless for that, I would simply adjust the levels by ear...

This is why your claim of using a decibel meter sounds so far fetched to me...

Its also why I still believe that any difference you say you heard between the XM and SIRIUS were likely to be SIGNAL LEVEL differences and not actually sound quality differences...!!   (your not a very good liar)

And now, when I call you on it you tell me your SICK OF TALKING TO ME!
HA HA HA

Alot of folks get that sick feeling when they are caught in a lie...
HA HA HA

Sorry to bust your chops, but my SIRIUS sounds great and my XM sounds great as well... One is not noticably better than the other!

Your review was a good idea, but you have to try to stay with FACTS.

See ya - better luck next time.....

James and Paul, chill out before I am forced to pull out my referee's whistle, willya? (I know that doesn't sound like much of a threat, but it tends to hurt when I throw the whistle at people. :P)

Everyone else: rec.radio.broadcasting is moderated, so all of the flames in this thread get dumped in my mailbox for review before they have a chance to make it to Usenet, and I have the opportunity to post or not post stuff as I see fit. If you have a problem with that, please feel free to continue to post to all of the other newsgroups referenced in this post except rec.radio.broadcasting. I don't have a lot of rules here in RRB, but I don't generally allow flamefests to escalate.

With warmest regards,
  Ye Olde Newsgroupe Moderator

Marion Lignana Rosenberg reports:

I'm once again emerging from lurkdom to urge you to sample WHRB's offerings: this time, Spring 2003 Orgy(r) Period. People in the Boston area can set their radio dials to 95.3 FM; those of us outside Boston can punch up <http://www.whrb.org/>. (Full disclosure: I'm an alumna.)

The major broadcasts of Spring 2003 Orgy(r) Period are:
May 6, 19h00 (to May 9, 19h00): Sergei Prokofiev
May 11, 22h00 (to May 14, 15h00): Paul Hindemith

Other highlights include:
May 5, 13h00: Henri Dutilleux
May 11, 8h30: Ivo Pogorelich
May 15, 10h00: Don Carlo Gesualdo
May 24, 16h00: Johann Nepomuk Hummel
May 25, 12h30: Erich Kleiber
May 25, 23h00: Charles-Valentin Alkan
May 26, 13h00: Yuri Bashmet

Especially noteworthy:
June 1, 12h30: approximately twelve hours of broadcasts commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's coronation, including British musicals and ballads, Goon Show highlights, and the coronation ceremony itself (recorded in Westminster Abbey on June 2, 1953)

June 8, 19h00: preview of the Boston Early Music Festival, with live, in-studio performances and giveaways

Complete listings are available at <http://www.whrb.org/pg/MayJun2003.html>.

Of particular interest to opera-l: throughout the summer, WHRB will be presenting live-by-tape opera performances from Europe. Details are available at <http://whrb.org/pg/Summer2003.pdf>.

An all-volunteer station broadcasting from the basement of a freshman dormitory at Harvard, WHRB is (sadly) something of a giant among classical broadcasters in the United States these days. WHRB is home to the Metropolitan Opera in Boston, and its "Sunday Night at the Opera" broadcast is one of the longest-running opera programs in the United States. WHRB is one of the last U.S. stations presenting substantial amounts of classical vocal music, historic recordings, and music of the 20th and 21st centuries. Outstanding WHRB staffers of the past include Martin Bookspan, Dale Harris, Igor Kipnis, John Rockwell, and Alex Ross.

WHRB welcomes feedback: <mail@whrb.org>. Again, since the staff is unpaid, listeners' messages of praise and constructive criticism are gratefully received, and also help WHRB in its advertising and promotional efforts. (WHRB pays its own way and receives no support whatsoever from the university.)

Buon ascolto!

My problem with Sirius (and XM) is that there are only a couple of channels I'd ever listen to, so the $/channel per month is a little bit steep.

How the hell did I get roped into this?! All I did was respond to a question about the definition of a decibel. It's not my fault he happened to use my post to respond to Eddie's.

The answer about the "barely perceptible change in loudness" is correct.  In addition, mathematically, 1 decibel is approximately a 25% change in the power level of an electrical signal.  Thus, one and a quarter watts of power into a speaker is about 1 decibel more than one watt.  Radio transmitters and receivers are often spec'ed in dB, but it's RF power, not audio.  (Cable TV spec is different  -- let's don't go there.)

A three dB change in power is a doubling (or halving) of power;  a 10 dB change is a change by a factor of 10, either up or down.  Voltage and current have their own scales but I don't want to write a textbook here.

You're entitled to your opinion, I guess. Jerry Williams and I did not like each other. I used him as a Bob Grant replacement and had to remove him from the network during a show. He was furious (as I would have been) and accused me of trying to destroy his career.

However, in his prime, Jerry was one of the best talk show hosts in the business. I don't need to like someone to grant them their due. I'm sorry to lose him.

Hello out there!! In the 60's i always taped the WMEX WooWoo  (& other DJ's) programs, but lost them over the years. Other than the 1 album that is out (1961?) with Arnie Ginsburg/WMEX, is there anyone out there that has any tapes that they personally made, like i did? This is just for personal/nostalgia use, & is not part of any diabolical scheme. I just want to reminisce by being able to listen to some of it again. Can anyone help? My sincere thanks!!....Jerry (jermyrauto@att.net).   PS...i understand that Arnie is still around, & living up in Maine. Does anyone know how i might be able to contact him? Again....THANK YOU!!!

Ah. Everybody but Sid, apparently. Seriously, he dropped off the face of the earth in the late 80's or early 90's, I think. I was shocked to hear he was still alive, and the reaction I got from a couple of other people was invariably the same. "Jerry Williams died? Geez, I thought he'd died ages ago!" He was big for a little while, but, hey, the guy wasn't Brudnoy or anything.

We used average readings for a variety of similar music, yielding a loudness range which, all other parameters being equal, gave us some gauge of what level of signal was being amplified.  Agreed, we did not compare exactly the same song.

Man, you're rude.  What the hell is your problem?  If you're so damn interested, quit screwing around and post your own review instead of wasting everyone's time trying to pick mine apart.  Jeez.

Do you work for XM?

IMO, that is the wrong criterion.

Maybe a better one would be whether you can find what you want on [Sirius/XM] any time you want to listen.  I don't need to be torn between three or ten channels I like. I just want to be pretty sure of finding at least one I like any time I listen.

OTOH, I can grant that sat radio may not be aimed at ___your___ interests.
